Lieut.-Col. Roosevelt Tells How Americans Went Into First Battle

Cantigny, Chateau-Thierry and St. Mihiel Operations Give Several American Divisions First Taste of War and Enable Them to Cover Themselves With Glory.

This is the third installment of selections from a series of articles written by Lieutenant-Colonel Roosevelt on the war as he saw it. This series will appear later in book form with the title, "Average Americans in Olive Drab."

By Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt Jr.

BY the end of March we were veteran troops. All during the latter part of the month rumor had been rife about the proposed German drive. After nearly four years of war, Germany had crushed Russia, Rumania, Belgium, Serbia, Montenegro and Albania, had dealt Italy a staggering blow, and was about to assume the offensive in France. On March 28 the blow fell, the allied line staggered and split and the Germans poured through the gap.

The news reached us and at the same time came orders to prepare for an immediate move. Immediately after this, the Twenty-sixth American Division moved up in our rear, and with hardly any time for reconnaissance, they took over from us. My battalion moved out and marched 12 kilometers to the rear, the last units checked in to where our trains were to meet us at about 5 a. m., and by 6 a. m. we were on the march again to the vicinity of Toul, where the division was concentrating.

Here we were told that we were to be thrown into the path of the German advance. By this time all types of rumor were current.

When we took over the Montdidier sector it was not, and never did become, the type found in the parts of the front where warfare had been going on without movement for more than three years. Trenches were shallow and scanty, and dugouts were almost lacking. Indeed, from this time on, with one exception, the division never held an established sector. The line at Montdidier had been established shortly after the break through by the Germans, by a French territorial division which was marching north, expecting to relieve some friendly troops in front of it. They suddenly encountered headon the German columns that were marching south. Both sides deployed, went into position and dug in where they were. The First Division took over from these troops.

In Montdidier Sector.

The first morning we were in the Montdidier sector the Huns shelled us heavily. Immediately after they raided a part of our front line held by a platoon of D Company, commanded by Lieut. Dabney, a very good fellow from Louisville, Ky. The Germans were repulsed with loss. We suffered no casualties ourselves except from the German bombardment. The next evening we picked up the German Sergeant commanding the party, whom we had killed.

We staged a very successful raid ourselves at about this time. The raiding party was composed of 85 men of D Company, under the command of Lieut. Freml. The section of German trenches selected as the objective of the operation lay in a little wood about 100 yards from our front line. Our patrols had reported that this part of the German line was particularly heavily held. In the first light of the half dawn the raiding party worked up into position, passing by through the mist like black shadows. At the agreed time our artillery came down with both the heavies and the 75s and the patch of woods was enveloped in clouds of smoke through which the bursts of the H. E. showed like flashes of lightning. In five minutes the guns lifted and formed a box barrage, and the raiding party went over. So rapid was the whole maneuver that the German defensive barrage did not come down until after the raiding party had reached the enemy trenches. The German trenches were found as had been expected, full of Germans. Most of them were in dugouts or funk holes, and did not make a severe resistance.

"Come out of there," the man in charge of the particular detail for that part of the trench would call down the dugout. If the Huns came out they were taken prisoner. If they did not a couple of incendiary grenades were thrown down the dugout and our men moved on. We captured in all 35 prisoners, of whom one was an officer, and probably killed and wounded as many more. Our losses were one killed and five slightly wounded. Unfortunately the one man killed was Lieut. Freml, the raid leader, who fell in a hand-to-hand combat. Freml was an old regular army Sergeant and had fought in the Philippine Islands. After this war he was planning to return and keep a chicken farm. He always kept his head no matter what the circumstances were and his solutions for situations that arose were always practical. His men were devoted to him and would follow him anywhere.

The Cantigny Operation.

The men returned in high excitement and fine spirits.

It was in this (Montdidier) sector that the First Division staged the first American attack when the town of Cantigny was taken. The attack was made by the Twenty-eighth Infantry. My battalion, although not actually engaged in the assault, was in support and took over the extreme right of the line after the assault. It also helped in repelling counter-attacks delivered by the Germans and in consolidating the position.

The Cantigny operation was a success. We took and held the town, or rather the spot where the town had been, for it would be an exaggeration to say it was even a ruin. It was literally beaten flat. This piece of land had seen the German invaders for the last time. We learned a valuable lesson also, namely, not to make the disposition of the men too thick. In this operation we did, and this and the fact that our objective was necessarily limited in depth caused us casualties, as the enemy artillery was not reached and opened on us before we had time to dig in and consolidate the position we had taken.

Chateau-Thierry Drive.

During this period the German Chateau-Thierry drive was made, and again they made a clean break through. The Second Division, which was coming up in our rear to relieve us, was switched and thrown in front of them. Shortly after the Hun attacked the town of Compiegne, in an endeavor to straighten out the re-entrant in their lines with its apex at Soissons. This latter attack passed by on our right flank.

Our troops had now begun to arrive in France in large numbers. It took more than a year after the commencement of the war before this was effected. The inability of our national administration to bring itself to the point where is considered patriotism as above politics was largely responsible for this. Every move forward toward the active pushing of the war was the result of the pressure of the people on Washington. When I say that our troops were coming across in large numbers let it be borne in mind that though the men did come, munitions and weapons of war did not. The Browning automatic rifle, for example, to my mind one of the greatest weapons developed by the war, was invented in the United States in the summer of 1917. When the war finished it had just been placed for the first time in the hands of a limited number of our divisions; my division, the First, never had them until a month after the armistice. We used the old French chauchat, a very inferior weapon. None of our airplanes had come and the death of many of our young men was directly traceable to this as they, of necessity, used inferior machines. Our cannon was and remained French, our ammunition was French. Our troops were at times is-

“WHAT THE TOILER DEMANDS AND INTENDS TO GET”

BY SAMUEL GOMPERS,

President of the American Federation of Labor.

Let Those Who Think Organized Labor Will Not Get What It Wants Contemplate the Achievements It Has Already Scored, He Says, and Remember That It Seeks Only What Is Just.

This is the first of two articles on the American labor outlook written by Mr. Gompers who has just returned from the international labor conference at Copenhagen. The second: "We Face a New World; What Are We Going to Do?" will be published in the Post-Dispatch next Sunday.

By SAMUEL GOMPERS.

THERE is a legend of ancient Rome that while the capitol was building there came one day to the tyrannical king, Tarquin the Proud, a poor old woman, carrying nine books of prophecies of the Sibyl, which she offered to sell for three hundred pieces of gold. The king mockingly drove her away. She went, but after burning three of the books she returned and asked the same price for the remaining six. Again refused with scorn, she retired, burnt three more of the volumes, and then came back demanding the same sum for the three which were left. The amazed king consulted his wise men, who told him that the nine books, six of which had been lost, contained the fate of the city and the Roman people.

So labor presents its message to the world. Happily, all that was contained in the nine books remains for the world in the last three. Happily, too, the world has decided that in these books there is that which ought to be read. So the world is reading today—reading out of the story written by the blood and fiber of human toil. It is a story that tells of injustice and of struggle against injustice; that tells of the first man who dared raise his head and protest against the lash; that tells of the first banding together of men so that they might combine their strength in resistance against a common brutality; that tells of every pain and torture humankind has passed through in its ceaseless panorama of toil and hope, disappointment and disillusionment, aspiration and achievement, down to today.

Today is a new day—for the world is reading out of the books it scorned.

Labor Had to Fight

Employers have not come willingly or readily to see that it is just and right and wise that those who work should have their proper voice in helping to shape and determine the conditions of life and labor. Labor could not merely bring the books, as did the woman to Tarquin the Proud, show them and go away; Labor had to bring the books and fight the fight. But we have come far. By the token of progress made we know more progress is to be made.

It is just a little over 10 years since the scorn, which those who dominated the thought of society felt for the life and rights of labor, was expressed by a United States Judge when, with John Mitchell and Frank Morrison, I received sentence to prison because I dared to print and to speak the protest of labor against injustice. Mr. Mitchell and Mr. Morrison were sentenced to six months' imprisonment, respectively, and I to one year. What we had done was to discuss the merits of a case that was before the courts—the Buck's Stove and Range case.

Carried to the Courts

Back of that event was history made by fighting. The National Association of Manufacturers had taken the position that the organized labor movement must be destroyed. The Anti-Boycott Association was formed. Every pressure that could be mustered against organized labor was brought to bear upon it, including the pressure of suits in the courts to abridge the constitutional rights of the freedom of speech and of the press. That battle was probably the most concentrated effort of employers to break down the fighting spirit and fighting ability of the working people.

The result was that the working people maintained and vindicated their constitutional rights and their right to own themselves and to secure agreement with their employers by collective bargaining; for the purpose of bringing employers to a realization of the fact that they had the right to establish better relations and secure better conditions; they made secure likewise their right to cease work—to strike.

This was but one of the high peaks of a long struggle. There were many hard fights along the road that led finally to the penetration of the minds of great employers, that led to their final understanding of the fact that they had been on the wrong road and that the only way to meet the demands of the workers for full recognition of their rights was to meet them!

> IF there be those whose desire it is to turn back, Labor will resist, and resist to the utmost, every effort they put forth. The safety and well-being of our country and of the world lie in going forward. Never was this as true as it is today. The will of the world is set to go forward. There are among us those whose minds are set upon reaction, it is true. Not in our time will the world be free of those whose creed is reaction. Were we within sight of the promised land itself I verily believe there would be some who would turn their faces to the rear out of fear that some selfish interest would be lost in the brightness of the future.—SAMUEL GOMPERS.

The Danbury Hatters' Case.

A phase of the struggle was the case of the Danbury hatters. Here again the employers rallied to defeat labor in the courts in order to render the workers powerless and helpless in the workshops. The direct result of this case was that labor's long fight for a proper safeguard of its rights was secured in the enactment of the labor provisions of the Clayton law, with its provision that "Labor is not a commodity or article of commerce." Because this law is on our statute books there can never be another Danbury hatters' case. Instead of defeating labor in the hatters' case, the employers, by reason of that case, and by reason of the Clayton law, lost the battle forever.

One by one the barriers to progress went down, opening the way to real democratic procedure, and giving the workers a constantly growing voice in the ordering of their lives through agreements fixing the conditions, the hours and the wages of their work.

Practically a decade passed between the Buck's Stove and Range case and the entry of America into the great war. In no other decade in our history had so much of gain been measured in achievement for mankind. Gradually the concept of labor's status had changed. Gradually labor had been able to gain and hold vital positions.

When, early in 1917, the clouds of war began to become apparent to discerning men, a call was issued from the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor in Washington, asking the officials and leaders of the national and international trade unions to assemble in Washington on March 12. The die had not been cast for war at that date. But the representatives of the great American labor movement then adopted unanimously a declaration that, come peace or come the bitter days of war, there was but one place for labor and that was under the flag, for the flag and with the flag. The words of the conclusion of that declaration will bear repeating, for no expression like it has been uttered in any other land. Thus spoke labor on March 12, 1917:

"We, the officers of the National and International Trade Unions of America in national conference assembled in the capital of our nation, hereby pledge ourselves in peace or in war, in stress or in storm, to stand unreservedly by the standards of liberty and the safety and preservation of the institutions and ideals of our republic.

"In this solemn hour of our nation's life, it is our earnest hope that our republic may be safeguarded in its unswerving desire for peace; that our people may be spared the horrors and the burdens of war; that they may have the opportunity to cultivate and develop the art of peace, human brotherhood and a higher civilization.

"But, despite all our endeavors and hopes, should our country be drawn into the maelstrom of the European conflict, we, with these ideals of liberty and justice herein declared, as the indispensable basis for national policies, offer our services to our country in every field of activity, to defend, safeguard and preserve the republic of the United States of America against its enemies whomsoever they may be, and we call upon our fellow workers and fellow citizens in the holy name of labor, justice, freedom and humanity to devotedly and patriotically give like service."

Labor in True Light.

With this emphatic pronouncement of labor's devotion to the republic, to the great democratic cause of the world, and with other developments that came quickly in those days on the eve of war, and in the days that followed so rapidly when war became a grim and real thing among us, employers everywhere came to see that the American labor movement was something more than had been pictured to them through the prejudiced briefs of their hired lawyers. They came to see it in something of its true light. They came to understand it as one of the great protecting bulwarks of democracy.

Reactionaries Are Combating an Irresistible Mass and Will Be Swept Away Unless They Awake to the Fact That They Must Run With the Tide of the Times—What Democracy Means to Labor.

More than that, they came to see it as a great creator of democracy.

In the declaration of March 12, from which I have just quoted, there were many other paragraphs equally vital. In fact, the document was a complete code, a complete expression of our beliefs, of our faith and of our aims in that crucial hour. One paragraph especially bears significantly upon the trend toward a more general recognition of functions and rights of labor. It reads:

"Finally, in order to safeguard all the interests of the wage earners, organized labor should have representation on all agencies determining and administering policies for national defense. It is particularly important that organized labor should have representatives on all boards authorized to control publicity during war times. The workers have suffered much injustice in war times by limitations upon their right to speak freely and to secure publicity for their just grievances."

Thus, through the change in the minds of men and through the change in our economic and social and political life, as well as through the change in the character and thought of labor itself, labor stepped into the great war abreast of every other factor in our national make-up, a guiding force in the tide of events!

Labor in the War.

History records no other war in which labor helped to mold and execute policy. Beginning with the Council of National Defense and going through almost the whole ramification of the nation's immense war machinery, the men and women of labor sat in council and helped to direct the work of winning the war.

Some critics of the American labor movement have said that it has no definite program, no formula that indicates just where it is going. I know of no more emphatic answer than to point to the road over which we have come in 10 years. I suggest that it shows the direction in which we are going; it shows, moreover, that we are going.

On June 19th, carrying out the spirit of the labor declarations of March 12th, an agreement was entered into between the Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, and myself as the representative of labor. This is the agreement:

"For the adjustment and control of wages, hours and conditions of labor in the construction of cantonments, there shall be created an adjustment commission of three persons, appointed by the Secretary of War; one to represent the army, one the public, and one labor; the last to be nominated by Samuel Gompers, member of the Advisory Commission of the Council of National Defense, and President of the American Federation of Labor.

The Force of the Worker.

"As basic standards with reference to each cantonment, such commission shall use the union scale of wages, hours and conditions in force on June 1, 1917, in the locality where such cantonment is situated. Consideration shall be given to special circumstances, if any, arising after said date which may require particular advances in wages or changes in other standards. Adjustment of wages, hours or conditions made by such board are to be treated as binding by all parties."

On Aug. 10, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels approved the agreement for the United States Navy.

Similar agreements were entered into with the United States Shipping Board and with various Governmental agencies. Under such agreements the great national army cantonments were erected in record time.

One March 29, 1918, the War Labor Conference Board, appointed by the Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson, upon the nomination of the President of the National Industrial Conference Board and the President of the American Federation of Labor, reported to President Wilson a plan for dealing with industrial disputes and issues during the war. President Wilson, by proclamation, then brought the National War Labor Board into official existence, stating that the principles laid down by the War Labor Conference Board were to be the principles guiding the National War Labor Board.

Included in the set of principles was this: "The right of workers to organize and bargain collectively through chosen representatives is recognized and affirmed. This right shall not be

Plea for Expert Care for Our 10,000 Fighters Made Insane by War

Noted Mental Specialist, Who Was at Head of U. S. Neurotic Service in France, Wants to Know if These Victims Are to Be Left to Unexperienced Attaches of Civil Hospitals Who Are Willing to Work for Policeman's Pay—Niggardly Salaries Paid by Uncle Sam Cause of Distressing Prospect,

Dr. Thomas W. Salmon, as a Colonel in the Medical Corps, was senior consultant in neuropsychiatry in the American Expeditionary Forces. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by Gen. Pershing for organizing the work for mental and nervous diseases among American soldiers in France. In civil life, Dr. Salmon is in charge of the work of the Rockefeller Foundation in cental hygiene in New York, and is Medical Director of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene. He is a member of the Interallied Conference on the After Care of Soldiers Disabled in the War and has received the gold medal of the American Institute of Social Science for his researches in the treatment of the insane.

By THOMAS W. SALMON.

AT last the stream of sick and wounded soldiers which had its source in the military hospitals of France and flowed homeward through the ports of Newport News and Hoboken has almost dried up. In a few weeks more it will have ceased. It is now possible to state the extent of that part of the task of caring for the broken in body or in mind which, nine months after the armistice, still remains.

Compared with the terrific losses of our allies our own were mercifully light. Our dead are only a third of the dead of Rumania and less than one-eighteenth those of France. The number of disabled is in proportion. Great Britain has discharged for disability since the beginning of the war more men than were wounded in the A. E. F. during our whole 200 days of fighting, and it must be remembered that of our wounded 85 per cent returned to duty while still in France. On June 30, 1919, there remained under treatment in the military hospitals in the United States only 40,796 soldiers. The number of those who had already been discharged and were under treatment in hospitals of the Public Health Service or elsewhere as beneficiaries of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance was considerably less.

Military Hospitals Closing.

In a little while the military hospitals of the United States will cease their activities on behalf of the sick and wounded of the war. They are required by law to turn over their patients to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance by Sept. 30, and thereafter to care only for soldiers and sailors of the regular establishments. These hospitals, the growth of a few months, but at one time nearly equal in their capacity to all the civil hospitals of the country, have had at their disposal a corps of physicians and surgeons representing the best skill available in the United States. Nurses, reconstruction aids, vocational instructors, dietitians and any other workers who could bring special abilities in any useful field helped in the treatment or reconstruction of the sick and wounded. No necessities or comforts had to be omitted because they were too expensive to procure or because the trained persons to administer them were difficult to obtain.

Now, however, begins a phase in the treatment of disabled soldiers and sailors that will test more searchingly the depth of our sense of obligation to those who won the war for us on the battlefields of France. In a short time the wounded soldier in khaki crossing the street on his crutches and his sick "buddie" sitting in the sun in his wheel chair will disappear from our sight. In their places we shall have disabled men who wear no uniforms to indicate their honorable calling, nor wound chevrons to show how or in what cause their disability was acquired. The hospitals that will care for them will be the civil hospitals maintained by the Public Health Service for the Bureau of War Risk Insurance. The army doctors and nurses will return to their customary duties, and their places must be filled by those to whom the stirring appeal of helping to win the war cannot be made. The American Red Cross and other organizations for individual service will not desert these patients, and the gratitude of the nation will follow them into their new abiding places.

Face New Conditions.

But, to repeat our question, will the deep-seated determination to discharge our sacred duty to these men meet any unexpected obstacles in its transmission under new conditions into terms of care, treatment and environment of hopefulness and cure? Will this last precipitate of the great stream of sick and wounded that has been flowing for nine months from France present any new and more difficult medical and surgical problems? Let us consider the last question first.

The patients who are soon to pass from military hospitals into civil ones will represent very largely the most serious and least curable of all the casualties of the war. The significance of this statement will be appreciated more and more as time goes on. Not a few men with the severest injuries and most serious diseases have died in the military hospitals of this country, many more have been discharged, restored entirely to health and usefulness or afforded as much relief as human skill can give. Nearly all of those yet remaining suffer from conditions that require the healing touch of months or years, the application of unusual skill or attentions continued untiringly long after there is every tendency to tire. Some, by the very nature of their injuries or disorders, can never recover. For them special skill and unremitting care can still do much to relieve suffering and help in filling the days with such sunshine as can be brought to sufferers from incurable disability.

It was a happy thought to entrust the care of discharged men who still require medical and surgical treatment to the Public Health Service. Less well known perhaps, than it should be, that branch of the Government service has a long record of usefulness under its present name and that of the "Marine Hospital Service," by which it is still known in many grateful communities, where its hand has stayed yellow fever or the plague. Medical discoveries of the first order, such as the identification of the American hook-worm and the determination of the cause of pellagra, have been made by its officers. The quarantine that it conducts so vigilantly at home and in infected ports throughout the world has kept our shores free from foreign pestilences when they raged around us. Vaccines and sera of all kinds, imported or manufactured in this country, are pure and safe because of the standardization and rigid inspections established by the Public Health Service laboratory of hygiene. Demonstrations made by service officers in hygiene, especially the control of malarial fevers, have resulted in the saving of thousands of lives and the prevention of an untold amount of chronic and disabling sickness, while even in the remotest settlements in the mountains of Tennessee and Kentucky the Public Health Service has brought practical means of preventing blindness from trachoma to those who seemed quite beyond the reach of the delicate and skillful attention needed to stay their disease and prevent their children and neighbors from contracting it.

Experts Are Resigning.

Such an organization can be counted upon with the utmost confidence to conduct the alchemy of transmitting the gratitude of a great republic into the health, safety and comfort of its disabled defenders.

The experienced and efficient medical personnel of the Public Health Service is just sufficient in numbers to perform many important tasks which had been intrusted to them by Congress prior to the war. To meet the new demands of providing care for all disabled soldiers and sailors this personnel must be reserved for organization, administration and supervision, and the physicians who will conduct the hospitals and carry on the wounded must be obtained elsewhere. It happens that not a few medical officers who are now leaving the army after two years of service can be secured for a further period as reserve officers of the Public Health Service.

Among the soldiers whose honorable discharge will be handed them in a quiet hospital ward instead of the noisy cheerfulness of the demobilization camp is a relatively large group distinguished by such a peculiarly distressing kind of illness and such very special needs that a moment's consideration of them will

Treatment of Private Soldiers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Now that brutality is being exposed in the prison camps of France toward American soldier prisoners, I as an ex-soldier, wish to point out some of the injustices toward the lowest ranking man in the U. S. Army. A private is compelled at all times to show exaggerated respect for an officer, and when spoken to by an officer he must stand like a stick and be as polite and as courteous as if speaking to a lady. Many of the better class of officers speak to a private in the same way but some of the hard boiled, 90-day shavetails speak to and treat a private like a yellow dog. The abuse that a steamboat mate deals out to his roustabouts is mild compared to the abuse a soldier is often subjected to. He is cursed and sworn at and abused and insulted, and he dare not resent it, but like a whipped cur he must grin and bear it. If his self respect should cause him to lose his temper and strike the officer he is thrown in the guard house, courtmartialed and perhaps given a long sentence in Leavenworth penitentiary. When we returned from France we were sent to Camp Lee where a hard boiled Major gave us all to understand that because we had been in France we would not have it easy, but would do as we were told or be made to do it. Many of the boys received wounds in battle which ruined them forever and this is the reception they got from this Major. A fellow soldier remarked to me that he did not mind being led but he hated to be driven, and in the army they do drive you just like cattle. Whatever patriotism I had before the war, is dead and will remain dead until laws are passed which will compel officers to respect privates the same as privates are compelled to respect officers.

Coal Miners and Living Cost.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Attorney-General Palmer in the Post-Dispatch of July 31, stated that the majority of the people are more prosperous than ever before. Now with regards to the coal mining class I may state that they are worse off than they have been for many years prior to the war. This is true notwithstanding all that has been published in the press about the high wages that have been made by this class of workers. The facts are that in Illinois the miners had 61 cents a ton for producing coal on a pick mining basis in March, 1914, and since that time have received 23 cents per ton increase, or 37.43 per cent increase in wages. Now the increase in the cost of living, as published in your valuable paper, some time ago, had increased over 88 per cent, and has been steadily mounting since. Thus you see the miners are really 51.57 per cent worse off than they were before the war. This condition is made a great deal worse by the fact that the mines that are working, are only doing so one to two days a week, while a great many have closed down entirely.

America, the Hunting Ground of Opportunity.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

America is the great hunting ground of opportunity for the workmen of today. The European world has been undergoing destructive processes for more than four years. Perhaps these processes have not yet finished their work. The world needs balancing and America must furnish her share and perhaps throw her influence in that direction. It is intensely necessary not only for our sakes but for the sake of all the people of the world that as soon as may be possible we should be put back on a peace basis.

When we went into the war our cry was—and it came from the bottom of our hearts—that we wished to save the world and humanity for democracy. No one group can accomplish this. There must be united effort of everyone in this country who believes in our institutions and who glimpses in his soul that idealism which is an evitable outgrowth of true democracy among a patriotic people. Let us remember this and America will find it possible to do much toward the European countries which are being torn apart by radicalism. We have suffered less than others and must not shirk that task which naturally devolves upon our unimpaired strength and resources. The hope of the world must be recognized to be justice and fair play. We shall have them, too, for while injustice may for a time be successful, justice in the end will triumph. CHARLES GREENBERG.

Publish the Cost Figures.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Your editorial on "Is the Retailer Profiteering?" is pretty good, but could be better.

Suppose the Government tries the plan of giving us the cost on the goods they are selling so "cheap."

Let the Government be honest with us and then compel the jobber and retailer to be honest.

Please try and get the costs and then publish them for the people.

MRS. K. B.

NORTH DAKOTA'S GREATEST DARING.

John Miller Baer, the cartoonist of a Nonpartisan League publication, who became a Nonpartisan League Congressman, says that if North Dakota is to be denounced as having embarked on dubious Socialistic experiments, then most of the American large cities are to be denounced as having been engaged for a long time in dubious Socialistic experiments.

Cities have for years provided light and water for their citizens. Many of them own docks and warehouses. San Francisco owns a street car line. St. Louis owns a terminal bridge and a considerable mileage of terminal railroad. That North Dakota's plan for State elevators and flour mills and home-building organizations is only applying the same principle for meeting public needs of somewhat similar character is the contention of Mr. Baer in a Post-Dispatch article.

To be sure, no city, so far as is of record, has yet engaged in the banking business, but many of them are just now showing a tremendous official interest in the housing problem. Perhaps the really amazing thing is that North Dakota, finding itself confronted by onerous conditions, dared as a State an attempt to work out its own salvation.

How does it happen that North Dakota does not appeal for aid to the general Government and, failing in the first effort, continue a pestiferous agitation until some sort of relief was forced? That is the customary formula. Is there a distinctive problem in some section of the Union? National laws binding on all must be so framed as to meet that particular situation. Are there evils to be abated, wrongs to be righted, abuses to be corrected? Whoever even thinks of abating or righting or correcting them permanently without Washington's aid?

The Washington bureaucracy always listens approvingly and sympathetically to such appeals. It means that ultimately, by hook or crook, more power will come to the bureaucracy, more excuses for interfering with matters that are not properly Federal business, more opportunities for intermeddling.

Some of the things North Dakota is doing may be doubtful, but she at least is doing them herself. Finding her citizens the victims of economic losses estimated as high as $55,000,000 annually in handling and marketing her principal products, she undertook to stop that loss and, being unable to obtain capital readily elsewhere, used the State credit to provide the necessary money. Perhaps some of the criticism is due, not so much to the questionable nature of her enterprises as to a habit of thought now much cultivated, to the instinctive feeling of some that plans ignoring the Federal bureaucracy cannot possibly be the right sort of plans.

A North Dakota bureaucracy may be developed, but at least it will not be one that will increase the power of the Federal bureaucracy; rather one in rivalry with it and dividing its power. North Dakota may fail, but if so it will be its own failure. And against failure may be set off such great gains as an increased feeling of independence and self-reliance, the cultivation of the habit of doing things for one's self and a corresponding discouragement in the inveterate habit of passing the buck.

Those are gains to be highly appraised just now.

ERNST HAECKEL'S REAL WORK.

When the late Prof. Haeckel, after years of valuable research in the field of biology, began to meddle with theology and announced that psychical activity was merely a product of physiological changes, and that, as a consequence, the doctrines of the human free will, the immortality of the soul and the existence of God were without foundation, he raised such a pother that all his previous industry and important discoveries in science were in danger of being forgotten. And when, further, he joined a number of other German savants in upholding Prussian war methods, his popularity outside of his own country was ended.

But Haeckel was a true scientist and did a real work, leaving valuable volumes that may be studied with profit, without regard to the author's conclusion on religion. He delved deeply into the history of the little known forms of deep sea life, as Fabre did into insect life, and himself illustrated his books beautifully, being a capable draftsman. By the time he reached his sixtieth birthday, in 1894, he had produced no less than 42 works, with 13,000 pages, besides numerous scientific pamphlets.

Like certain equally great scientists who in their later years dabbled in spiritualism, Haeckel would have been better entitled to his place in the Hall of Fame had he kept strictly to science. When, after 50 or more years of study of material things, a scientist gets up from his microscope or spectroscope and announces that he sees no evidence of God or an immortal soul, thinking men are not compelled to take him seriously. The utmost industry in his special field of study has given him no authority to deal with something entirely outside of that field.

The mischief that may result in such generalizations as those of Haeckel in the field of theology arises from the fact that a denial of the basic dogmas of religion involves, with the majority of persons, a denial of the moral law. It is more than probable that Haeckel's teachings helped to bring about the moral ruin of Germany.

PEANUTS IN THE SOUTH.

Peanut growing as an industry owes its beginning to an unwelcome Mexican visitor, the boll weevil. When that pest crossed the Rio Grande laying waste the plantations the planter was compelled to do something. He tried the peanut. It was not an instantaneous success. It yielded bountifully, but disposing of it profitably was a problem. To a great extent a market had to be created. It was created. The food value of the peanut was certified to by dietitians. It was placed before the public in a variety of forms—in cakes and oil and butter.

A few figures suffice to show the growth of this industry. Twenty years ago the annual production amounted to about 3,000,000 bushels, grown mostly in Virginia. The peanut crop this year totals 55,000,000 bushels. It is cultivated in every Southern state. The area devoted to it approximates 2,000,000 acres. Texas, with 12,000,000 bushels, leads in production. It also leads in acreage.

But if the origin of peanut culture as a "money crop" is associated with the boll weevil, the leadership which Texas has assumed in this industry traces back to a prophet who long antedated the Mexican pest. Among the real notables that Texas has produced was Jim Hogg, a sturdy disciple of common sense. It was the plain gospel of thrift and industry that Gov. Hogg preached to Texas. The service he rendered is bearing fruit today in many ways throughout the empire of the Lone Star.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

WISDOM OF CLEMENCY.

From the New York World.

WHEN President Wilson, early in 1918, pardoned two young soldiers sentenced to death for sleeping on post in France, the act of clemency was popularly approved. The culprits, to be sure, had committed the soldier's gravest offense. But they were mere boys, new to military discipline, as the country itself was new to the rigors of war, and to have exacted the grim penalty prescribed by army law would undoubtedly have distressed public sentiment.

The wisdom of the pardon is now confirmed by the correspondence between the Secretary of War and the President giving the record of the lads after their restoration to duty. One, Sebastian, died in battle in the Aisne offensive in July, 1918. The other, Cook, fighting gallantly in that engagement and in the Meuse-Argonne battle, was twice wounded and has been honorably discharged from the service.

Is there a more dramatic story of the war than this? Here were two brave and competent soldiers who just missed dying shamefully for an offense with which tired nature had more to do than any willful act of their own, but who, through the mercy of their Commander in Chief, were allowed to redeem their lives and to acquit themselves with honor. They were saved from ignominious death to become a shining example to an army which is rich in records of bravery. Certainly Lincoln would have liked to read this story and to know how his precedent of clemency in such cases has justified itself today.

FOLLY TO CHANGE TREATY NOW.

From the New York Times.

At this stage of procedure with the Treaty any talk of alteration or amendment of the text is madness. Declarations by the Senate that would actually change the meaning of any provisions and call for specific assent and acceptance by other parties to the agreement must not be made.

Germany has signed and ratified the Treaty of Versailles. If we ratify a different treaty she is at once absolved from all obligations so far as the United States is concerned. We remain at war with her and can have peace only by going, as Senator Hitchcock has said, hat in hand to beg her to accept our amendments.

It would be an intolerable humiliation, that we should be forced to go as suppliants to Weimar, to humble ourselves before the enemy we have conquered, to persuade, argue, entreat when we have already exercised the battle-won right to dictate. The Germans would be fools if they did not take advantage of our blunder and false position to insist upon substantial alteration of the terms imposed upon them.

But this is secondary. The all-sufficient, compelling reason is that the American people do not want to see the President or his envoy sitting in the anteroom of the German Minister of Foreign Affairs awaiting an opportunity to present his humble prayer for Germany's acceptance of the Senate's revised copy of the Treaty of Peace.

EPIPHANY AND AFTER.

(Rhapsodies of an Enthusiast.)

The heavens smiled,

Radiant hands reached down tenderly.

White wings, luminous, universes wide, brooded and enfolded,

A breast, of infinite depth and breadth—a bosom, paternal, maternal, invited;

And a face, glowing with all the love, all the strength, and all the sweetness of countless perfect faces, looked on me with welcome.

Who art Thou, but the Divine Parent, the Lover of Men, the Life of all Souls, who givest Thyself continuously, maintaining all Thy children from moment to moment by the Power of Thy Love?

I, a negative atom, a nonentity, a mere vessel, an instrument, a reflector, a point in outermost space, a bubble floating on the breath of eternity, ephemeral as a gnat, dogged by disease, blown out by the wind of death—but Thy child, Thy chosen, Thy well-beloved, Thy manifestation; instantaneously re-lit by the torch of Thy desire, eternally willing me into life that I may give back love for Love.

Fallen, debased, self-orphaned, courting annihilation, wilfully I spurned Thy guidance. My puny laughter went up out of the void, protesting that I was sufficient unto myself. The expiring taper defied the conflagration. The vanishing thought mocked at the Thinker. The leaf forsook the Forest. The feeble ray spurned the Sun.

And, out of the infinite, pleading, pitiful, a Voice insistently followed the wanderer, saying:

"Behold, all ye that kindle a fire, that compass yourselves about with sparks—walk in the light of your fire and in the sparks that ye have kindled. This shall ye have at My hand—ye shall lie down in sorrow!"

And once again the same Voice, still more pleadingly, urged, with a hidden anguish lest it be unheeded:

"Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Then it seemed, when all was lost, when a door of iron shut fast down upon me; when the skies were adamant; when black ruin impended, when darkness closed over all, when hope fled, when the cold of the void settled around, when love expired at the feet of folly; Thou, the Good Shepherd, didst appear once more.

Spurred by the bitter goad of experience, I bethought me; I turned back, I caught a glimpse of Thy face. I perceived that in me lay no salvation. And I said to myself:

"I will arise and go unto my Father, and will say unto Him: 'Father, father! I have sinned against heaven and before Thee, and am no more worthy to be called Thy son!'"

And, while I was yet a long way off, the Divine Father, He who had even given me strength to see my desperate condition, ran to meet me. He came on the wings of the morning. He, the Sun of Righteousness, once more arose, with healing in His wings. Opening arms of infinite affection, He took me upon His breast and wept and laughed with me. And I, sinking down into an ineffable sea of Peace, confessed my weakness and promised to stray no more.

And He, source of all joy and giver of all good gifts, cried aloud, for my sake, to His Universes:

"Rejoice, ye suns and stars, rejoice with Me. For this, My son, was dead and is alive again. He was lost and is found!"

Bring a myriad myriad perfect flowers. Bring galaxies of splendid stars. Bring a brightness as of all suns. Bring the mighty music of the spheres. Bring the rippling laughter of countless children, the love of innumerable golden-hearted women, and the majestic thought of all sages, poets and inspired men, of every age. Gather all these and invoke for song the tongues of men and of angels, to express what only feeling can express—the grandeur and the sweetness of the Vision of God in the Soul.

In vain lookest thou around in the creation or seekest through the mazes of the intellect or the sounds of the human voice in any language—naught that is visible or tangible or expressed in matter or in words can manifest the satisfying mystery of this enlightenment. Only through life itself can any manifestation of it be made, and only a perfect life is equal to the task of such expression.

Symposium Shows How Big Business Men Carry Out Plans to Aid Employes

Profit Sharing and Bonus System in Favor Among Companies Seeking Closer Partnership of Capital and Labor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The World will publish tomorrow a symposium in which representative employers furnish their views upon the best methods of profit-sharing, with descriptions of plans that have been put into practice.

The movement for a business partnership of labor and capital, which began before 1914, has now, after interruption, been resumed, and the widespread and growing interest in this program led the World to assemble its symposium. In its letter to the employers, the World quoted President Wilson's message to Congress, in which he said: "There is now, in fact, a real community of interest between capital and labor, but it has never been made evident in action. It can be made operative and manifest only in a new organization of industry. The genius of our business men and the sound, practical sense of our workers can certainly work such a partnership out when they once realize exactly what it is they seek, and sincerely adopt a common purpose with regard to it."

Some of the replies show that the subject has been already well studied, and plans have become operative in extended territory and in diversified lines of business, so that a fairly good estimate may be made at this time of the application of partnership principles in the general relations of employer and employed.

Swift Plan Explained.

Louis F. Swift, the Chicago packer, outlines the "Employes' Stock Savings Plan," which was announced by Swift & Co. on May 19 of this year. Each employe earning up to $20 a week was permitted to buy one share of Swift & Co. stock at a par value of $100, although the market value was much higher; employes earning between $20 and $30 a week were permitted to buy two shares; $30 and up to $40 a week, three shares; $40 and up to $50 a week, four shares, and $50 and over, five shares. No employe was permitted to buy more than five shares, and the stock is being paid for at a rate of $1 per share a week.

Since May 19 approximately 20,000 employes have taken stock, the investors ranging from office boy to department manager. The only pledge asked of the employe was that he consider his purchase as an investment and not a speculation.

Swift & Co. has, for years, sold stock to its employes at the market price, at a rate of 10 per cent of the price down and the remainder within two years. Under the former scheme, 3194 employes purchased stock. The great majority of Swift employes are now shareholders.

"I don't know that this plan will classify as a real profit-sharing plan," writes Mr. Swift, "but I do know that it has carried quite an appeal to our people. The employe who believes strongly enough in his company to invest some of his own earnings therein is a good man to have on the pay roll, and also as a business partner."

5 Per Cent for Benefit.

The Connecticut Light and Power Co. of Waterbury, Conn., says its vice president, Irvin W. Day, has for several years set aside annually 5 per cent of its net income for the benefit of all employes except executive officers. One-half of the amount is distributed in cash among the employes at quarterly intervals, and the other half is placed to their credit in what is called the Walfare Fund. The employes participate in the distribution on the basis of length of service with the company.

The management of the welfare fund is vested in a board composed of three officers of the company, who may invest it, make loans to employes on the security of salary assignments and decide upon the amount to be paid an employe leaving the service of the company. An employe compelled to resign on account of ill-health or lack of work receives his full participation in the fund; if he is discharged for negligence, and so forth, he receives nothing.

"The feature of this particular plan," according to Day, "which calls for withholding and investing one-half of the amount set aside, has in many cases been a means of teaching employes to save."

Discussing the philosophy of the profit-sharing plan, Henry S. Dennison, president of a manufacturing concern at Farmingham, Mass., which bears his name, gives it as his opinion that profit-sharing and management sharing have a very intimate logical connection, and that the former is not likely to be a permanent success unless accompanied in some considerable degree by the latter.

Proper Wages First.

However, he puts profit-sharing fourth in the list of factors which he names as being of importance for the development of sound relations between labor and capital. His list is as follows: 1. Proper wages and working conditions. 2. The establishment of an employment management department to study all the details of human organization as scientifically and from as many sides as the plant engineer studies his technical and mechanical problems. 3. The establishment of proper machinery by which labor can have its due voice in the management, and through which it can know itself represented and its interests safeguarded; and, 4. The installation of profit sharing with workmen, under special circumstances.

The Studebaker Corporation of South Bend, Ind., manufacturers of vehicles, announced on Aug. 5 a plan under which every employe on his first anniversary of service, receives a check for 5 per cent of his total wages during the year, and the same amount on the second, third and fourth anniversaries. On the fifth and succeeding anniversaries a bonus of 10 per cent of the yearly salary is given. It also established mutual benefit plans, the payments of which were made a fixed expense in the operation of the business, payable before dividends and not dependent on the profits of the corporation.

It is provided that employes who have served for three months or more may have common or preferred stock purchased for them by the corporation, in amounts limited each year to 20 per cent of their annual earnings. Applications are accompanied by 10 per cent of the estimated purchase price, and the employer must pay 40 per cent within four years. The remaining 50 per cent is absorbed by the corporation. When 20,000 shares of common stock are held by or for employes, the corporation will recommend that the stock-holding employes elect a representative to serve as a director of the company. The plan is experimental, and will be given a trial until Dec. 31, 1920.

$20,000 Fund Set Aside.

The Equitable Trust Co. of New York has in operation for the calendar year a system of distribution of extra compensation to officers and clerical employes of the company. Out of each $100,000 earned by the company in excess of 7 per cent on the combined capital, surplus and undivided profits, $20,000 will be set aside for a fund, to be distributed among five classes of employes; actual salary being taken as a basis for those one year in the company's service; salaries multiplied by two for those in service from one to three years; salaries multiplied by three for those in service from three to six years; salaries multiplied by four for those in service from six to 10 years; and salaries multiplied by five for those in the company's service for 10 years or longer.

On July 1, last, the directors of the Mechanics Bank of Brooklyn announced that beginning on that date, and at quarterly periods thereafter, for a year, the bank would distribute to the officers and clerks of the bank bonuses on their annual salaries equal to the rate in per cent paid to the stockholders of the bank as dividends. The bank, without expense to the employes, carried group life insurance, under which the beneficiaries of a deceased employe received insurance equal to a year's pay.

"Under this plan of profit-sharing," says President Harry DeMott, "all members of the force will appreciate that they are in effect not only employes of the bank, but partners in the business, sharing equally with stockholders.'

The American Woolen Co. of Boston has formed a corporation called the Homestead Association, the purpose of which is to assist its employes to own their own homes. On the payment of 5 per cent of the cost, mortgage loans are made to employes at 4 1-2 per cent, and houses are erected for them of durable construction, of four, five or six rooms, electric lights and modern plumbing, with 4500 square feet of yard. They may be paid for at rates ranging from $4.50 to $30 a month.

Cash Bonus on Salaries.

Franklin Simon & Co. of New York distributed on Aug. 1 to all employes a cash bonus of 5 per cent on salaries paid or sales made during the previous six months, with a promise of a second installment at the same rate to be paid Feb. 1, 1920.

Ancell C. Ball, president of Best & Co., New York, has developed over a period of years a system of annual bonuses to employes of that house. Concerning it, he says:

"For some years every member of our buying and sales organization has been able to raise his or her remuneration at will, and that raise is dependent on actual results and not on the whim or favor of some one higher up."

The Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. of Yonkers, N. Y., has distributed bonuses for seven years and found the plan so beneficial that its scope has been extended. Extra payments began Aug. 1, whereby employes, according to length of service, received additions ranging from 5 to 15 per cent of their pay for the first six months of the calendar year, the sum distributed for the period approaching $300,000. The benefit for one year is 5 per cent, increasing thereafter at the rate of 1 per cent a year, until 15 per cent is reached after 11 years of service.

MEDALS FOR CROMWELL SISTERS

France Honors Red Cross Workers Who Drowned Selves.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The Official Journal has published a second list of names of those to whom the new decoration, "the medal of French Gratitude," has been awarded. Among the Americans thus honored and their citations were:

Misses Dorothy and Gladys Cromwell of New York, "tireless workers, often distributing coffee and drinks for 24 hours without rest to passing soldiers and refugees. Remained at their post at Chalons during the bombardment of March, 1918. Worn out by overwork, they drowned themselves on the voyage back to America."

Events in the Social World

Summer Tourists Are Returning to Prepare for Renewal of Visit of Veiled Prophet and to Get Children Into School—Many Weddings Scheduled for September and October—Interesting Engagements Announced.

THE approach of Labor day is, as usual, the signal for the summer resorts to give up their guests, the returning vanguard of whom are already home, getting settled for the season of winter gayety, and, in some instances, attending to the more practical matter of preparing the children for school, which opens Tuesday.

Seldom has the weather man so happily aided in giving the vacationists a pleasant greeting at their own hearthstones. Indeed, some who have been spending the past few weeks at places where the air was neither so cool nor the mosquitoes so passive as might have been desired, are exclaiming that St. Louis itself might qualify as a resort just now.

In this busy time of brushing up for winter, after having exhausted speculation on subjects connected with the return of that distinguished visitor, the Veiled Prophet, the socially inclined naturally turn with inquiring interest to the topic of autumn brides, and here may be found a list of scheduled weddings that promise much in a social way.

The first wedding scheduled for September will be that of Miss Elmyra Sewing, sister of Dr. Arthur H. Sewing, with whom she makes her home, who will marry Louis J. Johanning, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Johanning of 3504 Victor street, on Wednesday.

Miss Emily Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Beck of Webster Groves, will wed Archibald Hamilton of Chicago on Sept. 13, and on the following Tuesday Miss Muriel Hafner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hafner of 16 Windermere place, and Harold Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Knight of 6106 Kingsbury boulevard, will be married in a church wedding.

Sept. 20 is the date chosen by Miss Lorena Jamison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Jamison of "Red Gables," for her marriage to Arthur Christophel, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christophel, and by Miss Ruth Markham, daughter of Mr. and and Mrs. F. W. Markham of Clayton, who will marry Orville Ruler, son of Mrs. Ben Ruler of 5325 Waterman avenue. Miss Lila Capen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Capen, of the Kingsbury Apartments, has set Sept. 25 as the date of her marriage to Meredith Jones Jr.

On Oct. 4 Miss Irma Niedringhaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Niedringhaus of 5528 Pershing avenue, will become the bride of Harold Franklyn White of Burlington, Vt. Miss Evelyn Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude Miller of Webster Groves, will marry Percy Blackmer, son of Mrs. L. R. Blackmer of the Kingsbury apartments, on Oct. 9. Miss Hazel Barry, daughter of Mrs. William D. Barry of 4718 McPherson avenue, will wed Robert Caldwell Badger, son of Mrs. Alexander Badger of 4166 Botanical avenue, on Oct. 11, and Miss Adelaide Elliott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Nugent Elliott of Clayton, and James Carl Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Anderson of 5162 Vernon avenue, will be married Oct. 15. On Oct. 22 Miss Emily Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. X. Ryan of 5378 Maple avenue, will marry Henry Edward Grone, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Grone of 3723 West Pine boulevard. On Oct. 25, Miss Eva Murphy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Murphy of 5345 Pershing avenue, will become the bride of William Van Sickler, son of Mrs. Van Sickler of 5916 Enright avenue. November will no doubt be even more popular than September or October, but very few of the brides-to-be have chosen dates that far in advance.

Several interesting engagements were announced last week and conspicuous among them is the engagement of Miss Marie Pittman and Dr. Claude Pickrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Pickrell of Glencoe, Mo., which has been announced by Miss Pittmann's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Daviess Pittman, 228 North Newstead avenue. Miss Pittman is a graduate of Mary Institute. She is a member of the Junior League and one of the most popular girls in society. She was an active worker in the Red Cross during the war and had charge of the Barnes Hospital Red Cross work rooms. Dr. Pickrell, who is on the staff of St. John's Hospital, is a graduate of the University of Missouri, class of 1907, and of Washington University Medical School, class of 1910. He served as a Captain in the medical corps for two years, first with the British forces and later with the U. S. troops.

The wedding will take place in October. It will be a quiet affair at the home of the bride's parents.

MR. AND MRS. MONTAGUE LYON of 5865 Cates avenue entertained last evening with a reception to celebrate their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary, at which the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Frances Lyon, to Walter Northrup George, was announced.

Mr. George is the son of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry George of Springfield, Mo. He is a graduate of Drury College, class of 1917, and a member of the Kappa Alpha Fraternity. He served in the naval aviation during the war.

The Rev. Dr. George is pastor of the First Congregational Church of Springfield.

Miss Lyon received her education at Mary Institute.

The wedding will take place this fall.

ONE of the important weddings of the season took place Wednesday when Miss Mary Alice Tutt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Tutt, became the bride of William Lee Graves, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Graves of South Orange, N. J.

Dr. McLeod of the Central Presbyterian Church performed the ceremony at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. John N. Booth of 4012 Delmar boulevard, with whom Miss Tutt and her parents make their home. It was very quietly celebrated, with only the immediate families present.

Enoch A. More, brother-in-law of the bride, acted as best man, and was the only attendant.

Among the out-of-town guests were the bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Graves of South Orange, N. J., and the bride's aunt, Mrs. Stephen L. H. Slocum of Washington, D. C.

The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and although she has spent a good deal of her time away from St. Louis, she has been a great favorite in her set.

Mr. Graves and his bride have departed for the East on a wedding trip. They will reside in Chicago.

THE marriage of Miss Laura Boone, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. Stuart Gordon Boone of Kirkwood, to Austin Mills Wilber of Ypsilanti, Mich., took place Tuesday evening in the Wetzel Memorial Church of Kirkwood, the father of the bride performing the ceremony. Miss Madeleine Boone, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Mrs. Franklin Brown and Miss Mae Mollhagen of Saginaw, Mich., were the bride's other attendants. The bridegroom's father was best man. A reception for relatives and intimate friends followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple will make their home in Saginaw.

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made of the marriage of Mrs. Elliott Marshall and Lieutenant-Commander Frank Slingluff Jr., U. S. N., on July 5 at Washington, D. C.

Only the immediate families were present at the ceremony, which was very quietly celebrated, owing to the recent death of the bride's mother.

Mrs. Slingluff was before her marriage to Elliott Marshall, Helen Floyd Jones. She received her education in convents in Italy and Brussels and was one of the most popular belles in society. She is a cousin of Misses Mary and Isabelle Scott.

Miss Catherine and Miss Mimi Floyd Jones, sisters of Mrs. Slingluff, have been very active in war work and are at present at Camp Meade, Md.

Commander Slingluff saw service with the American fleet in European waters during the war, and was in charge of the United States destroyer Lamberton.

The couple will be at home after Aug. 14 at Radcliff road, Cynwyd, Pa.

THE marriage of Miss Ruth Parkhurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Parkhurst of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis, to Joseph Large of Newark, N. J., took place Friday evening.

The wedding was celebrated at Allenhurst, N. J., the summer home of Mrs. Large's aunt, Mrs. Tom Reynolds, formerly of St. Louis.

It was a military wedding and the couple were attended by a large bridal party. Two of the attendants were the bride's sister, Miss Adelaide Parkhurst, maid of honor, and Miss Dorothy Reynolds, bridesmaid.

Mrs. Large is the niece of Mrs. Minnie J. Nulsen of 3029 Longfellow boulevard.

Maison de Bernard, 509 Odd Fellows Building, will open Tuesday for the fall season.—Adv.

Announcement cards have been received by St. Louis friends and relatives of the marriage of William T. Deacon, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Deacon of Webster Groves, and Miss Grace Clarke Smith, daughter of Mrs. John Nicholas Smith of Minneapolis, Minn, Aug. 18, in Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Deacon are now at the Bonair Hotel.

The marriage of Miss Helen Delight Green, daughter of Mr. Benjamin F. Green, 628 Marshall avenue, Webster Groves, to Malcolm Stanley Houghton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Houghton, 118 South Gore avenue, Webster Groves, took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the Tuxedo Park Christian Church. The Rev. Dr. E. E. Doak officiated. The bride's sister, Mrs. Waldo J. Houghton, was matron of honor and the bridesmaid was the bridegroom's sister, Miss Hazel Houghton. Both wore frocks of pink organdie and carried pink Killarney roses. Mr. Houghton's brother, Waldo J. Houghton, was best man. Arthur Schikore was groomsman. Hester Coolidge and the bridegroom's niece, Elilabeth Houghton, were flower girls. The bride wore a gown of white satin with a court train of the same material. She carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley in a shower bouquet. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the residence of Mr. Houghton's parents.

COL. ROOSEVELT TELLS HOW AMERICANS WENT INTO BIG BATTLES

sued British uniforms and many of the men objected strenuously to wearing them on account of the buttons with the crown stamped on them. Our supply of boots up to and including the march into Germany was composed in part of British boots. These boots had a low instep and caused much foot trouble. These are facts that no amount of words can cover, no speeches explain away.

Rumors of Relief.

EARLY in July rumors reached us that we were going to be relieved. At first we did not attach any importance to this, as we had heard many rumors of a like nature during the months we had been in the sector. At last, however, the French officers came up to reconnoiter, and we knew it was true. We were relieved and marched back to some little village near the old French town of Beauvais. Every one was as happy as a king. Here we heard that the plan was to form a corps of the Second Division and our division, train and recruit them for a month and make an offensive with us some time late in August or September. Gen. Bullard, our division commander, who had been in turn Colonel of the Twenty-eighth Infantry, Brigadier-General commanding the First Brigade and division commander, was to be corps commander. This pleased us very much, as we had great confidence in him.

We had been in these villages only for a few days when orders reached us to entruck and proceed to some towns only a short distance from Paris. This appealed to us all, for if we were going to train and rest for a month no more delightful place could be chosen for one and all than the vicinity of Paris.

The busses arrived and all night we jolted southwest through the forest of Chantilly. By morning we arrived and detrucked and the brown columns wound through the fresh green landscape to the charming little gray stone towns. The town where we were to stay was called Ver. It was built on rolling country and its gray cobble-paved streets twisted and wound up hill and down through a maze of picturesque gray houses in whose doors well-dressed, bright-cheeked women and children stood watching us. On the hill were the remains of an old wall and chateau, and at the foot through a broad meadow shaded with trees a fair-sized brook rippled. Jean Jacques Rousseau lived and wrote there. How he could have been such a hypocrite and lived in such a charming place is more than I can see.

Everything Ideal.

The men were delighted. "Say, Buddie, this is some town; look at that stream!" "Bonnie billets." "Let's fight the rest of the war here," were some of the remarks I heard as the column swung in.

Everything was ideal. The stream above-mentioned furnished a bath tub for the command. We had no opportunity for about two months to thoroughly bathe, as we had been on active work the entire time, and you can imagine in just what condition we were. To put it in the words of one of my company commanders, "The command was as lousy as pet coons." The first day we spent in orienting ourselves, getting the kitchen arranged and the billets comfortable. Meanwhile the troops were down bathing in the stream, to the admiring interest of the French inhabitants, who lined the bridge. To our staid Americans the unconventional attitude of interest in bathing troops displayed by the French inhabitants of all ages and sexes was a source of constant embarrassment. I have known a platoon sergeant guide his men to quite a distant point to take their baths. When I asked him why he replied, "Sir, it isn't decent with all them frogs looking on."

Next morning, while I was out going over the village selecting drill grounds and planning the schedule, a motor cycle orderly arrived and handed me a message which read: "You will be prepared to entruck your battalion at 2 this afternoon." This meant no rest for us. We realized that a move on our part now meant one thing and one thing only, that something serious had arisen and that we were going in again. Rumor had been rife for two or three days past that the big Hun offensive was about to start again. In the army, among the front-line troops, practically all you get is rumor about what is happening daily. Where the rumor starts from it is impossible to say, but it travels like lightning. Officers' call was sounded, and when they had assembled I read them the order and told them it was my opinion we were going into a big battle right away. The men were immediately assembled and told the same thing. We always felt that all information possible should be given to the men. Instead of the command being downcast at the idea of leaving their well-deserved rest, their spirits rose. Immediately bustle and preparation were evident everywhere in the town.

By 1 o'clock the truck train was creaking into place on the road. Oddly enough, the truck train was made up of White trucks made in Cleveland, with Indo-Chinese drivers, and was under the command of a French officer. The troops filed by in columns of twos toward the entrucking point. The men were laughing and joking. "They can't do without us now, Bill." "Say, Nig, look over there (pointing towards a graveyard); them's the rest billets of this battalion, and that (indicating a rather imposing tomb) is the battalion headquarters." Many of them were singing the national anthem of the doughboy, "Hail! Hail! The Gang's All Here."

Jolting Northward.

I got into the automobile of the French commander of the train, taking with me Lieut. Kern, as he was pretty well played out and I wanted to spare him as much as possible. The French train commander had no idea what our ultimate destination was. All he knew was a route for about 60 kilometers, at the end of which he was to report for further orders at a little town. As we ran up and down the columns checking the train to make sure that all units were present and all properly located, the men were singing and cheering.

All afternoon we jolted northward through clouds of dust. All afternoon rumors came in picked up from French officers on the roadside. The Hun had attacked in force east and west of Rheims in a desperate attempt to break the French army in two. East of Rheims they had met with a stonewall resistance by Gourand's army and hurled back with heavy loss. West of Rheims their attack had been more successful, and they were reported to have broken through, crossed the Marne and to be now moving on Chalons. As night fell the jolting truck train pressed over further north. At the regulating station, by the shades flare of an electric torch, we got our orders. We were to proceed to the Bois d'Eveque. We guessed on receiving them what our mission was. We were pushing straight north into the re-entrant into the German lines, at the peak of which was Soissons. Our destination was a mass ravine. We realized that we were probably to form part of an offensive to be made against the Hun right flank, which should have as its object, first by pressure at this point to stop the attack on Chalons; second, if it was possible to penetrate far enough to force the evacuation of the Chateau-Thierry salient by threatening their lines of

FURS AND MYSTERY
BY GENFAN.
Natural Fur Seal, and there is only one species though found in various places, is a rare animal, whose fur is of such quality and beauty that the meager supply cannot begin to fulfill the demand.
It is not surprising, therefore, that a variety of substitutes have been produced to serve in Nature's stead. Some good, some bad, many quite indifferent.
Right here is where we do not want to get out of step—good substitutes, when sold honestly as such, are not by any means to be condemned, especially when the genuine article, because of its scarcity, is beyond the financial reach of many who would enjoy it.
It is the common practice of unreliable fur dealers, however, to mislead the public by a number of high-sounding, so-called "Trade Names" that have no place in legitimate business. In this article and the series that will follow, the writer shall turn the light of truth into many dark and mysterious corners.
"Hudson Seal," "Near Seal," "Electric Seal," "Baltic Seal," "French Seal" and similar "species," are in no sense seal. Each is the skin of some other animal from which, like the seal itself, the course hairs have been extracted by machinery. Skillful dyeing completes the imitation, which in some instances can scarcely be detected from the genuine.
Of all substitutes, the so-called "Hudson Seal" excels. In reality it is muskrat, which is a very good fur in itself and may creditably be sold as a fine seal imitation, provided it IS sold as an imitation and NOT as a species of seal, presumably from the vicinity of Hudson Bay.
"French Seal" and "Baltic Seal" are disguising titles for seal-dyed coney, a small animal that is found in France. As a skin, coney does not rank as high as muskrat, but that does not necessarily prevent it being used as an imitation of seal at its proper price level, provided again it IS sold as seal-dyed coney and NOT as a foreign species of genuine seal.

communication. In the early dawn the troops detrucked, sloshed through the mud and bivouacked in the woods. All care possible was taken to get the troops under cover of the woods and the trucks away before daylight in order to avoid any possible chance of observation by the Germans.

Prepare Counter Offensive.

All day we became more certain that our guess as to our probable mission was correct. We heard that the Foreign Legions and the Second American Division had come up on our right. We knew that our division, the Foreign Legion, and the Second Division, would not be concentrated at the same point if it did not mean a real offensive. Soon after the orders for the attack were given us. Apparently the idea was to stake all on one throw. Marshal Foch had decided on a counter-offensive in this part and had delegated to Gen. Mangin, commander of the French army, the task of putting it into execution. Mangin desired to make this offensive, if possible, a complete surprise. All care was used that no unnecessary movement took place among our troops in the back area. We were not to take over the position from the French troops holding the front line, as was generally customary for the attacking troops before an action, but rather to march up on the night of the offensive and attack through them. Fortunately, from the point of view secrecy, the night before the attack it rained cats and dogs. The infantry slogged through the mud up roads cut to pieces by trucks and over trails ankle deep in water. The artillery skittered and strained into place. The tanks clanked and rattled up, breaking the columns and tearing up what was left of the road. It was so dark you could hardly see your hand before your face.

As a part of the element of surprise there was to be but a short period of preparatory bombardment. The artillery was to fire what the French call "the fire of destruction" for five minutes on the front line, and then move to the next objective. This bombardment was to commence at 4:30, and at 4:35 the men were to go over the top.

The troops all reached the position safely by about 4 o'clock. Our position lay along the edge of a rugged and steep ravine. The rain had stopped and the first faint pink of the early summer morning lighted the sky. Absolute silence hung over everything, broken only by twittering of the birds. Suddenly out of the stillness without the warning of a preliminary shot our artillery opened with a crash. All along the horizon silhouetted against the pale pink of the early dawn was the tufted smoke of high explosive shells and the burst of shrapnel showed in flashes like the spitting of a broken electric wire in a hailstorm. After the bombardment had been going on for two or three minutes D Company, on the right, became impatient and wanted to attack, and I heard the men begin to call, "Let's go, let's go!"

Surprise Complete.

At 4:35 the infantry went over. The surprise was complete. Germans were killed in their dugouts half dressed. One of the units of the division captured a colonel and his staff still in his dugout. So rapid was the advance on the first day that the German advance batteries were taken. The French cavalry followed up our advance, looking for a break through. By night all the objectives were taken and the troops bivouacked in the captured position. During the night Hun airplanes flew low over us dropping flares and throwing small bombs. Next morning the attack started again. We ran into much machine-gun fire. "Only those who have danced to its music can know what the mitrailleuse means."

The Germans now rushed up all the reserves they could to hold this threatened point. On the second day we took prisoners from four Hun divisions in front of the regiment. One prisoner told us he had marched 24 kilometers during the preceding night. For five days the advance continued, until the final objective was taken and we held the Chateau-Thierry Soissons railroad and the Germans ordered a general retreat. I was not fortunate enough to see the last half of this battle, as I was wounded. I heard about it, however, from men who had been all through it.

Our casualties were very heavy. At the end of the battle companies in some cases came out commanded by corporals and battalions by second Lieutenants. In the battle the regiment lost most of the men that built it up.

The worst strain of the battle came during the last two days, when casualties had been so heavy as to take off many of the field officers and most of the company commanders, when the remnants of the regiments pressed forward and captured Berzy-le-Sec and the railroad. It is always more difficult for the juniors in a battle like this, for they generally do not know what is at stake. Gen. Frank Parker told me how during the fourth day, when battalions of 800 men had shrunk to a hundred and it looked as if the division would be wiped out and even he was wondering whether we were not losing the efficiency of the division without getting a compensatory gain, Gen. C. P. Summeral, the division commander, came to his headquarters and said: "General, the German high command has ordered the first general retreat since the first battle of the Marne."

Gen. Summeral took command of the division just before Soissons, when Gen. Bullard was given the corps. He had previously commanded the artillery of the division. The division always regarded him as their own particular general. He was known by the nickname of "Sitting Bull." He is, in my opinion, one of the few really great troop leaders developed by us during the war. At this battle Gen. Summeral is reported to have made a statement which was often quoted in the division. Some staff officer from the corps had asked him if, after the very heavy casualties we had received, we were capable of making another attack. He replied: "Sir, when the First Division has only two men left they will be echeloned in depth and attacking toward Berlin."

Back in Billets.

DURING the next couple of months, while I was laid up with my wound, the regiment went to a rest sector near Pont-a-Mousson. There replacements reached them, wounded men returned and they gradually worked up to their full strength again. They enjoyed themselves fully. It was one of those sectors so common on the east of the western front where by tacit agreement little action took place. The nature of the country and its distance from the great centers of France made many parts of the front impracticable for an offensive either by the Hun or ourselves. In these sectors a division such as ours, worn out by hard fighting, or a division of green or old men, held the line, a handful of men on each side occupying long stretches. A few shells would come whistling over during the day and that was all.

Everybody used to look back on their pleasant times in this sector. They got fresh fish by the thoroughly illegal method of throwing hand grenades in some nearby ponds, while fresh berries were plentiful even in the front line. It was midsummer and the weather was pleasantly warm. Altogether, if you had to be at war, it was about as comfortable as possible.

Blown Into German Lines.

An odd incident of this period occurred to a recruit, who was sent out the first night to a listening post. In the listening post was a box on which the guard sat. At some time during the previous night the Germans had crept up and put a bomb under this box. After looking around a little the recruit felt tired and sat down on the box. A violent explosion followed. Right away a patrol worked out from our lines to see what had happened. When they got there they looked carefully through every ditch or clump of bushes in the vicinity, but they could not find a trace of the man. He was reported as dead, blown into bits. On the march up into Germany that missing recruit reported back to the regiment on his return from a German prison camp. Instead of being blown to pieces he had simply been blown into the German lines. When he came to, he was being carried to the rear on a stretcher and had spent the rest of the war as a prisoner, except for a few scars, little the worse for wear.

Shortly after this the St. Mihiel operation took place. The plan was to nip off the salient by a simultaneous attack on both sides. Our division was the left flank unit of the forces attacking on the right of the salient, being charged with the mission of making a juncture with the Twenty-sixth Division which was the right unit of the forces attacking on the left of the salient. The resistance was so slight that the operation partook of the nature of a maneuver rather than a battle. Our losses were practically nil. A large number of prisoners were captured and a considerable amount of material. The reason for this was that the Germans had determined to abandon the position and were in full retreat when we attacked. They had been misinformed by their spies, however, and started their movement about 24 hours too late.

The men had a fine time in this attack. During the time they had been in the Toul sector a high hill, called Mont See, behind the German lines, had given them a lot of trouble. From it the Germans had been virtually able to look into our trenches. In the attack they not only took this hill, but left it far in the rear. Our unit captured a German officers' mess, including the the cook and a fine pig. They promptly made the cook kill the pig and prepare him for their dinner, which they thoroughly enjoyed.

At another time a German company kitchen came up in the night to one of our outposts to ask him directions. When they found out their mistake it was too late, and they were promptly conducted to one of our very hungry companies.

St. Mihiel Operation.

The value of the St. Mihiel operation to our army was considerable. It gave our staffs an opportunity to make mistakes which were not too terribly costly. We fell down particularly on the question of handling our road traffic. The artillery and the trains in many instances became hopelessly jammed, on the largely destroyed road. Each unit commander with laudable desire to get forward would do anything to accomplish that purpose—double bank or cut across country. The result was, of course, a hopeless tangle. This alone would have prevented us carrying on a further attack, as no army can run away from its echelons of supply.

Immediately on the completion of the attacks the First Division, in company with a number of others, was withdrawn from the line and moved west by marching to a position of readiness for the Argonne offensive, which was to take place in a couple of weeks. The march was made mainly by night, as every endeavor was being used to make a surprise attack. The troops bivouacked in the woods, keeping under cover during the day.

The battle was a fierce one. During the first day the Americans made a clean break through, but the lack of training showed and they were unable to exploit their success properly. The various units became dislocated and orders could not be transmitted. The men were gallant, but gallantry is no use when you do not get orders. Supplies did not come up also. As a result the Germans were able to gather themselves, and what might have been a rout became a fierce rear-guard action which lasted for more than a month.

The First Division was held in army reserve and thrown in to take a particularly hard bit of territory. They were in 11 days in all and took all their objectives. As a result they were cited individually by Gen. Pershing in Special Orders No. 211.

CENTENARY METHODIST CHURCH TO CELEBRATE

Fiftieth Anniversary of Move to Present Site Will Be Observed Next Sunday.

The fifteenth anniversary of the Centenary Methodist Church on its present location, Sixteenth and Pine streets, and the eighteenth anniversary of the Centenary Society will be celebrated next Sunday.

The church has been redecorated and a new inverted lighting system installed. It is newly carpeted and the fine old walnut woodwork has been restored at a cost of $10,000. Proposed improvements are a gymnasium and recreation rooms in the basement for the neighborhood work

Centenary is one of three churches that has withstood the march of progress towards the West End. The others are the Old Cathedral, Third and Walnut streets, and Christ Church Cathedral. The church was constructed 50 years ago at a cost of $154,880, including the building site, which was purchased for $35,000. The building at present day prices would cost more than $500,000. On the building committee were Trusten Polk, Governor of Missouri, chairman; John Burd, William Markham, John Kennard, John Hogan and John Shelton. The architect was Thomas Dixon of Baltimore, Md.

The cornerstone was laid May 10, 1869. The ceremonies were conducted by Bishop J. C. Andrews and the address was by Bishop H. H. McTyeire. The dedication of the church took place May 27, 1871.

The massive doors of the church, the vaulted ceiling, pews and wainscoating are all of solid black walnut, which is now worth almost its weight in gold. From the point of architecture and interior finish the church is one of the handsomest in St. Louis.

The membership is 2200. The Sunday school has 700 children. The average attendance at morning services is 800, and at the evening services 600. The church has a seating capacity of 1500.

Special services have been arranged for the celebration. Dr. O. E. Goddard, of Nashville, Tenn., will preach the sermon at the morning services. Other addresses will be made by Murray Carleton; Dr. L. E. Todd, former pastor; Alfred Smith, Editor of the Christian Advocate, and Dr. C. W. Tadlock, the present pastor.

Bishop W. F. McMurray will preach at the evening services. He was formerly a pastor of the church. A special song service will be presented by the quartet of the Second Baptist Church.

The church is maintained at a cost of $14,000 a year. The former parish house is now occupied by the three Deaconesses who visit the poor and sick.

THERE ARE FIVE WAYS of getting Want Ads to the Post-Dispatch office. Through your druggist, over your phone, by mail, by messenger or personal call—with no difference in prices.

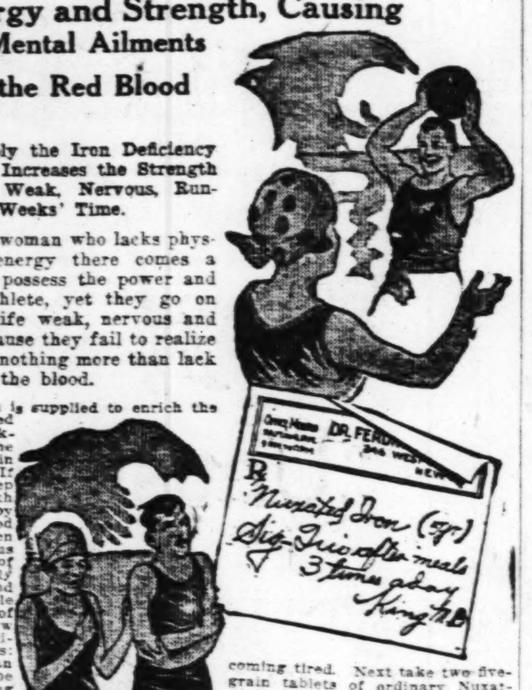
How Lack of Iron Weakens the Blood

Saps the Energy and Strength, Causing Physical and Mental Ailments

Nuxated Iron, the Red Blood Food

By Helping to Supply the Iron Deficiency in the Blood, Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Weak, Nervous, Run-Down Folks in Two Weeks' Time.



To every man and woman who lacks physical strength and energy there comes a longing at times to possess the power and endurance of an athlete, yet they go on struggling through life weak, nervous and run-down simply because they fail to realize that their trouble is nothing more than lack of sufficient iron in the blood.

Once the needed iron is supplied to enrich the blood and create new red blood cells, signs of weakness disappear and the body quickly gains in strength and energy. If people would only keep their blood filled with strength-giving iron by taking a true blood food like Nuxated Iron when they feel weak, nervous and generally "out of sorts" they might readily instill renewed energy and endurance into the whole system is the opinion of Dr. Ferdinand King, New York physician and Medical Author who says: "Many a man and woman who ought still to be young in feeling is losing the ambition and energy they once enjoyed simply because their blood is starving for iron. Iron is absolutely essential to enable the blood to change food into muscular, nerve and brain tissue. Without iron you don't get the strength out of your food. Your blood becomes weak, thin and pale and as a consequence you feel irritable, run-down and constantly wornout.

"Nuxated Iron, by enriching the blood and creating new blood cells, strengthens the nerves, rebuilds the weakened tissues, and helps to instill renewed energy in the whole system whether the patient be young or old. I have used Nuxated Iron widely in my own practice in severely aggravated cases with the most successful results. I have induced many other physicians to give it a trial, all of whom have made very gratifying reports in regard to its great power as a health and strength-builder.

If you are not well or strong you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had, in some cases, been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit.

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron which is recommended above is not a secret remedy, but one which is well-known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed by Weipert Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Co., Enderle Drug Store Co., Pauley's Drug Store Co., and other druggists.

Coca-Cola

TRADE MARK REGISTERED

DELICIOUS AND REFRESHING

Thirty-three years ago the makers of Coca-Cola discovered a true appeal to natural taste and natural wants with a natural beverage—the product of nature in nine different climes, nine different countries.

For 33 years the growing favor of two generations has attested and approved the delicious and refreshing qualities of a beverage pure as the snows of the peaks, the saps of Spring, the nectars of Summer—the juices and flavors of fruits, herbs and pure cane sugar—a drink that sparkles like the frost of an October morning, that tingles like "the wine of November sunshine," smacks of nature—and has become a national synonym for "delicious and refreshing."

Nature cannot be imitated any more than it can be improved upon.

Coca-Cola is held above the possibility of successful imitation because it is recorded in the public taste and registered in the favor of two generations.

SETTLEMENT HOUSE WILL BE OPENED AT 11TH AND BIDDLE

Woman's Catholic League Signs Lease for Social Center in Congested District.

A lease on the property at Eleventh and Biddle streets, which is to be used by the Woman's Catholic League for a settlement house, was signed yesterday by Mrs. Theodore Benoist, president of the league. The new settlement will be called St. Joseph Social Center. Ten different nationalities reside in its vicinity, which is one of the most congested sections of the city. Experienced workers for the staff now are being chosen. Work of fitting the property for occupancy has begun.

The work of the settlement will be largely Americanization at the start, Mrs. Benoist said. A community kitchen likely will be established and will be followed by supper classes for girls, a milk station, baby clinics, dancing and gymnasium classes, the organization of girls' social clubs and the establishment of a corps of visiting nurses. An emergency home for children whose mothers become ill is another likelihood.

A Sensible Price for a Player-Piano $595

That Price Buys Satisfaction

The Aeolian Player-Piano sold at $595 is the lowest priced player produced by the Aeolian Company. That is enough to tell you that it is as low a price as you should dare pay for a player-piano. Being the largest producers in the world of musical instruments, The Aeolian Company has unusual facilities for manufacturing economically.

The Aeolian Company for $595 produces a player-piano that measures up to the Aeolian standard quality. To produce a lesser priced instrument would mean skimping somewhere—and that will never be done. No Aeolian instrument carries an apology.

A player-piano is bought once in a generation. An apparent saving of fifty or a hundred dollars often carries with it a lifetime of regrets. Don't let your home be without music. You are entitled to the pleasures that a player-piano brings. But don't pay less than $595—the price that buys satisfaction. Payment terms can be suited to your convenience.

PLEA FOR EXPERT CARE FOR FIGHTERS MADE INSANE BY THE WAR

do much toward answering our inquiry as to the existence of any new and more difficult problems in the phase of caring for the war's disabled that is now just commencing. These are the insane—the wounded in mind. A very brief consideration of their position under the new arrangement for care and of a menacing difficulty that has arisen at the very outset will also make it possible to answer our second question as to the existence of any new obstacles to continuing the level of care and treatment that characterized the military hospitals.

The Unsung Heroes.

Last summer when a million women were making surgical dressings for the Red Cross there probably was not one before whose eyes there did not come at some time the vision of a fprm in khaki being carried back from the mud and blood of "No Man's" land and swathed in the snowy whiteness of gauze. There must have been many who thought also of the victims of the gas that changes air to water in the lungs and of the patients sick in hospitals who, while they did not figure in "battle casualties," nevertheless fill many of the graves in France above which the American flags now fly. There must, however, have been very few of these thoughtful workers, when the lists of killed and wounded occupied nearly a page in the newspapers every day, who realized that the final count would show the insane returned from France had outnumbered men with amputations of every kind.

By June 30 of the present year, 4863 soldiers with mental diseases had been returned from the A. E. F. This number, large as it is, represents an incidence of insanity less than that which ordinarily exists in the army during times of peace and much less than that in any of the armies of our allies. There are however, to be taken into account many other insane soldiers who were discharged from the camps in this country, and also a new source, the importance of which can not yet be accurately estimated—men discharged with other injuries or diseases or mustered out sane and sound but who for several years to come will contribute their quota of mental cases. Often slow in their onset and prolonged in their course, mental disease will appear for the next few years among the 4,000,000 men who served in the army and navy at a higher rate than that of one per 1000 which prevails in the adult civil population. It is reasonably certain that the Public Health Service will have to provide ultimately facilities for the treatment of not less than 10,000 insane soldiers and sailors.

Great Opportunity.

There is urgent need to secure the medical staffs of the five psychopathic hospitals that must be organized to care for the military insane. Each must have an officer in charge and a clinical director trained in the specialty of medicine that requires the longest and most painstaking preparation. There must be one assistant physician, also trained in psychoiatry for every 50 patients, besides internists, administrative officers, laboratory assistants and directors of occupational therapy. Incredible as is seems. py. Incredible as it seems. the present time cannot offer these men even the compensation that they received in the army. By rare good fortune there are available today for the five posts of clinical directors men in the Medical Reserve Corps of the army who were entrusted with most important duties in psychiatric work in France. But these men cannot be secured because adequate compensation cannot be offered for the equally important and infinitely more difficult work awaiting them in the Public Health Service psychopathic hospitals. Like most physicians who entered the army at the beginning of the war they had to make great sacrifices, in which their families bore the larger part, to give up their practices and live off their army pay. The same situation exists in securing men to serve as senior assistants.

Formidable Obstacles Ahead.

If so formidable an obstacle as this can arise from such an insignificant cause, at the very outset of the new work of the Public Health Service, what is to be expected when those of short memories tire of expressing their gratitude to the soldiers who lost their health in winning the war in France? Is it not imperative that this obstacle should be swept away immediately if only as a guarantee of our good faith and acceptance of our debt of honor? The materials are now below collected for the edifices of science and humanity that are to be raised as the most practical of all memorials to the soldiers who fought in the war. If, for the most difficult medical work of all, there must now be selected ill-prepared and immature physicians, what will the standards be in other fields when the burdens press more heavily, the subject of rehabilitation is worn threadbare in interest and new matters occupy the attention of Congress and the public? These are not questions for studies by congressional committees, prolonged discussion or impassioned letters to newspapers, but ones requiring an instant and decisive answer by the administrative officers who have authority in the matter or an emergency appeal to Congress, if that be necessary.

What is a representative of the War Risk Insurance Bureau to say to the mothers of our soldier insane when they ask why special skill cannot be brought to bear upon the terrible diseases from which their boys are suffering? If he is candid and frank he must make some such answer as this:

"I appreciate the fact that your sons lost their minds while carrying out the victory that has brought peace to mankind. I know that un-

St. Louis may well be proud of Moon Cars—which, in competition with the most notable European makes, are winning the approval of the fastidious motorists of many continents.

Long a favorite in North and South America, the Moon Car has again invaded Europe. The new Moon "Victory" Model is almost as well-known in such countries as Norway and Sweden as it is here at home—and now with Governmental import restrictions raised, England enthusiastically approves Moon design and construction by buying 287 Moon Cars in the last three weeks—her motorists confirming the good taste and good judgment of Moon owners everywhere.

St. Louis Business Men

Hundreds of returned fighters have registered for employment at the Demobilization Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, 110 N. 9th Street, and thousands will be discharged soon. Have the man who employs your help telephone or write us. We have salesmen, office help of all kinds, chauffeurs, and any number of men who are willing to serve as helpers to learn trades, if they are paid a living wage. It is up to you. "These men fought for you, let them work for you."

There are hundreds of jobs in this sort of work available in St. Louis every day. If you will give these jobs to the Bureau we can then encourage and satisfy the returned service man instead of driving him to a Fee Agency and making him pay for his job. All they want is a job—will YOU give it to them?

The Demobilization Bureau is backed and financed by the War Activity Organizations, therefore, NO FEE is charged. The returned fighter comes home confident he can secure work through the Demobilization Bureau. Phone your wants in immediately so that the Bureau may live up to its motto—"MAKE A JOB FOR EVERY FIGHTER."

We have examiners for all classes of work. When you phone OLIVE 7240 or CENTRAL 756 ask the operator to connect you with the examiner who has charge of the particular class of help of which you are in need.

To Acquire Curly Hair In a Single Night

Hair tortured with the hot curling iron is bound to become dry, harsh and brittle, as so many know from sad experience. It's far more sensible to use plain liquid silmerine, which can do no harm and which produces a curliness much prettier and more natural in appearance. This has the peculiar property of drying in the most beautiful waves and creases imaginable. It is also a fine dressing for the hair, preserving its texture and health, keeping it delightfully soft and glossy. A few ounces from the druggist will last for weeks, so it is not at all expensive.

Liquid silmerine is not sticky or greasy and it won't stain or streak hair or scalp. A convenient way to use it is to pour a little into a saucer and then with a clean toothbrush apply evenly to the hair from root to tip. If this is done before retiring the added glory to one's "crowning glory" will be quite in evidence in the morning. The hair will be nice and fluffy when combed out. —Adv.

less they are cured of the illnesses that now hold them in their grasp they will have no share in the flood of happiness that they helped to bring to the world. I realize that the application of the best medical treatment now will largely determine whether the remainder of your sons' lives shall be spent in mental darkness or they can again use the faculties that God gave them to communicate with their fellow-men and enjoy the experiences of life and the beautiful things of the earth. It is true that there are available physicians trained in this special work who served with your sons in France and who could now be secured were it not for the question of expense. To be sure, statistics show that the United States ended the war with a debt only one-tenth her national wealth, compared with a ratio of one-third in Great Britain and France. But if we pay the skillful specialists in diseases of the mind needed to direct these psychopathic hospitals even the compensation that they received while in the army we shall have to give each one $3500 a year and provide living quarters for him besides. The compensation of the younger men, with less experience but equal interest in this special branch of medicine, who are needed as assistants, would be from $2400 to $3000 a year, and we should also have to furnish quarters for them.

Fruit of Niggardly Policy.

"It is useless for you to remind me," he must continue, "that baseball players receive much larger compensation for a short season, while these men will have to devote themselves, month in and month out, to difficult and often almost hopeless tasks. It is, of course, only a desire to continue to help the soldiers to whom they have become attached that makes it possible to secure some of these physicians at an annual salary which about equals the monthly income of a successful specialist in a large American city. It has been brought to our attention that the superintendents of the State institutions to which the sisters of these soldiers and sailors would go if they developed mental diseases receive nearly twice the compensation that we feel is too much for the directors of the Public Health Service Psychopathic Hospital, and, in addition, have dwellings and maintenance for themselves and their immediate families. Do you not realize that even if the salaries paid in the army are to be paid by the Public Health Service the entire medical staffs of these five psychopathic hospitals will cost the Government of the United States not less than $250,000 a year when the capacity of each reaches one thousand patients, and that this would make the cost of medical treatment not less than a dollar a week for each patient? Of course most men spend more than that for cigarettes, but the Government must look at large aggregate sums, not small per capita costs. Personally, I think this is little enough pay for the services of competent 'surgeons of the mind' who can rescue many of these sons of yours from the most unhappy fate that comes to human beings, but I am governed in these matters by higher authority. I regret that I can say to you only that you must be comforted by the fact that the country feels profoundly grateful to you and to your soldier sons, but would prefer not to have its gratitude measured in terms of actual financial cost."

Such mothers might find little to say in reply to these statements except to repeat tiresomely that their boys were sound and happy when they entered the army, and now, through the touch of disease, are slowly drifting away from them into little worlds of their own. They might say that the United States Government is still great and rich and strong, and the fact that it is not crushed and poor and weak is due in no small degree to the efforts of the boys for whom it now cannot afford to care. They might say that the President of the United States has promised that we will discharge our debt of honor to these men. But their voices are weak and will not carry far. Should not the voice of public opinion—now that the issue of expense has been squarely raised in connection with the quality of cure to be given during the last and longest phase of the hospital lives of our disabled men—take up the protest of the mothers of our insane soldiers? Great wrongs are best dealt with when they are small ones.

A Miserable Fate in Prospect.

Little as the patients now waiting in military hospitals to be transferred to the care of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance realize it, the outcome of their diseases or injuries will be very largely determined now by the decision reached on a relatively small issue. This issue is whether those with mental diseases will be cared for in insane asylums directed by underpaid and underexperienced physicians who are willing to accept the pay of policemen to secure employment, or in psychopathic hospitals staffed by skilled specialists who have already, amid the almost insurmountable difficulties that existed in France, upheld the best standards of American psychiatry and won the praise of those who had been dealing with these problems in the war much longer than ourselves. It is unlikely that parsimony will be exhibited in building the hospitals needed for discharged soldiers and sailors. It is very probable that they will be models in construction and arrangement, but they will be only sepulchers for science if they are conducted by men incapable, through lack of training or experience, of applying their resources to the cure and amelioration of disease.

Tobacco Hardens the Arteries, Overtaxes the Heart and Shortens Life

Says Dr. Connor, Who Suggests a Simple Test to Find if It Is Hurting You. Can You Stand It?

New York.—Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins hospital, says: Hundreds of thousands of men who smoke and chew and who believe themselves healthy are suffering from progressive organic ailments. They would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco and most of them would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco.

The best known habit-forming principal of tobacco is nicotine, but the most deadly and demoralizing is furfural. Both are deadly poison, which, when absorbed by the system slowly, but surely, affect the nerves, membranes, tissues, vital organs and vitality of the body.

The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances and the individual. In some it causes general debility, others catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will power, cowardice and fear, mental confusion, etc.; in others it causes heart disease, bronchial troubles, hardening of the arteries, palpitation of the heart, tuberculosis, blindness, cancer and the common affliction known as tobacco heart.

If you use tobacco in any form you easily detect its harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud a full page from a book. If your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh and it may be the beginning of very serious catarrhal trouble. Next, in the morning, before taking your usual smoke, walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, if your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be the victim of a functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke or chew to quiet your nerves, you are a slave to the tobacco habit and are slowly poisoning yourself with the insidious deadly drugs, nicotine and furfural. In either case, you have just two alternatives—keep on with your self-poisoning process regardless of the dangers, and suffer the consequences, or rid yourself of the habit and escape the dangers.

You can overcome the craving and stop the tobacco habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol. Take one tablet after each meal and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco. The craving will have left you. With the nicotine poisoning out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note: When asked about Nicotol, one of our leading druggists said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit. It is a way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including the Judge & Dolph, the Wolff-Wilson and the Enderle stores.—ADV.

Americans—Ireland Appeals to You in Her Struggle for Liberty

When American independence hung in the balance in 1776 Ireland gave freely of her sons and moneys that America might be a Nation of Free Men. No nation gave more to Washington, the first Sinn Feiner in America.

We have paid in blood and gold the debt we owed to France and Lafayette. Are we to repudiate the debt we owe to Ireland and hold back the little she asks? If not, now is the time. The hour of fate has come. The trumpet of Liberty has sounded. Will liberty-loving Americans respond?

When, during the troublesome times of the Revolution, Benjamin Franklin went to Ireland and addressed the Irish Parliament, as the champion of American Liberty, he expressed the hope that some day would see a champion of Irish Freedom addressing an American Congress in a free America.

We were your friends then, we have proven to be your friends ever since. There is not a relic that you treasure which has not been sanctified by the blood of the Irish race. Her sons have fought for the liberty of every land and never betrayed liberty's cause. In the mighty conflict just ended more than half a million Irishmen from Ireland, Britain, Australia, Canada and New Zealand, and more than a million from America, have fought that democracy might live.

At the great Irish Race Convention, held at Philadelphia, February 22nd, 1919, a million dollars was pledged by the delegates assembled there for the purpose of putting the Irish question before the American people in its true light. Frank P. Walsh, during the late war Joint Chairman of the War Labor Board and a native son of Missouri, addressing that convention, pledged in the name of liberty-loving Missourians the sum of $50,000.00 to the Irish Victory Fund.

Men and Women of Missouri

What will be your answer to this pledge? Will it be the traditional answer of Americans to every just appeal? Will it be the answer that Irishmen gave to America in 1776, 1812, 1861, 1898 and 1917 in defense of American Liberty; GIVE NOW AND GIVE FREELY.

Remember your debt to Ireland.

LABOR DETERMINED TO GO FORWARD, SAYS SAMUEL GOMPERS

denied, abridged or interested with by the employers in any manner whatsoever."

Thus, the right of workers to a voice in the determination of their conditions of life became one of America's guiding principles not only in the war industries of the Government, but the spirit became most general among employers the country over. The men and women of toil had come to stand straight and to speak with authority in matters of executive direction. In these days when so many prophets throughout the world are proclaiming revolutions of such sweeping character, it may be presumptuous for me to use the word "revolution," but I maintain that when we reached that point in our national life where labor assumed a directing role in the affairs of the country, a very definite and practical revolution had been accomplished. A definite result had been gained, a deep-rooted concept completely destroyed and replaced by a new one of exactly opposite character, and the struggling masses of mankind gives a new status in society.

The Demands of Labor.

Labor insisted upon the right of determining the conditions under which service would be given. Labor will continue to insist upon maintaining that principle as a right in perpetuity. Labor demands also the right of full representation in all activities of our industrial, commercial, political and social life.

We have come through the war. The worth of labor's creative efforts and of labor's administrative thought is written into every page of the record. Labor gave service to the full. It was driven only by its own conviction and consciousness. The voluntary offering of free men for the principle they believe in surpasses any product of bondage the world has ever known or ever could know.

We are upon days no less trying than the days of war, and no less fraught with great consequences. The service of labor to our country will be great, if its opportunities are great, a true reflection of the status that labor occupies in the nation. The higher and freer the position of labor, the greater and nobler will be the service of labor. Bondmen might write a declaration of freedom, but they could not conduct their own affairs and act the part of freedom until they had become free. American labor has achieved the great fundamentals of industrial freedom and it has established this fact in the life and consciousness of the community. As free men they wish to go forward in constructive effort to improve all life from day to day as opportunity offers, working to that end with every person, every agency and every influence that seeks progress. We are on the road called Progress and we cannot and shall not turn back.

If there be those whose desire it is to turn back, labor will resist and resist to the utmost, every effort they put forth. The safety and well-being of our country and of the world lie in going forward. Never was this as true as it is today. The will of the world is set to go forward. There are among us those whose minds are set upon reaction, it is true. Not in our time will the world be free of those whose creed is reaction. Were we within sight of the promised land itself I verily believe there would be some who would turn their faces to the rear, out of fear that some selfish interest would be lost in the brightness of the future.

But we are not in sight of the promised land—most of us are not even thinking about it. We are thinking about the real and pressing conditions of today, and trying as best we know how to deal with them constructively, in order that we may make out of what we have the best that is possible. We have at our command the process of democracy—made safe by the war against the autocratic concept. Democracy means nothing if it does not mean the opportunity for ordered progress. Having that opportunity, it is our task to use it, and make such ordered progress as we may find possible. The limit of progress that we may make is fixed by our capacity, and by nothing else.

If every element in our national life is possessed of the wish and the will to go forward in development of our opportunities, then we shall go far and we shall go peacefully, with a large measure of happiness.

As for labor—American labor knows full well that the millenium is not yet with us. The millenium is but a day dream of castles in the air. The castles are still far off. The work of the American labor movement is to struggle on to bring right and light into the life and the toil of the workers; to make every day a better one than the day before, and to make this great republic of ours a leader in all of the thought and practice and in every kind of activity throughout the nations of the world. In the doing of that—in that steady, constant effort, which is without glamour and without much blowing of trumpets—all men who look toward the future may help. All who are willing to contribute thought and service may share in the work of going forward. Publicists, employers, men of business, governmental representatives—all who have a thought or can perform a service—many contribute something toward the progress of the race for which the labor movement is striving in every hour of its life and with every energy of its being.

Progress—not for a few, but for all—that is the guiding thought and purpose of the American labor movement. I know of none better.

REAL ESTATE MEN DISCLAIM WISH TO PROFITEER IN RENTS

Exchange Asks City Assessor to Consider Examples of Lenine and Trotzky Far From Imitation.

INCREASES MADE LATE, IS ASSERTION

Declares Higher Taxes and "Narrow, Demagogical Policy" by City Will Discourage Building Activities

A disclaimer that landlords are "enemies of the people," and a plea to City Assessor Wollbrink to consider the examples of Lenine and Trotzky as "far from your imitation," are contained in a memorial addressed to Wollbrink yesterday by a committee appointed for that purpose by the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange. The members of the committee are James P. Blake, Maj. James L. Barngrove, and A. R. Schollmeyer. The memorial has reference to the Assessor's announced plan of increasing taxes as a method of combating rent profiteering.

The committee protests against the Assessor's use of his position "to threaten unjustly the very large thrifty saving class of property owners," and points out that this is a Government for all classes of people, "and not, as Russia is now cursed, by Bolshevist rule, for but one class."

The memorial confesses that doubtless some individual owners are taking advantage of the situation to raise rentals higher than others, and at the same time are making no repairs, but objects to any view that increased taxes are the sole justification claimed by owners for raising rents. It is asserted that repairs for three years have cost twice as much as they did before the war, and that another part of the advance is to be attributed to a genuine shortage of housing accommodations, similar to the shortage of food and clothing throughout the world.

Property Cannot Be Hid.

The Assessor is reminded that when the city or State requires more money "to pay office holders' salaries the sure and effective method is to impose an increase on realty, because that is a species of property that cannot be hid."

Within a short time, it is asserted, the assessments on real estate in this city have been gradually pushed up, year after year, until they are now approximately 90 per cent of the full value of the property, whereas the assessment rate was formerly 60 per cent, and that at the same time the tax rate has been raised from $1.90 to $2.35 a $100, with constant pressure at the city hall to push on to $2.50, the constitutional limit.

There is a campaign on, the committee declares, to ask the next Legislature to raise the rate to a still higher figure, while the real owners are also frequently subjected to special assessments, in the way of levies for sewers, the reconstruction of streets and alleys and the opening of new thoroughfares.

"And you, Mr. Wollbrinck," the communication proceeds, "are continually appearing in the public prints threatening to still further increase the property owners' burden because he is asking for an increase in his rents to aid him in making his holdings bring him a fair and reasonable return on his investment, to which he is surely entitled."

Dead Letter Elsewhere.

The Assessor is reminded that whenever a property owner appeals to him against increased assessments, the "stock" reply is that the State law declares that all property must be assessed at full value. The committee declares that in all parts of the State outside the cities this law is a dead letter, the assessments in the country districts being only 20 to 40 per cent of the true value.

In the matter of increasing rentals, it is stated, the agent members of the Real Estate Exchange are advising their clients conservatively, "and it is their general opinion that, notwithstanding exceptions, the advances thus far have averaged only from 10 to 20 per cent." The rate is admitted to be rather higher in the case of apartment houses, but this is attributed to an unprecedented rush for janitored and heated apartments, due to the scarcity of domestic help and the high wages demanded for such service.

The assertion is made that the last boom in realty and rentals in this city occurred at the time of the World's Fair, and that during the 10 "lean years" following 1907 realty values and rents steadily declined, while holdings remained untenanted on an average one-third of the time.

Tenants Don't Realize.

"Tenants do not realize," the memorial maintains, "that while they were paying for three or four years of the war period a 100 per cent rise in food, etc., rents remained low,

GRAND MARSHAL PREDICTS THAT 30,000 WILL MARCH IN LABOR PARADE TOMORROW

185 Union Locals Will Be Represented—Holiday Will Be Widely Observed—Mail Deliveries in Morning Only.

Preparations for the Labor day parade tomorrow have been completed, according to an announcement last evening of J. W. Williams, grand marshal, who added that the estimates furnished him by the 185 union locals to be represented indicate that 30,000 to 40,000 men and women will take part in the demonstration. He estimated the parade would be about two and one-half hours passing a given point.

The day will be observed generally as a holiday, with the banks, markets, stores, city hall, courts Government offices, branch postoffices and other places closed. The main postoffice and the central station, at Eighth and Olive, will be open all day. All other stations will close at 10 a. m. There will be two morning mail deliveries in the downtown district and one in the residence district.

Letter Carriers to March.

Labor leaders generally anticipate the greatest demonstration of any previous Labor day, owing to the great number of workers who have joined the union ranks within the last two years. It is estimated there are 100,000 members of union labor in St. Louis, as compared with 70,000 before the war.

For the first time in any Labor day parade the letter carriers will be in line. They will have a place near the end of the procession, as they will not be released from work until after the morning deliveries of mail. The municipal clerks and other employes of the city also will take part this year, while many other new organizations will be in the march.

Picnic at Highlands.

An all-day picnic at Forest Park Highlands will follow the parade, where Harry B. Hawes will speak from the bandstand at 4 p. m.

The parade will be reviewed from a stand in front of the Building Trades Council, 2651 Locust street, by Joseph E. Woracek, president of Central Trades and Labor Union; Charles J. Lammert, president Building Trades Council; Grand Marshal Williams and other labor leaders and Mayor Kiel.

As soon as the parade disbands, those marchers who do not have to return to work, have been requested to go to the park for the picnic.

In the parade will be many floats, prepared by the butchers' and teamstems' union, while most of the women will ride in decorated automobiles.

The parade will form at Twelfth and Chestnut streets and in adjacent streets, as planned in a chart prepared by Grand Marshal Williams and sent to the various locals. It will start at 9 a. m. at a signal of an aerial bomb, and will move east on Chestnut to Broadway, north to Washington, west to Twelfth street, south to Locust street, and west on Locust to Leffingwell avenue and disband.

Order of Units.

The following order will be observed by the various units:

The grand marshal and his aides and delegates to Central Trades and Labor Union, preceded by flags and banners and a band. Each division following will have several bands.

First Division—Allied trades of the Building Trades Council, led by Division Marshal Charles J. Lammert, president of the council, and delegates to the council; asbestos workers, elevator constructors and three locals of engineers; stationary firemen, Painters' District Council and 11 locals of painters; Carpenters' District Council and five locals of carpenters and the Women's Auxiliary; Structural Ironworkers' District Council and four locals; seven locals of electrical workers, one of steamfitters, one composition roofers, sheet metal workers and lathers.

Second Division—Allied Printing Trades Council, H. Clay Schmidt, divisional marshal. Two locals of the typographical union, one each of the pressmen, webb pressmen, Franklin Association, job press feeders' union, photo engravers' union, electrotypers, steretoypers, mailers and bindery women; waitresses, bartenders cooks and pastry cooks, theatrical brotherhood, moving picture operators and three locals of switchmen; bakers, Women's Trade Union League, musicians, musical instrument makers and street car men.

Three locals of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, one of the leather workers, four of the butchers; the Label Trades Section and the Women's International Label League; four locals of tailors and all city employes, including firefighters and municipal clerks; ammonia workers, soapmakers, wholesale house employes, broommakers, United Paper Products Employes' Union and the building service employes.

5th to 7th Divisions.

Fifth Division—Metal Trades Council, T. J. Callahan, division marshal. Three locals of the Molders' Union, three of stovemakers, four of foundry employes, one each of metal polishers, patternmakers and boilermakers; two of sheet metal workers, one of car wheel molders, six locals of machinists, two of blacksmiths, three of upholsterers and one of retail furniture clerks.

Sixth Division—Brewery Workers' Joint Council, William Stroh, division marshal. Eight locals of brewery workers, one each of soft drink workers, glass bottle blowers, coopers and tobacco workers; two of cigarmakers, letter carriers, postal employes, Federal employes and barbers.

Grand Marshal Williams and his aids will meet at 8 a. m. at Twelfth and Chestnut streets for a conference on the general situation, and in case of rain will be the ones to decide on what shall be done.

ADMIT COUNTY HOLDUP OF $3000 IN JEWELRY

Two Men Confess Helping to Rob Isaac Hellman Jr. and Miss Florine May on June 15.

Confessions that they were two of four robbers who stole jewelry valued at $3000 from Isaac Hellman Jr. of 5539 Pershing avenue and Miss Florine May, of 5 Washington terrace, the night of June 15, were made to the police yesterday by Clarence Pitt, 18 years old, of 3713 North Ninth street, a chauffeur and Robert Layman, 23, of 4270 Delmar boulevard.

Hellman and Miss May were held up on the Berry road near the Manchester road in St. Louis County as they were returning in Hellman's automobile from the Westwood County Club.

In their confession Pitt and Layman named as their companions Earl Houston, 22, of 2730 Olive street and Bernard (Buddy) Ball, of 1819 North Grand avenue. Houston was arrested last night. Ball has been in jail 10 days on another robbery charge.

Pitt's arrest was brought about through information given to two automobile squad detectives by a young woman who had heard him talk about the robbery.

Go and Get Some Money.

In his confession Pitt said that about 7:30 p. m. June 19 he and Layman met Houston and Bell at Spring avenue and Washington boulevard and Ball said: "Let's go and get some money. Wait here a few minutes and I'll get a machine." Ball went away, Pitt said, and returned a few minutes later with a Ford touring car.

They drove into the county, he said, and when it was dark they saw a machine approaching with a man and woman in it. They were then near a golf club on the Berry road, south of the Manchester road. This is the Westwood Country Club from which Hellman and Miss May were returning.

In his confession Pitt said they waited until Hellman's car had passed and then they turned and overtook it. They pointed revolvers at the driver, they said, and Houston searched the young woman while Layman searched the man. Their loot, he said, consisted of a platinum and diamond wrist watch, a diamond ring, a stickpin and $45.

Prevent Pursuit.

After the robbery, he said, they locked Hellman's car with a key they took from his pocket, to make sure he would not pursue them, and they drove back to the city and abandoned the Ford machine at Spring and Finney avenues. This machine later was identified as one stolen that night from Dr. Elmer Olds at Grand avenue and Washington boulevard.

The four, according to the confession, went to a rooming house at 622 North Garrison avenue, where Andrew Hill, proprietor of the rooming house, told them where they could sell the jewelry for $275, which they did. On this information and the further statement that he listened while they talked of the robbery Hill was arrested.

Pitt said he got $10 out of the $45 cash stolen from Hellman and $55 from the proceeds of the jewelry. He and his companions, he said, spent the money for clothes, picture shows and a "good time." He said this was their first and only robbery.

Layman made a confession practically the same as Pitt's. The others refused to make statements when they were arrested.

WOMEN'S INTEREST IN MRS. MORROW'S CANDIDACY GROWS

Heightened by Her Unanimous Election as One of Two State Committeewomen From Sixth District

AWAITING RETURN OF GOV. GARDNER

Seeks Place as Secretary of Missouri Public Service Commission, Carrying Salary of $3600 a Year.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 30.—Interest of women Democratic voters in Missouri in their campaign for the appointment of Mrs. Al Morrow of Warrensburg by Gov. Gardner to the position of Secretary of the Missouri Public Service Commission as a recognition of the importance of women in politics, has been heightened among political workers by the election of Mrs. Morrow by the Congressional Committee at Clinton Tuesday as one of the two State Committeewomen from the Sixth District.

It is understood here that the men's Democratic organization is offering no objection to the appointment of Mrs. Morrow, but that on the other hand many members of the State Committee individually are supporting her for the place.

Williams Only Opposition.

The only real opposition apparent on the surface comes from Newt E. Williams, the Governor's private secretary at $2800 a year, who is seeking the secretaryship of the commission at $3600. Williams was inherited by the Gardner administration from the administration of former Gov. Major, and has been retained as secretary in the Governor's office. He entered the service as a clerk in the Governor's office.

Mrs. Morrow went to the meeting of the Congressional Committee with the indorsement of the county committees of Johnson County, her home county, and Bates County. When a motion was made in the Johnson County meeting that she be indorsed for State Committeeman, one woman called upon her to state her views on the league of nations and on the attitude of Senator Reed. Although long experienced in politics, Mrs. Morrow did not adopt any "gum shoe" methods. She declared herself unqualifiedly in favor of the league, and declared her belief that Senator Reed in his opposition to President Wilson was not in any measure representing the views of the people of Missouri. The indorsement was unanimous.

After the Clinton meeting, according to published reports, Mrs. Morrow was urged to become a candidate for chairman of the Women's State Committee. She discouraged this talk, taking the position that the chairman of the regular (men's) State Committee is a resident of the Sixth District, and she did not believe it would be "good politics" to select a woman from the same district.

Embarrassing for Governor.

The embarrassing political situation the Governor faces is to choose between recognition of the demands of the women voters of the State and the personal association which he has had with his secretary. The women believe the Governor will name Mrs. Morrow. One of the most prominent suffragists in the State said:

"Of course, we expect the Governor will appoint Mrs. Morrow. The act would be a proper recognition of the entry of women into politics. Of course, there are several women employed in the capital as clerks and stenographers, but this is really the first opportunity an executive has had to appoint a woman to a place which carries a man's salary.

"The Governor has always been friendly to suffrage, and he will not overlook this opportunity to demonstrate his practical belief in the capabilities of women. Mrs. Morrow has performed all the duties of Secretary for a year and has given satisfaction. She is experienced, and from the standpoint of value to the public service, it would be a grave mistake to remove her to make a place for a politician just because he is a man."

Widow of "Col. Al" Morrow.

Mrs. Morrow is the widow of "Col. Al" Morrow, who was private stenographer to Gov. Stone, Gov. Stephens, Gov. Dockery and Gov. Folk. He knew probably more Democrats of influence than any other one person in the State, and Mrs. Morrow knows just about as many.

It is the expectation that the Governor will get the appointment out of his way soon after his return from his present trip to Washington.

Mrs. Morrow's associate on the State Committee from the Sixth District is Mrs. Harley Clark of Harrisonville.

In the Third Congressional District Mrs. J. W. McKnight and Mrs. Lee B. Soper have been elected to the State Committee.

FREER COMPETITION WILL REDUCE MILK PRICE, SAYS CUNLIFF

Commissioner Is Unable to See How Charges Coincide and Take Effect at Same Time.

HIGHER HERE THAN IN 10 OTHER CITIES

September Milk Should Not Sell at More Than 16 Cents a Quart, Investigation Shows.

Free competition among milk-distributing firms would materially reduce the price paid for milk by St. Louis consumers, which is higher than the price in at least 10 other American cities no more favorably located. Every increase of 1 cent a quart in the price of milk represents a charge of $370,000 a year upon the people of St. Louis. The August price of milk, 15 cents a quart, is "reasonably high," and the price for September should not exceed 16 cents a quart.

These are the chief conclusions in the report on the milk situation, made by Park Commissioner Cunliff to Director Schmoll of the Department of Public Welfare, after an investigation, and forwarded by Schmoll to Mayor Kiel yesterday.

"My investigation," Cunliff says, "has not disclosed any definite agreement as to uniform price-fixing on the part of St. Louis dairymen. However, I must confess I have not been able to understand how all of the dairies are able to decide on definite prices independently, which prices always coincide and all of which take effect at the same time. I believe that were there freer competition on the part of the large dairies in St. Louis the price of milk would be very materially reduced.

Bottles Cause Loss.

"Duplication of routes and elimination of bottle breakage would do much towards reducing the cost of operation. One-third of one cent per quart in the cost of milk is represented in theft and breakage of milk bottles."

The Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association, from which the St. Louis distributing firms get most of their supply, is a price-fixing organization, the report declares. It has 4600 members, living not only in Illinois, but in Missouri, and it supplies more than 90 per cent of the milk used in the city. The report declares:

"The benefits derived by the members consist solely in the fixing of prices, by collective bargaining. The fact that milk producers in Missouri are qualified for membership, and actually belong to the organization of Illinois farmers, indicates very strongly, if it does not prove conclusively, that the principal object of the organization is to control the price of milk to the St. Louis dairies, as we can see no other purpose that a Missouri milk producer would have in belonging to an organization of Illinois milk producers."

Vote Taken on Prices.

The method of this price-fixing is described. The association has 90 locals, each of which meets about the fifteenth of each month. A vote is taken by each local as to the price, the result of the vote is forwarded to the milk committee of the association, and the figures from the 90 locals are averaged. The milk committee, however, has power to change the figure thus reached if the price seems too high or too low. The price determined upon by the milk committee is presented to the St. Louis dealers, and a compromise figure is usually arrived at, which is the uniform price for 100 pounds (11.63 gallons) of milk to all dairymen in the St. Louis district.

The report says that, "with few exceptions, the dairy business in St. Louis has not been very efficiently conducted. With modern equipment, modern plants, modern methods of doing business, the operating cost could be materially decreased. St. Louis is big enough to command better methods of marketing milk than we now have. In the city of Chicago milk is received bottled, iced, etc., at local distributing points; the matter of pasteurizing, bottling, etc., is taken care of at the various receiving stations, near the producers. In Chicago a firm has been organized by the distributors and producers to take care of all excess milk, which will have a tendency toward reducing the cost."

Government Reports Cited.

United States Government reports are cited to show that the July price of milk in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Seattle and Salt Lake City was 2 cents a quart less than the price for the same month in St. Louis; and that the price in Philadelphia, Toledo, Indianapolis, Denver and Lincoln, Neb., was 1 cent less than in St. Louis.

"We see no reason," the report says, "why these cities could furnish milk to the consumer for less than in St. Louis, as St. Louis is in the

TREATY'S FRIENDS NOW IN BETTER STRATEGIC POSITION THAN ITS OPPONENTS

Senate Is Expected to Debate on Great Issue Within Next 30 Days—Hitchcock Confident.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1919.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Nearly two months have elapsed since President Wilson brought back the treaty of peace from Europe. And the pact which took six feverish months to draft and bring agreement among 20 nations is still unratified by the United States. Great Britain and Belgium have ratified it, but France is waiting for the United States, and so is Japan. The American Senate will vote on the issue within the next 30 days.

Looking back over the erratic though persistent course adopted by those who sincerely believe the treaty ought not to be ratified, even though it means a new peace conference at Paris, a survey of the situation today reveals the opponents of the treaty in a much more dangerous position, strategically speaking, than its defenders.

Two weeks ago it was the friends of the treaty who thought their chances of getting the treaty ratified without reservations were slim, but, unless the Senate Foreign Relations Committee completely reverses itself, the conclusion is inescapable that defeat is in store for it on several important points, including Shantung.

Do Not Like Shantung Provision.

There is no question that a large number of Senators, including many Democratic supporters of the President, do not like the Shantung settlement, but it is also true that they do not believe the way to secure a revision of that settlement is by reconvening the peace conference at Paris—for they do not believe Shantung is worth it. They would prefer, however, a separate declaration by the United States which would voice disapproval and put squarely on the league of nations the responsibility of lifting China out of the clutches of all the foreign Powers who have despoiled her territory and grabbed her riches.

It is not forgotten that President Wilson, when he received the Senate Foreign Relations Committee at the White House took the position that foreign Powers would not now be occupying Chinese territory if there had been a league of nations in the past.

Mr. Wilson himself admits he does not like the Shantung award, but looks to Japan to right it and the league of nations to bring about a revision if Japan should not voluntarily do so.

To date scores of changes have been made in the text of the treaty by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. But when the treaty is reported to the Senate next week it will be read article by article and it will become unnecessary for the Senators to watch carefully their votes for as they vote they will not merely find it necessary to justify their disapproval of clauses on the treaty but to justify the sending back of the treaty to international conference.

Senators Puzzled.

Many Senators are puzzled. They would like to see certain reservations made which do not affect the text itself, but make clear the limit of America's obligations particularly as to the use of force in the future.

Senator Hitchcock is confident that as each article is voted upon there will be enough Republicans joining with the 45 Democrats to beat every amendment of text that is offered. He doesn't seem to be as sure of getting a two-thirds vote for a ratifying resolution that contains no reservations at all.

There's where the fight will be close. Some of the reservations proposed would not in the end be unacceptable to the President for they are apparently regarded by him as clarifying language already in the treaty and which merely for the sake of caution would be explicitly stated in the ratifying resolution.

But as the eight or nine Republicans who have stood for amendments of the text of the treaty are defeated by the series of votes which it is admitted now will be against them, the moral effect of the reverses may weaken their demand for reservations that are called "reservations," but are in effect amendments of text. It would be a mistake to give the impression that the Republican party as a whole is opposed to any league of nations or to an early ratification of the peace treaty.

Many wise heads in the Republican side of the Senate are questioning the wisdom of the tactics pursued by their eight colleagues who are trying to commit the party to the defeat of both the league of nations and peace treaty.

A majority of Republicans, if confronted by the alternative of the treaty and league as they stand, or no league at all, would vote for the pact as represented by President Wilson.

It is their desire for reservations which is receiving attention on the Democratic side, for their arguments have had more effect than have those of the irreconcilable opponents of the whole thing. The Democratic lines were inclined to waver a week ago, but they seem to have been propped up by the sight of Republican policy in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. As soon as the Democrats saw the Republicans going the limit on the Shantung provisions and other textual changes in the treaty, they decided to stand for no amendments.

Eventually there will be a coalition between the majority of the Republicans who want to see the treaty ratified with reservations and the Democrats who will seek to reduce to a minimum the number of reservations put into the ratifying resolution.

It is really only a question of another month or two at the latest before the treaty will be ratified, and President Wilson's tour of the country is expected to contribute substantially to the result, as he plans to explain to the American people that the present high cost of living is largely due to the disturbed condition of Europe, a condition which he thinks will tend to become better only when peace has come and reconstruction is begun in earnest. Whether the people will accept his view or the view of the Republicans who will trail him and say that our present troubles are due to neglect by Mr. Wilson when he went abroad, remains to be seen.

PASSENGER TRAFFIC GREATER THAN DURING WORLD'S FAIR

Travel Through Union Station During Summer Surpasses All Records for City.

Travel through Union Station during August has surpassed all records in passenger traffic of St. Louis, since the union terminal system was established. During the past week the station midway was thronged and the crowds at the ticket office were larger than those seen when excursions were a part of the system, with low round-trip rates and other inducements to encourage business.

General Manager Ira L. Burlingame of the Terminal Association, who receives reports daily, said yesterday that June, July and August showed a heavier average passenger movement through the station than any day of the World's Fair period, which had previously held the high record.

The present heavy travel is attributed largely to the return of St. Louisans from their vacation trips. Many of these returns were hastened by the fear that a railroad strike would break at any time, leaving the sojourners far from home, with train service suspended.

Aside from the vacationists, the buyers for the fall and winter seasons have been coming in larger numbers than usual and have contributed largely to the rush at the station.

REPORTS FIGHTING AT KRONSTAD

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 30.—There has been severe fighting in the streets and public squares of Kronstad, the Bolshevik naval base near Petrograd, according to dispatches from Copenhagen.

Bodies were seen lying in the thoroughfares by allied airmen the advices add.

WOMAN IS SENTENCED TO LIFE TERM IN PRISON

Mrs. Ryan, Convicted of Murder, Unable to Speak in Court.

Formal sentence of life imprisonment in the State Penitentiary yesterday was imposed by Circuit Judge Hartmann upon Mrs. Minnie Ryan, 44 years old, 120 Lombard street, who was convicted on Aug. 19 of the murder of Frederick Roetger, a teamster. Witnesses declared that they saw Mrs. Ryan pour kerosene on Roetger as he sat asleep in a chair and then touch a match to his clothing. The life sentence was fixed by a jury. It was the first imposed on a woman in St. Louis in 35 years.

Mrs. Ryan displayed no emotion during her trial, but when the sentence was pronounced she attempted to a year or two in the workhouse. came. She was dressed in the gingham house dress she has worn since her arrest on July 5.

She has appeared to be friendless. No one visited her during the interval between her arrest and trial. To newspaper reporters she said that she was unable to read or write and could send no word to persons she desired to see. She said that the few who did visit her gave her the belief that she would be sentenced to a yar or two in the workhouse. "I did not expect to spend the rest of my life in prison," she said.

The murder of Roetger occurred on June 29. Mrs. Ryan declared that she threw a lighted lamp at Roetger after he had abused her and threatened her life.

UPPER VALLEY NOT ACQUAINTED WITH STEEL BARGE LINE

Minneapolis and Other Shippers Have Only Vague Suggestion of River Service South of St. Louis.

KNOW VALUE OF CHEAP WATER ROUTE

Manager of Government Service Seeking to Overcome the Ignorance That Handicaps River Revival.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 30.—This city has sent a distress call to the regional director of the Railroad Administration for more freight cars to bring the 1919 wheat crop to its flour mills, and more freight cars to carry building material to the farmers who are marketing their wheat and have money to make farm improvements.

Meanwhile moss is growing on the $300,000 dock wall which the city built on the Mississippi River when the Government spent $1,500,000 to build a dam making the depth of water such that steamboats could safely come to Minneapolis.

That was four years ago, and Minneapolis since has not heard the toot of a river freighter, and the acclaim of the citizens that four years ago greeted the efforts at river revival since has fallen to dubious head-shakings. Minneapolis is without hope that the river can be the outlet of her productiveness, and is turning her ear to those new enthusiasts, recently in convention at Duluth, who are planning a deep, short route by the lakes to the sea, via a canal connecting Lake Huron with the St. Lawrence.

"We are treading a circle so far as the river is concerned," one river advocate said. "Our Board of Aldermen says it will spend no more for docks until it sees a steamboat in the offing. We are told that no boats can come until the channel is made. Congress won't make a channel until cities show interest by building terminals. There we are."

Ignorant of Rail-River System.

It frequently has been stated publicly in St. Louis that the success of the experiment of river revival now in progress between St. Louis and New Orleans is dependent upon whether the new fleet of Government barges and towboats is given capacity cargo. It has been as frequently stated that St. Louis cannot produce that capacity cargo, and must draw by rail upon the territory north in the valley of its products. In fact, rail and river rates permitting the Minneapolis shipper to send his goods by rail to St. Louis and thence by river to New Orleans at the same time saving for the river haul that the St. Louis shipper gains have been promulgated to bring that freight.

Yet a visit among half a dozen of the larger exporting industries of Minneapolis revealed that not one knew of the existence of this service. One or two knew in a vague way that a barge line was operating but each had a vision of old-time steamboat operation, uncertainties of service and exposure to the weather. None knew that steel barges with deck houses more weather-tight, more secure than any freight car constituted the service. None knew that he could load for export at his factory door, receive his export bill of lading, secured by the United States Government, and forget all worry in the knowledge that the shipment would be taken over by the barge at St. Louis and delivered to the ocean carrier at New Orleans with no added expense to himself.

None knew that if the lower river barge fleet was made a success that a similar fleet upon the upper river would become a moral certainty even if private capital must finance it. None knew that unless they did contribute their frieght to the lower barge fleet, it might fail, and with the failure would fade the whole possibility of use of the river for another 50 years.

Knew Nothing of Steel Barges.

John Pillsbury, vice-president of the Pillsbury Flour Mills, said: "We saw the advantage of a cheap water route to the gulf so clearly that we gave a whole barge load to a revivalist who brought a carrier to Minneapolis. The flour went south under tarpaulins and we lost the whole cargo." He knew nothing of steel barges and steel cargo houses.

Pillsbury's traffic manager said: "Our product will not stand the rough transfer." He did not know that St. Louis had provided a dock over which a transfer by mechanical means is as gentle as the swinging of a hammock in a zephyr.

Minneapolis and the upper valley is ignorant of the character of the barge service now being provided for them on the lower river, as a forerunner of similar service to be extended to the upper river, thus completing the revival of the river, from its head of navigation to the gulf."

REAL ESTATE MEN DISCLAIM WISH TO PROFITEER IN RENTS

and did not show marked increase until a few months ago. Nor do they appreciate that the owners have been paying increased costs of repairs and taxes, city, State and Federal, besides their own high cost of living, for all the years before rents rose, and that they are justly entitled to some return from previous loss, and from the now belated rise."

It is conceded that the rise in rents, having come so late, "the last train of woes born of the world war," constitutes "a most disagreeable surprise to the tenant, who, without stopping to weigh the situation carefully, raises the popular cry of 'profiteering.' * * * Have not the city employes received increases of pay, and are they not still pressing for more? Are they profiteering?"

The memorial states that the realty owners of St. Louis are by far its largest tax payers, besides being among the heaviest contributors to State and national incomes. It is asked whether the city, by pursuing "a narrow, demagogical policy," wishes to discourage building, and it is pointed out that the investor willing to put his money into a large apartment structure may well pause, "if the daily papers teem with protest against rent profiteers and the City Assessor issues threats of increased taxation."

CUSTOM-BUILT CARS NOW IN DEMAND IN ST. LOUIS MOTOR FIELD

Motorists more well-to-do seek individuality in the design and appearance of their motor car in the same fashion that originality and individuality is sought in dress. A man or woman is now as proud of exhibiting a motor car belonging to them with none other like it on the highway as milady is of displaying a new gown.

St. Louisans who have ideas of their own on automobile designs are now having custom-built bodies constructed on various standard chassis of their choosing.

There is now on display at the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis a custom-built Berlin coupe made to order for the president of a leading wholesale dry goods house in St. Louis. It is constructed on a Cadillac chassis of the special 145-inch wheelbase type made expressly for ambulance and similar duties. This same chassis has been adopted by carowners in the East because of the longer wheelbase for use in special built enclosed bodies.

The body was built in the factory of the Cadillac Automobile Co of Chicago according to specifications furnished by the St. Louis company.

The seating capacity is for five passengers with plenty of room.

The upholstery is of imported French broadcloth in gray with the interior decorations in the same material. The interior of the windows is trimmed in strips of ivory. Interior metal trimmings are of sterling silver.

The car has the appearance of a Rolls-Royce automobile and might be taken as such if it were not for the Cadillac crest that appears on the hub caps. The radiator and lines of the hood resemble those of the Rolls-Royce. It is painted a French gray with trimmings in black. Two spare wheels which are of wire construction are carried in two racks, one on each running board opposite the driver's seat. A compartment in the rear accommodates four suit cases for touring purposes.

J. J. MacGregor, manager of the Cadillac Automobile Co. of St. Louis said he is building several other bodies of special design for St. Louisans, no two of which are to be alike. It is part of the contract he said that these models not be duplicated.

AUTO INSURANCE ON MONTHLY PAYMENT PLAN

Motorists may now purchase automobile insurance on the monthly payment plan, according to the announcement of B. L. Easton, formerly manager of the automobile insurance department of the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Co., who has resigned from that position to go in business for himself.

It is Easton's belief that many motorists would prefer to purchase automobile insurance on the monthly premium plan in preference to paying a year's premium in advance, which is now the custom. He said he formerly was connected with the automobile trade.

24 Glasses of Rum in an Hour.

LONDON.—An old miner at Gateshead, charged with attempted suicide, admitted that he drank 24 glasses of rum in an hour.

JUICE OF LEMONS FOR TAN, FRECKLES

Girls! Make harmless bleaching lotion at home for few cents.

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! New Furniture that is daily arriving is attracting much attention.

Our Furniture Salons are of more interest now than ever before—it is just now that we are receiving the full benefit of the re-opening of the manufacturing plants after the war. After having been compelled to remain closed for so long it seems as though every bit of reserve energy has been put into the beauty, art and quality of the new stock.

It would be an impossibility to describe in so small a space even one-third of the lovely suites and individual pieces on display, but two very representative Suites are

A Hepplewite Dining-Room Suite of 9 pieces of brown mahogany. It is elegant enough for the most exclusive home and yet would give an air of distinction to any dining room. The table is square and extension style with one arm chair and 5 straight chairs upholstered in harmonious colors. The serving table is oval shaped and has an entire front enclosure. Both it and the gracefully shaped large sideboard are conveniently fitted with the necessary cupboards and drawers. The price is $1875.00

A New Bedroom Suite of the Louis XVI period that would add charm to any bedroom is of mahogany finished in a soft gray enamel artistically shaded in darker gray and decorated in carved festoons of shaded roses. The twin beds, chiffonette, vanity dresser, open writing table, cane bench, one straight chair and one rocker complete the suite which is priced $730.00

But the beauty of this furniture would be as nothing if it were not supported by quality—Vandervoort quality which has for years been of the highest.

◖ For a number of days great demands have been made upon us for new Autumn merchandise, many acting upon our advice of a week ago "We Advise Early Autumn Buying."

◖ For many weeks past a great wealth of Autumn merchandise has been arriving and Autumn stocks are now ready; much of this merchandise cannot be obtained again and practically none to sell again at present prices.

◖ Never before in the history of our 69 years of merchandising has it seemed so important that we advise our patrons to buy early, but this season presents a peculiar situation, and very much of the good quality merchandise if not purchased early, will not be obtainable and the result will be a great disappointment.

◖ The store will remain closed all day tomorrow in order that our employes may enjoy the Labor Day celebrations. Events advertised in today's papers are scheduled for Tuesday and additional news will be found in Tuesday morning's papers.

◖ Improvements and Expansions throughout the store are progressing rapidly and will be completed shortly—these improvements will greatly aid us in caring for the daily increasing business and enable this great St. Louis-owned institution to render a full measure of "Vandervoort Service."

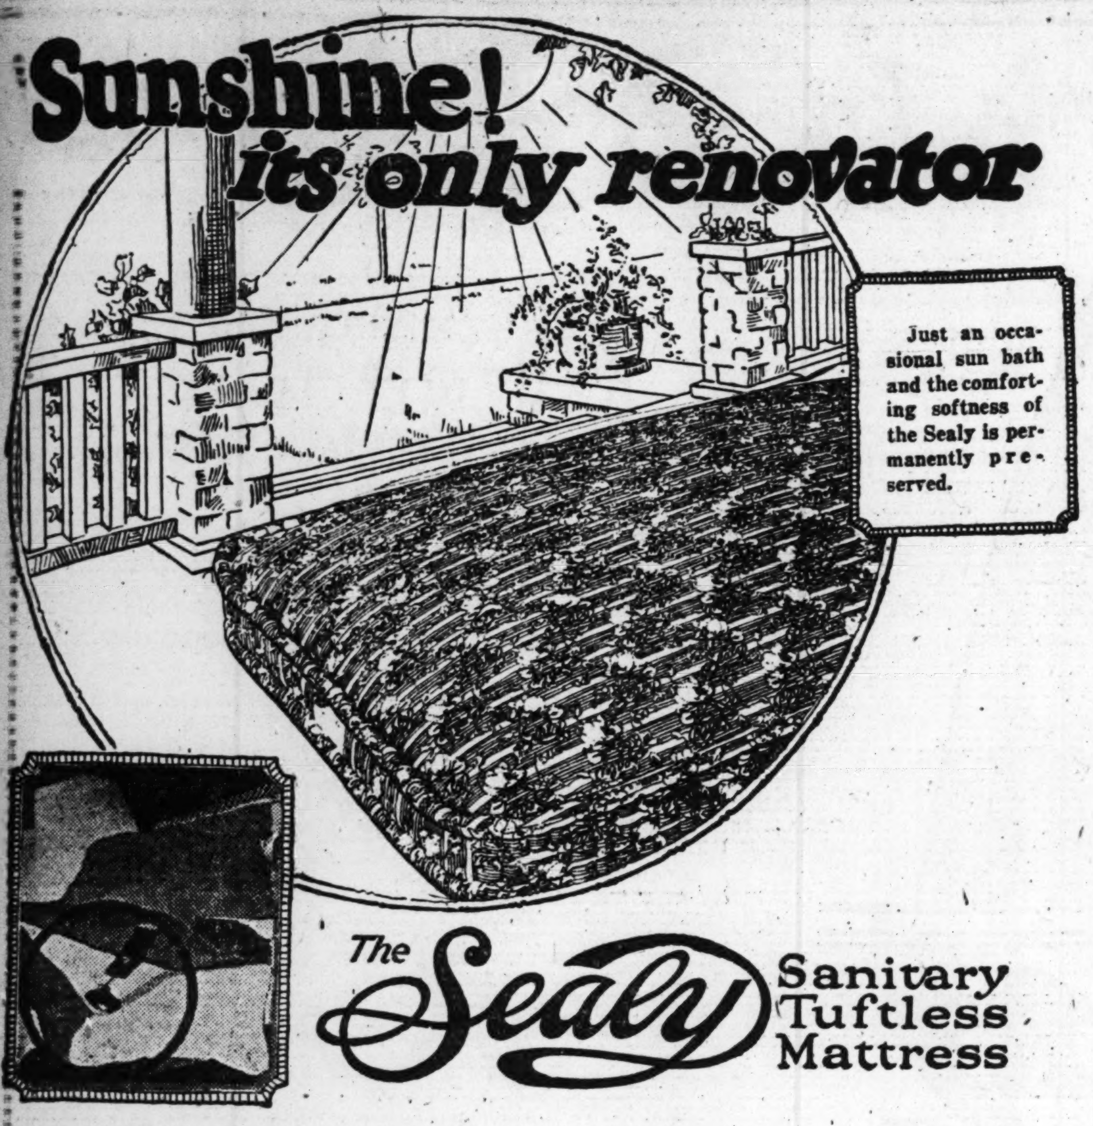
Sunshine! its only renovator



Just an occasional sun bath and the comforting softness of the Sealy is permanently preserved.

This illustration shows a section taken from a 25-year-old Sealy Sanitary Tuftless Mattress. The soft Sealy Cotton, still sensitive to the weight of a watch, showed that this mattress had by no means reached its limit of usefulness.

The Sealy Sanitary Tuftless Mattress

This is the mattress of greatest economy as well as greatest comfort. Sunshine is its only renovator.

An occasional sun bath such as you would ordinarily give any mattress to keep it dry, also preserves the original comforting softness and body conforming resiliency of the Sealy. It retains these essentials of perfect relaxation indefinitely.

The long fibre, sanitary, prize cotton of which the Sealy is made; quickly responds to the action of the sun's rays in much the same manner as a flower turns toward the light. The Sealy is practically immune to the effects of time and constant use as told by the accompanying illustration at the left and the facts relating to it.

But like the Original Sealy, each is made of NEW material, sweet, clean—fit for the body, and each bear a label guaranteeing its quality and the character of its contents. ARMY DOCTORS PREPARE FOR CONVENTION HERE

Association of Military Surgeons Will Meet in St. Louis Oct. 13.

Commencing Oct. 13, and continuing three days, St. Louis will entertain the most notable convention of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States, since that organization was formed, some 18 years ago. Something like 32,000 doctors who gave their services to the Government in the late war, thereby made themselves eligible for membership, and it is expected that a large percentage of this number will be enrolled. At the beginning of the greatest war in the world's history, there were but 400 entitled to membership.

The arrangements for the gathering have been placed in the hands of Dr. Nathaniel Allison of this city, who served in France in orthopedic surgical work, and won the rank of Colonel, and he is being aided by Dr. Malvern B. Clopton, who was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Barnes Hospital Unit, which was one of the first to go abroad after this country made its formal war declaration.

The program thus far arranged calls for the first session at 8:30 o'clock Monday, Oct. 13. The sessions will be spent in scientific work, chiefly with the reading of papers and discussions of the subjects thus treated. The extraordinary experience furnished by the war is expected to bring out some important discoveries, which have previously been withheld by the army surgeons.

Learn New Lessons.

Previous to the world's war, the experience of the army surgeons was necessarily limited, but with the raising of an army of more than 4,000,000, a vast field was created for the exercise of professional skill. What lessons were gathered from this service are expected to be told in the convention.

A circular recently issued by Surgeon-General M. W. Ireland of the United States Army, earnestly advises all the members of the profession who offered their services when volunteers were asked, to become members, and the expectation is that a great many will accept. This is why an unusually large number is looked for at the convention to be held in this city. The Surgeon-General, Col. James R. Church, and other members of the medical section of the army, are coming, and will participate in the program that is now being perfected. That the leading officers of the organization figure on a busy three days, is evident from the fact that there is little disposition to spend much of this time in entertainment. There will be an afternoon at Jefferson Barracks, and probably another at the medical schools.

St. Louis Physicians Invited.

All the St. Louis physicians who were enrolled during the war, including those who were unassigned, have been invited to enter the ranks of the organization. The St. Louis Medical Society, out of a total membership of 850, furnished a total of 320.

The Association of Military Surgeons is an incorporated body and receives the official support of the War Department. In addition to the army, its membership embraces the surgeons of the navy and the physicians in the Public Health Service.

The papers to be read during the convention will it is expected cover a very wide range, and throw some interesting sidelights on the work of the surgeons who were close to the battlefronts and on duty in the big base hospitals, where wounds of every character demanded immediate skilled attention. In the camps on this side, the greatest trial of the profession came with the Spanish influenza and its lightning-like spread from one cantonment to another. The ravages of this epidemic and the means employed to check its spread is expected, as a matter of course, to receive the attention its importance warrants in the discussions of the soldier-doctors.

"DANCING GIRL" LURES "Y" WORKERS FROM THEIR CAMP

Boat With Significant Name Has Jazz Band That Tickles Toes of Church Workers.

HOLLISTER, Mo.—When "The Dancing Girl," a big barge, came steaming down White River right by the Y. M. C. A. camp near Hollister, the jazz band jazzing to beat the best efforts of the choristers of the famous summer retreat, many of the young folks of this religious order could not resist the temptation. That rolling, syncopating melody of the ship's musical organization just made them decide they would have to try out the measures on the boat's dance floor.

Accordingly when "The Dancing Girl," took anchor at the "Y" landing a lot of dancing youngsters, who evaded their chaperons and sterner objectors to the light fantastic, slipped aboard and made an evening of it.

What it did to the rules of the two sectarian camps was a-plenty. The next day a number of young men and women exercised all of the diplomacy they had penned up in their beings squaring themselves with the management of the Y. M. C. A. camp. It is reported they made good.

"The Dancing Girl," has been brought here to stir up a good time on Lake Taneycomo from Branson and Hollister to the dam.

Lift Off Corns!

Doesn't hurt! Lift touchy corns and calluses right off with fingers

Apply a few drops of "Freezone" upon that old, bothersome corn. Instantly that corn stops hurting. Then shortly you lift it right off, root and all, without pain or soreness.

Hard corns, soft corns, corns between the toes, and the hard skin calluses on bottom of feet lift right off—no humbug!

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH AUTOMOBILE NEWS

SUNDAY MORNING, AUGUST 31, 1919.

To Creve Coeur Lake Is a Pleasant Trip With Good Roads All the Way

Fishing Season at Its Height in September—Creve Coeur Lake Park to Close for Season —Numerous Accommodations Provided for Motorists With Basket Lunch.

SEPTEMBER is said to be the month of the year when fishing is best at Creve Coeur Lake where entertainment is in quantity and varied for the motorist in search of a site for an outing within little more than an hour's ride from the Post-Dispatch building.

The distance, by way of the route suggested, for the round trip is approximately 50 miles. This mileage may be reduced materially by going out the Olive street road directly to Craig road thence to Creve Coeur Lake. The suggestion which includes Natural Bridge road is given for those motorists who would prefer going by a different way, than they return, with road conditions equally good but affording additional scenery.

The roads are in good condition the entire distance being hardsurfaced and oiled for the most part. There are two short stretches of dirt road on Fee Fee road and Creve Coeur Lake mill road but they are solid and far from unpleasant to travel upon at this season.

From Marine avenue there is a hardsurfaced road that leads to Creve Coeur Lake Park at the end of the trolley car line. There is a large picnic grounds there where automobiles may be parked. On these grounds there are also tables and benches for picnickers neath the shade trees with swings and seesaws, for the entertainment of children.

High Observation Tower.

In the park there is an observation tower 255 feet high with an elevator that carries passengers to the top where a view extending for miles is to be had from a platform with high railing. The tower is built at the end of the car line on high ground and stands 407 feet above the water level of the lake. It has been a landmark in this part of the county for years.

There is also a pavilion where meals and chicken dinners are served. Other attractions include a merry-go-round, miniature railway, dance floor, shooting gallery, refreshment stand and various other concessions.

A scenic railway operates from the top of the bluff to a picnic grounds and amusement park on the lake side at the foot of the bluff. New concrete steps with iron railings are a recent improvement which reduces the task for those who prefer to walk in getting up and down the steep hillside. In former years this was but a cinder path. Electric lights are provided at short intervals.

Last Sunday of Season.

Today is the last Sunday that motorists will be able to avail themselves of the concessions at Creve Coeur Lake Park, as it is the custom to close the season on Labor Day. John L. Mier, manager, said Creve Coeur Lake Park will close according to custom tomorrow night.

To reach the lakeside at the foot of the bluff continue straight ahead on Marine avenue instead of turning to the right as signs direct to Creve Coeur Lake Park. At the foot of a long-winding grade there is a fork in the road on nearing the lake. The left road continues for about a quarter mile along the lake passing an amusement park with concessions similar to the one at the end of the car line. They are both under the same management. At a boathouse on the lake front at this point, flat bottomed fishing boats, rowboats and canoes may be rented. Launches leave this landing every [illegible]0 minutes for various other landings about the lake. There are two launches in the service, one has a capacity of 100 passengers and a smaller one carries 25 persons. For a quarter of a mile along the lake front in this vicinity there has been erected a wall several feet high of rock and concrete. Grass plots run to the water's edge with benches here and there, making an ideal location for pole and line fishing.

The road to the right passes a large picnic grounds on the right where there are also swings for the children and benches and tables for a family spread.

Water Lilies in Bloom.

To the left just beyond—and at the point where the rock wall along the shore of the lake ends there is a large tract of water lilies. Last week-end many of the blossoms were in bloom. From here on there are numerous camping sites on the lake shore and in the woods adjacent to the road where camping parties are frequent. After crossing the railroad track turn left on Creve Coeur Lake mill road, passing over a bridge just beyond. Turn left at end of road crossing railroad shortly beyond. Road parallels railroad for several miles.

Several lake resorts on the west shore are passed on this stretch of road to the left. At Eldorado Park there is a beach for bathing purposes. Suits may be hired at the bath-house. There is a parking area provided for automobiles and tables with benches are situated on a lawn shaded by a grove of trees for those bringing their own basket lunches. There is a boat landing at both of these resorts where the launches make regular stops. Meals are not served at either resort this season, but light luncheons and refreshments may be had.

Just beyond to the right is the entrance to the St. Louis County Fairgrounds and the resort on Upper Creve Coeur Lake.

To reach Studt's Park, which is situated at the end of the Creve Coeur Lake branch of the Missouri Pacific Railway, turn left shortly beyond this point at Benbush Station, which was formerly named Colman Station, on cinder road which becomes a dirt road after a short distance, ascending a long grade through a cut. Pass home of Jacob Studt on left, meeting fork in road not far beyond. Take left road through gate, down a winding road that is rather steep at points and narrow.

Chicken Dinners a Specialty.

Regular meals are served daily. Chicken dinners are a specialty. For persons desiring to stop over the week-end there are limited hotel accommodations. There is a boathouse located here where passengers are discharged and taken aboard in trips of 20 minutes' interval. Boats for fishing purposes are also for rent. Studt's Park is about a one-mile walk from the end of the car line. The road is not passable along the east shore of the lake for automobiles beyond a quarter of a mile. On this side of the lake there are also many picturesque and inviting points that attract the attention of picnickers who walk from the end of the car line, which is about a mile to Studt's Park.

Anslyn said fishing has been poor during the last six weeks, due to the fish spawning. The spawning season is about over, he said, and fishing should be good during the month of September. He said fishermen in years past have made their best catches during September and he believed this the best month for the sport at Creve Coeur Lake. The varieties of fish caught include crappie, bass, sun perch, catfish and jack salmon.

RESTING IN THE SHADOWS OF THE NEW CAPITOL AT JEFFERSON CITY

THE automobile trade of St. Louis, through the efforts of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association and the Production Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, accomplished three important factors it is conceded as a result of the St. Louis Motor Truck Expedition which journeyed 485 miles over good and bad roads in going to the Missouri State Fair at Sedalia, where the 25 trucks took part in the exercises of "Ship by Truck day."

These factors are:

1. The demonstration of the success of motor truck transportation and the "ship-by-truck" idea to many who did not know the capabilities of a motor truck before or possibly were in doubt.

2. The need for better highways, for though motor trucks may travel on any kind of roads, to travel efficiently the roads must be durable and not rough.

3. The beneficial publicity that St. Louis as a business center received.

Residents of the rural communities and towns on the route all of which is in St. Louis territory, were not backward in expressing their appreciation that St. Louis had gone thus far to help them help themselves.

NEW MODELS

JORDAN "PLAYBOY"

A model of the new Jordan Playboy in Burgundy old wine arrived at the St. Louis Motor Car Co. last week, having been shipped by express, and was placed in the showroom with little delay. The Playboy carries two passengers with a swanky seat in a cockpit behind for a third. The upholstery is hand-buffed leather with narrow French pleats. Marshall cushion springs are used in the seat. The motor is of six cylinders cast in block, with 3½x5¼ bore. A special spring shackle is part of the regular equipment to eliminate rattles. Lamps are attractively mounted on the inside of the front fenders. Disc or wire wheels are provided at extra cost.

LIBERTY SEDAN

A five-passenger sedan model in Liberty green of the new Liberty car arrived during the last week at the Briscoe Motor Sales Co., where it may be seen in the showrooms.

It is built as an all-purpose, all-year motor car of the four-door type which permits independent entrance to either compartment. With the one exception of the window at the rear, all windows may be lowered. A heater is part of the car's equipment, assuring comfort during cold weather. The interior is upholstered in velour in harmony with the exterior color scheme. There are silk shades to

Missouri Plans to Launch Greatest Road-Building Era in Her History in 1920

Approximately $40,000,000 in Good Road Bonds Already Proposed and in Many Instances Voted Upon.

With approximately $40,000,000 in bonds voted upon and proposed at elections to be held in various counties in the near future, Missouri is expected to launch into the greatest road building era of her history during the early part of 1920.

The apex of the movement to submit projects for State and Federal aid, according to Alexander W. Graham, State Highway Engineer, will not be reached until later in the year.

According to the report of State Highway Engineer Graham to the State Highway Board at its recent meeting in Sedalia, there are 57 road projects in the State, representing 824 miles on which surveys are now being made. He stated that there are in the neighborhood of 60 projects in their preliminary stages of formation and which will be under survey within a short time. There are nine projects, representing 102 miles, on which the surveys have been completed. Six Federal aid projects under the new law are now under construction, and 57 State aid projects started under the former law are still under way.

Large Expenditure in Sight.

The estimated average cost per mile of the work now going on, according to State Engineer Graham, is about $7000 and represents hard surfaced construction of different types. If this average cost of building is maintained, the 824 miles now being surveyed will demand an expenditure of $5,700,000 for road construction of a durable type, and the project agreements for most of it will be signed within the next eight or 10 months. Adding to that the cost of constructing the 102 miles now already surveyed, a total of $6,500,000 of road building is already within sight for the coming year.

During the last six months bond issues have carried in the State to the total of $11,975,000, and elections to date have been called for issues amounting in the aggregate to $9,297,000 more.

Twenty-four counties and many special road districts are circulating petitions for bond issues totaling $18,058,000. The total of bond issues carried and bonds proposed is approximately $40,000,000.

This road building movement is distributed about equally among the six districts in which the State has been divided by the State Highway Board. A division engineer has been placed in each district to supervise surveys, road construction, map out roads and otherwise act as the agent of the highway department in promoting road building in the State. A survey party of 10 men is at work in each division surveying the 6000 miles of road the new law authorized within the next three years.

Improvements Approved.

The State Highway Board, at its last meeting, approved 11 road projects calling for an estimated expenditure of $938,650 on 58 miles of road. At a previous meeting it approved projects in six counties that will cost about $1,000,000. Now that the Federal Bureau of Public Roads has assigned a resident engineer in Missouri to expedite the road building movement, these projects will be speedily passed upon by the Federal Government, and the contracts for the building will be let shortly. The end of the year will find Missouri building more durable roads than ever before in her history.

Among the projects approved at the last meeting were the following: Nine miles of gravel road in Dunklin County in two directions from Malden, at an estimated cost of $62,600; one and two-thirds miles of bituminous macadam from St. Charles to Harvester, in St. Charles County, at $22,700; nine and one-fifth miles of bituminous macadam on the National Old Trails road acoss the Malta Bend Special Road District in Saline County at a total cost of $168,000; three and one-half miles of gravel on the Potosi-Caledonia road in Washington County, at a cost of $12,000; seven and four-fifths miles of bituminous macadam from Boonville to the Lamine River, in Cooper County, at an estimated cost of $130,000; five and three-tenths miles of bituminous macadam from Sedalia to Smithton on the Southern Highway at a cost of $60,700; 13 miles of bituminous macadam rfom Excelsior Springs to Liberty, at an estimated cost of $324,600; five and one-half miles of bituminous macadam from Boonville east at $88,600, and three miles of bituminous macadam from Lone Jack to the Johnson County line, at a cost of $56,000. The board appropriated the State's share of $1200 a mile for the construction of three miles of bituminous macadam road on the National Old Trails road in Boone County from Columbia and the State's share on 15 miles of concrete road from Charleston to Birds Point, in Mississippi County.

HAVE YOU A LITTLE MOTOR TRANSPORT MAN IN YOUR PAY?

Hundreds of Men Who Drove Cars in War Are Ready for Civilian Jobs.

As a single industry the automobile trade did more than its bit to help win the war. Not only did manufacturers come up to specifications in quantity and quality delivery, but they built better than it was thought they knew how. Proof of this was given the other day when, at an auction of old army cars in France, the British and French bid higher prices for the cars than they cost the American Government new.

An army of men was employed to run these trucks and cars on the firing line.

The rolling stock will be left abroad, but the men are coming back. They are being released daily from the military service, and are returning in large numbers to civilian life. There is no lack of work for them to do. For the fleet of American trucks now coming into use for additional transportation facilities all over the country need just such men—men who have learned how to act in any emergency, who feel almost immediately the idiosyncracies of every motor, who have acquired an efficiency under shell fire that will make them leaders in their work in peace times.

Martin J. Walsh, examiner in charge of the United States Employment Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, 110 North Ninth street, said yesterday there are several hundred of these men in St. Louis who are seeking jobs. Their qualifications fit them for chauffeurs of passenger cars, and both light and heavy commercial trucks.

If you should happen to be in need of such a man or know of someone who does, phone Olive 7240 or Central 756, and state your requirements.

Examiner Walsh said, "to their pre-war ability these men have added the exceptional training and experience of months in active service in France, and I know they can qualify.

BATTERY MEN TO DISCUSS RATES FOR SERVICE

A meeting of the St. Louis Storage Battery Trade Association has been called for Tuesday, Sept. 2, at 6:30 p. m. to be held at American Annex Hotel. A topic to be discussed at the meeting will be the present cost of charging batteries. Figures have been compiled by three of the larger firms in the battery rental business to be presented at the meeting, to determine whether an increase is advisable in rates for re-charging batteries and rental service.

FREE INSTRUCTION TO TEACH HOW TO DRIVE CAR SAFELY

Series of Six Lectures to Be Given for Public Benefit Starting Oct. 22.

In an endeavor to decrease automobile accidents the Central Mississippi Valley Division of the National Safety Council at a meeting at the American Hotel last week adopted a resolution to conduct a series of lectures giving free instruction on the operation of an automobile in the interest of public safety to be held at either the auditorium of the Union Electric Light and Power Co., Twelfth and Locust streets, or at the United Railways Co. assembly hall, at Grand and Park avenues.

The series is to be given in six lectures, starting Oct. 22. Present plans are to give one lecture every two weeks on the second and fourth Wednesdays of the month.

Men and women motorists as well as chauffeurs of passenger cars, commercial cars and trucks are to be invited. Details for the arrangements of the lectures will be determined at a meeting to be held Tuesday, Sept. 9 at the American Hotel.

A committee composed of P. J. Kelleher, general superintendent of the Columbia Transfer Co.; Charles M. Talbert, Director of Streets; Ernest Reeves, secretary of the Automobile Club; Joseph A. Schlecht, president of the Mound City Auto Co., and C. B. Hardin, claim agent of the United Railways Co. is in charge of arrangements.

The subjects for the lectures are: 1. "Traffic Rules and Regulations." 2. "Mechanical Hazards and Efficient Driving." 3. "Hazards of the Streets." 4. "Accidents, Statistics and Reports." 5. "Safe Operation of Automobiles and Motor Trucks." 6. "Qualifications of a Safe and Competent Chauffeur."

A short introductory talk by some person well versed on the subject is to precede each lecture.

MOTOR VEHICLE LIGHTS

TO comply with the law, which requires the lighting of motor vehicle lights a half hour after sunset, motor cars should be lighted this week as follows:

Today	8:04 p. m
Monday	8:02 p. m
Tuesday	8:00 p. m
Wednesday	7:59 p. m
Thursday	7 57 p. m
Friday	7:56 p.m
Saturday	7:54 p. m

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Q. Can you give me the route and the condition of roads to Richland, Mo.? Is it on the Gasconade, and is fishing good?—O. M.

A. The route from St. Louis is out Manchester road to Union, Mo., following the Ozark Trail through Leslie, Rosebud, Owensville, Canaan, Bland, Belle, Bend, Vienna, Dixon, Crocker, Swedeberg and Richland. The roads are reported fair to good with gravel and macadam roads in the majority, though there are some stretches of dirt road. The Gasconade River is within several miles of the town. I have no recent report on catches made at Richland, but fishing there is usually good.

Q. How can one get to De Soto, Ill., by automobile?—A Reader.

A. The route is through East St. Louis, Belleville, Freeburg, New Athens, Marissa, Sparta, Campbell Hill, Ava, Murphysboro, Carbondale, then north six miles to De Soto.

Q. I notice preparations being made for road work on Natural Bridge road between Clara and Union avenues. Is it likely that Natural Bridge road will be closed?—Interested.

A. The Natural Bridge road will not be closed. According to Street Commissioner Talbert the preparations you saw are those of the General Motors Corporation, who are building a 40-foot stretch of concrete road on their property adjoining Natural Bridge road, which they intend dedicating to the city when completed. This stretch will extend for more than a quarter mile between Union and Clara avenues, making Natural Bridge road 100 feet wide at this point. It is the plan to do this work without interfering with traffic.

PATHFINDERS START ON TOUR TO CAPE GIRARDEAU

A small group of motorists headed by Ernest Reeves, secretary of the Automobile Club of St. Louis, departed early yesterday on the pathfinding trip to Cape Girardeau, Mo., where the Automobile Club Reliability Tour will terminate when it is held during the second week in October. The purpose of the trip is to compile a log of the route, road conditions and accommodations available at control points.

The party left King's highway and Forest Park boulevard, which is to be the starting point of the October tour, at 8:30 a. m. yesterday. It was the plan to lunch in Farmington, Mo., and to arrive in Cape Girardeau by night. The route the pathfinders will take is through De Soto, Bonne Terre, Farmington, Ste. Genevieve, Jackson and Cape Girardeau. Returning they will come through Bloomsdale, Festus, Herculaneum and Kimmswick from Ste. Genevieve, Mo.

Those in the pathfinding tour include F. W. Wolffe, driving a Holmes car, Alfred G. Ross, driving a Franklin and B. H. Batte at the wheel of a Buick. They expect to return tonight.

Samuel Plant is chairman and C. B. Nicholson, vice chairman of the touring committee in charge of arrangements for the reliability tour.

AUTO TRADE TO CLOSE DOORS ON LABOR DAY

In accordance with the rules of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association, the automobile salesrooms and service shops of members of the association, and there are 62 in the association, will be closed on Labor day. The rules of the association are to close nights, Sundays and holidays.

PRACTICAL PARAGRAPHS

Brake Squeaks.

Chronic squeaking in the braking system is generally due to dirt that has been imbedded in the lining and is pressed against the drum when the brakes are operated. Usually this dirt may be washed out with kerosene, but if it is so firmly intrenched that it refuses to come out with this treatment a little rosin mixed with castor oil and applied to the bands will cure the trouble.

Short Circuits.

There is frequently danger of short circuits in the battery because of the fact that one of the terminals is located near the metal handle used for lifting the battery. To obviate this danger it is only necessary to slip a short length of rubber tubing over the wire at the point where the contact might be made. To do this the tubing should be split lengthwise, slipped over the wire and taped firmly in place. It is a good plan to follow this practice wherever there is danger of the wires rubbing off their insulation and so establishing a short circuit.

Pipe Cement.

Brown shellac mixed with graphite makes an admirable cement for pipe joints and connections which are subjected to heat and compression. The two ingredients should be mixed to a paste and smeared over the joint needing treatment.

Hinge Lubricant.

Linseed oil mixed with a small amount of graphite is recommended as a lubricant for door hinges and latches, which seldom receive attention in this way. Ordinary cylinder oil has a tendency to run, which is not desirable at this location because the clothes of passengers are likely to come in contact with it.

Cleaning Seat Covers.

Seat covers may usually be cleaned very satisfactorily with a non-alkaline soap and warm water. The best way to carry out the job is to take the covers off and give them a good scrubbing on the board.

Vaseline for Terminals.

The car owner should not forget that ordinary vaseline is perhaps the best medium available for coating battery terminals and connecters. The vaseline has the great advantage of preventing corrosion from acid water that may have been spilled.

PISTON FUNCTIONS IN THE CYLINDER SAME AS SHELL IN CANNON

Piston Rings for the Automobile Govern the Control of Gas the Same as Rotating Band on Ammunition.

The velocity of a shell fired from a gun depends upon, first, the quantity and quality of the explosives used, and second, upon the accuracy of fit of the shell to the entire circumference of the bore of the gun, which governs the control of gas generated from the ignited powder. If the gas escapes between the shell and bore, power and velocity is lost. If the shell fits perfectly, maximum power and velocity are attained.

"Apply this to piston rings as related to cylinders in motors and engines and you have the story in a nutshell," said L. A. Safford, vice president of the McQuay-Norris Mfg. Co. of St. Louis, manufacturers of automobile piston rings.

"All cylinders in gas motors and engines using gasoline are virtually gas guns. When the combustion chamber in a cylinder is filled with gas and it is ignited by a spark, the gas explodes, forcing the piston down. The force or power of the stroke depends upon the equality of tension of the piston rings upon the bore of the cylinder wall.

The most vital function a piston ring must perform in a motor or any type of engine is to give equal tension upon every point of the cylinder wall by exerting an even outward pressure all around at every point.

"Equal tension is the one and only thing that prevents gas or other leakage and loss of power.

"To accomplish this, a piston ring must be constructed so as to have great strength combined with equal expansion and contraction qualities. This is of more importance than using a ring of equal or varying thickness minus the strength for equal tension."

The McQuay-Norris Mfg. Co. have been manufacturing piston rings for automobiles and gas engines for nine years.

The company is now building a large plant in the southwest portion of the city, that will be completed in October, to accommodate increased business.

PLAN TO HOLD GOOD ROAD MEETING IN ST. LOUIS

Members of the Missouri and Kansas groups of the National Highway Council at a recent meeting in Kansas City attended by several St. Louisans resolved to give their support to the good road bill introduced in Congress by Senator Townsend of Michigan.

This bill proposes to create a national highway commission, which as a full-fledged department in Washington shall have full charge of all present highways and in addition shall plan, build and maintain a system of national highways running through every state in the Union, with a comprehensive program, uniting with the various states and counties in developing their road plans, bringing about ultimately a proper system of highways suited to the traffic needs of the country. The bill at present calls for an appropriation of $425,000,000 to be used in highway work over a period of four years and this to be independent of the present Federal aid being given states building good roads.

S. M. Williams of Washington, D. C., chairman of the National Highway Council, spoke on the plans of the organization for the future. A meeting of the Missouri Council is being arranged for the latter part of September, when National Chairman Williams will be in St. Louis. It is the plan to make this meeting a large and enthusiastic good roads event.

St. Louisans elected to office in the Missouri Council at the last meeting are: Harry B. Hawes, vice president; W. A. Lippman and J. C. Travilla, members of the Executive Board.

C. V. Adams of Chillicothe is president and Frank A. Davis, secretary of the Missouri Council.

AUTOMOBILE DEALERS TO HOLD SPECIAL MEETING

A special meeting of the board of directors of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers and Dealers' Association will be held at the Marquette Hotel, at noon, Tuesday, Sept. 2. The possibility of a closed car show this fall will be one of the subjects for discussion. Several of the Eastern cities, notably Detroit, will hold closed car shows in October and November and this has led to the consideration of the matter by the St. Louis association.

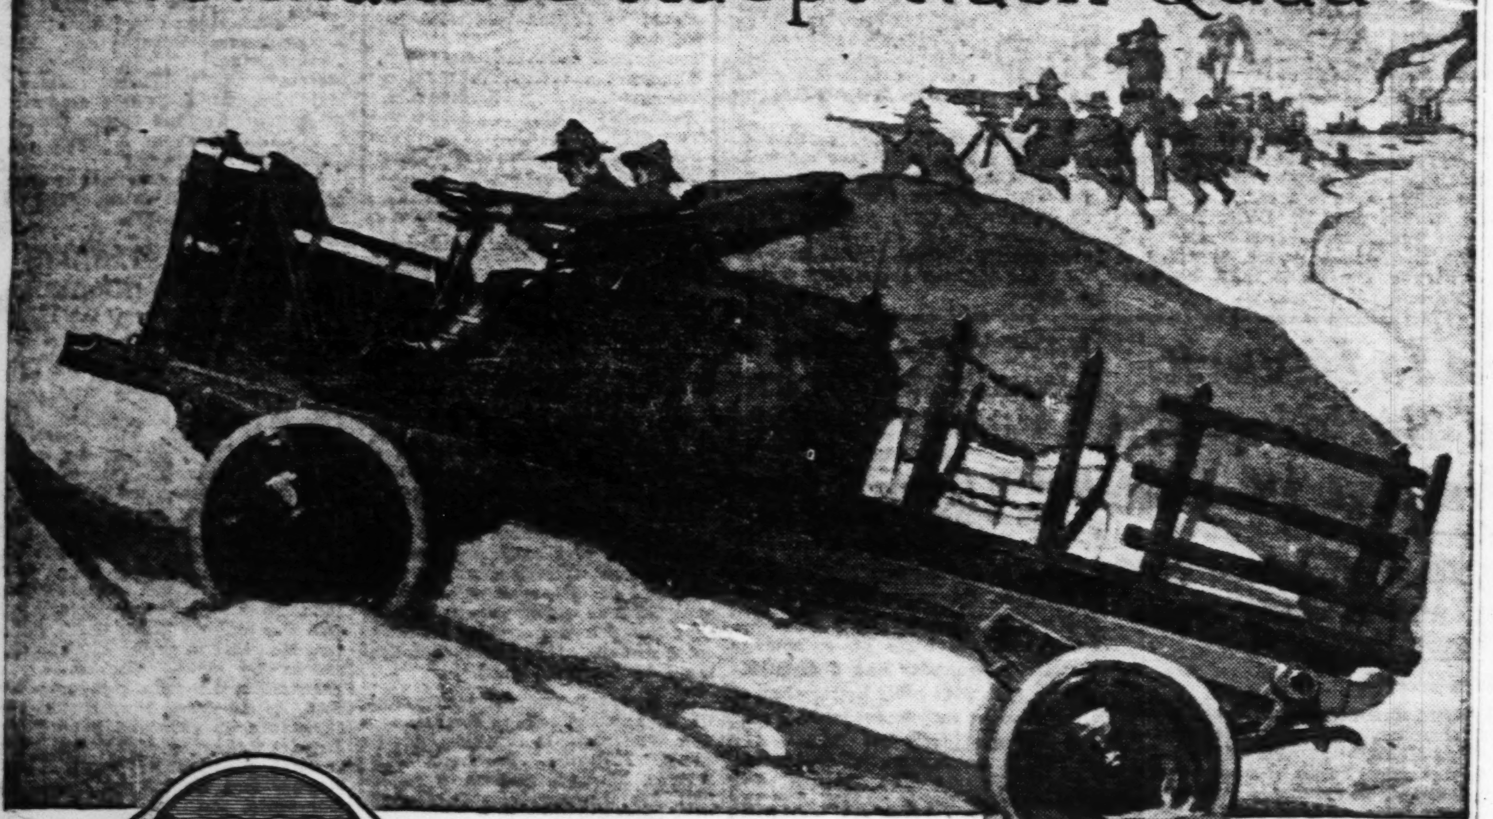
U.S. Marines Adopt Nash Quad



Nash Quad Now Standard Equipment For Marine Expeditionary Service

JOIN the Marines! If you desire to see the world, sign up with this famous branch of Uncle Sam's fighting forces, which in France and elsewhere has won for itself such a high place in the admiration and affection of the American people. Even in so-called peace times, the Marines are constantly on the move from one quarter of the globe to another, keeping order and protecting the interests of America.

THE Nash Quad, with its record for dependable performance in the service of the Allies during the world war, has been selected by the Standardization Board of the U. S. Marine Corps as standard equipment for expeditionary service.

The selection of the Quad as standard equipment for this use was made after the Marine Corps had conducted exhaustive tests of various trucks, had carefully compared data as to performance and reliability, and after it had had an extended experience with more than 400 Nash Quads in actual service.

This means that from now on Nash trucks go wherever the Marines are sent, to bring up munitions and supplies, and to do all the various hauling tasks for these famous fighters of Uncle Sam.

From the Very First Miller Tires Have Been Backed by an Unlimited Guarantee

Miller gave to the world uniform long distance mileage when the first Geared-to-the-Road Tire was built. It was then that limited mileage figures no longer counted. Because even those first Miller tires marked a new era in mileage standards. Never have we altered that mileage. Every tire is built to outrun all makers' guarantees. Each is made up to a standard and not down to a mileage guarantee. And having set that pace, Miller-Geared-to-the-Road tires have kept it.

Therefore if ever a Miller Tire shows an imperfection either in workmanship or material regardless of the mileage run, a fair and liberal adjustment will be made.

The constitution of the Miller Rubber Co., always has provided for maximum mileage into Miller tires, and for giving every purchaser of any of its manufactured rubber products the greatest return for his money. Our entire organization of many thousands of skilled workers is pledged to give you the best of their ability in connection with the finest materials properly handled we can furnish them.

TOURIST IN SIERRAS FINDS A NEW FISHING PARADISE

Climbing over the winding trails of the Sierras to an altitude of 10,400 feet, the highest point in California ever touched by an automobile, an Essex, driven by A. H. Patterson, of Stockon, Cal., reached Saddle Bag Lake, and discovered a new paradise for fishermen, according to T. H. Byrne, sales manager of Hudson-Frampton Motor Co.

Members of the party said the lake which is fed by perpetual snows and has no outlet contained hundreds of monster trout, large schools of them at least three feet in length being clearly seen through the crystal clear waters. As the lake has no outlet, the mystery of the origin of these trout is now agitating California scientists.

"If the trout were planted there," says Mr. Patterson, "old man Noah must have done it, because no man has lived long enough for them to grow to that size."

ARMY CONVOY TO REACH PACIFIC COAST THIS WEEK

Expected to Complete First Lap of 3000 Miles on Wednesday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—Frisco is all set to give Uncle Sam's first transcontinental army truck convoy a mammoth reception next Wednesday when the 3000-mile trip is scheduled to come to a halt. An airplane representing the city will greet the Pacific fleet—scheduled to arrive at the Golden Gate from San Diego and Honolulu Monday—and then swing toward Sacramento to meet and greet the army truck calvacade. A fleet of Frisco motor trucks and passenger cars, accompanied by the United States Marine Band of 40 pieces will escort the army caravan from Carson City, Nev., into San Francisco. Truck loads of California fruit, including oranges, melons, apples and grapes, will be provided the soldiers by the Goodrich Rubber Co.

The 250 doughboys and officers who have manned the trucks, most of whom are overseas veterans, will greet the Pacific coast with enthusiasm nearing that which attended their arrival in America from France. Although the men have been royally entertained in every city and hamlet along the 3000-mile route from Washington, D. C., where the tour started on July 7, the tour has been a tiresome grind and a real test of stamina. Excepting Sundays the program for the past 60 days has been to arise at 5 a. m., clean, oil and inspect motors and then drive until the night control station was reached. Very often the day's journey was not completed until 8 or 9 o'clock at night. Each Monday morning the men began counting the hours until Sunday when they could take a real bath and get a regular night's sleep.

The long trip has been a pronounced success from every standpoint, according to reports from army officers in command. Unusual interest has been aroused in the communities along the route on good roads work. At every stop official speakers accompanying the convoy have lectured on the need of a better national highway system as a means to combat the high cost of living.

Motor transport, engineer corps and artillery officers of the army have collected a wealth of data on topographic and other military phases which will be carefully compiled into permanent army records. The Government assigned a force of signal corps photographers to take a complete moving picture chronicle of the entire trip.

The convoy will arrive in San Francisco just two days later than schedule time. Heavy rains and storms encountered during the last few weeks caused muddy roads and slow going.

COMMITTEE NAMED FOR COMMERCIAL CAR EXHIBIT

ST. LOUIS NASH CO. TO SELL PRODUCTS AT RETAIL

Increasing demand for Nash passenger cars and trucks has resulted in the formation by the Southwest Nash Motor Company of the St. Louis Nash Company to sell Nash products at retail.

Roy Bush is president of the new company, S. W. Ramsey is vice-president and E. W. Arbogast will be general manager of the business, also a director in the company. Mr. Arbogast was chosen for this position because of his well-rounded experience in the automobile business which covers many years in St. Louis and in Chicago, in the distribution at retail of passenger cars and trucks.

The formation of the new company will mean much to owners of Nash products in St. Louis.

"Courteous, prompt and efficient service will be extended to owners of Nash passenger cars and trucks," says Mr. Arbogast "and in this connection, I may state, that real service is one of the most important factors in the merchandising of any commodity; it is the very heart of a successful automobile business.

"A full line of Nash cars and trucks, including the famous Nash Quad which has just been adopted by the United States Marines as the official truck for expeditionary service, will be on display at our sales rooms. In our showrooms will be provided every convenience for Nash owners as well as for those who wish to look over the Nash line of cars."

The Automotive Engineering Co., 4714 Delmar avenue, of which Fred H. Haack Jr. is the new manager, has taken the agency for the Zenith carburetor, a nonadjustable, foolproof instrument, built along foreign lines. Haack was formerly with the Lewis Automobile Co. and Moerschell Electric and Auto Supply Co.

Perfection's Price In Tire Building

A tire-maker's first problem is to decide how much he can give for the money. This, and every other question in tire building, depends upon policies.

A super-tire, such as The Brunswick, can be made only by a concern which knows well and appreciates that there is nothing exclusive in the tire industry except high standards.

Since 1845 the House of Brunswick has held first place in every line it entered. Brunswick Tires, as more and more motorists come to know them, will certainly be awarded that coveted place held only by the superfine.

Motorists who buy one Brunswick usually adopt it for complete equipment. Yet this is not strange, since the first one so completely proves its superiority.

If the name of Brunswick certifies to you, as to most men, an extraordinary tire, at no higher price, would it not be good business to test one or two Brunswick Tires?

TO GATHER DATA ON ROAD CONSTRUCTION

Raymond A. Walsh, formerly managing editor of the St. Louis Times, has resigned that position to become general secretary of the Good Roads Committee of the Automobile Club of St. Louis, of which Harry B. Hawes is chairman.

Walsh established his office last week at Hotel Jefferson in the Automobile Club quarters.

He will leave during the coming week to visit several states where extensive road work has been undertaken to gather data to determine the results of their road building, so that St. Louis County and Missouri in general may profit by the experience of others.

It is the plan of the Good Roads Commitee of the Automobile Club to co-operate wherever possible with the officials of St. Louis County in the development of good roads, Walsh said. A great many members of the Automobile Club have their residences in St. Louis County and are taxpayers there.

AUTO NOTES.

Lee P. Branyen, formerly connected with the sales forces of the Overland Automobile Co., has become city sales manager of the Newell Motor Car Co., Paige and Sterns distributers. Otto E. Dudley, formerly with the Davie Motor Car Co., and Frank B. Wyeth, a former member of the Overland sales force, have both joined the sales force of the Newell Motor Car Co. during the last week.

B. R. Ford, better known in St. Louis as Jack Ford, has returned from service overseas and has rejoined the sales force of the Dodge distributer, the TateGillham Motor Car Co.

The Commonwealth four-cylinder automobile is to be sold in St. Louis by the Knight Motor Co., 3327 Locust street. The company is now showing one of the cars which was driven through from the factory at Joliet by A. A. Knight.

NEW OVERLAND CAR BEING TESTED IN U. S. ARMY CONVOY

Three of the New Models to Be Put on Market This Season Act as Official Scout Cars.

New methods for testing automobiles which are direct development of war experience have been introduced by the Willys-Overland Co. of Toledo, this season.

Realizing that the modern motor car must successfully meet the most extreme riding conditions, the Willys-Overland Co. planned and carried out the idea of subjecting the new light weight car the company has been developing for two years, and which, it is understood, will soon be on the market to tests which would parallel the rough and ready use motor cars in the war zone daily received.

For these tests unusual "breaking machines" have been rigged up and used in the factory, and the cars have then been sent into rough, untraveled country for most grueling road performance.

In the preliminary tests, the new Overland car showed such stamina and riding qualities that it was selected as the official scout car in the first trans-continental test trip of the United States Motor Transport Corps, which started at Washington, D. C., on July 7, and is expected to arrive about Sept. 7 in San Francisco. The route being followed by the Motor Transport Corps is that of the Lincoln Highway.

This transcontinental trip has been undertaken to establish and demonstrate the possibilities of the motor vehicle as a factor in coast-to-coast transportation. It is to serve as a supreme test of the utility and dependability of the modern motor vehicle.

With the army trucks participating in this convoy are three of the light Overland cars, which will be put on the market this season by the Willys-Overland Co. The cars on this tour, according to report, are making a record for comfortable riding qualities, roadability and all-around utility.

The Overland company makes no disclosures as to price or date of the public announcement of the new car, except to say the car will be moderate in price and will soon be delivered to dealers.

NEW MODELS.

match. Other appointments include a dome light, detachable silk robe carrier, walnut cowl board, rain-vision ventilating windshield and rear-view mirror.

WINTON SIX

Two of the new bevel-edge special models of the Winton Six, a seven-passenger touring car in beaver brown and a four-passenger touring car in Persian blue, arrived during the last week at the Von Arx Automobile Co.

The specifications of the mechanical department of both cars is the same, each having a 48-horsepower, six-cylinder motor, with the cylinders cast in pairs.

There are four wide doors, with handles outside. Hinges are concealed. There is plenty of room for full passenger capacity, with deep and easy cushions. The top is one-man type. Jiffy curtains attached inside are quickly put up and down without alighting from the car.

1920 STUTZ

A 1920 Stutz car arrived in St. Louis last week. It is the first of the new cars to be shown here. It is a four-passenger model in gray. There has been no change in the motor, but a slight change has been made in body lines, especially in the cowl, which is made more rounding. One of the new features is a specially designed wire wheel, which will be part of the standard equipment. This wire wheel has an inserted hub cap, eliminating the danger of breaking the lock key which holds the wheel in place.

The complete line embraces a seven-passenger touring, two-passenger roadster and the "Bearcat" speedster models.

CHEVROLET

Fourteen improvements appear in the 1920 Chevrolet over the model of last year. The new models are on display in the showrooms of Chevrolet Motor Co., Locust street and Lindell cutoff, and Flint Motor Car Co., King's highway, near Delmar. A change has been made in the front spring construction. A heavy metal housing fitting to the frame now connects the front spring to the body. The cantilever spring has been improved. A cross pinion has been added that supports the transmission housing and aids in bracing the frame. Headlights are adjustable. Fenders are more curved than formerly and the top is of pantasote construction, with mohair lining. Other improvements are minor, dealing with refinements in body lines.

MERIT IS GUARANTEE RATHER THAN MILEAGE

Among the several tire companies and their representatives who claim to point out alleged fallacies in definite tire mileage guarantees, is Arthur S. Fishell, in charge of Miller tire distribution in this city.

"The guarantee that a tire is built to run a definite number of miles is not only confusing to the consumer, but it is a reflection on the tire itself," in the opinion of Fishell. "No manufacturer would guarantee that a pair of rubbers would wear a definite number of miles, yet the same principle prevails in both cases.

"Definite mileage guarantees almost invariably lead to a final difference of opinion between the consumer and the tire manufacturer or dealer.

"For that reason Miller tires," he said, "are built on the basis of merit and not to fulfill a definite mileage figure."

NEW CONCERN OPENED LAST WEEK ON MOTOR ROW

The James & Landwehr Automobile Co., a new concern, which will distribute the Davis and Premier cars in Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois, opened for business in quarters formerly occupied by the Mid-West Motor Car Co., 3033 Locust street, during the last week.

The members of the firm are L. S. James and William F. Landwehr. The showroom is to be redecorated and other improvements made. E. H Busse will be Illinois territorial manager.

One of the new 1920 model Davis cars in a five-passenger touring model has arrived and is on display. Among the improvements in the new model is a change in the radiator design which is of aviation type and built level with the cowl in carrying out the straight-line design. Leather of a superior quality is used this season in the upholstery. To improve riding comfort rear springs are of 58-inch semi-elliptic type and underslung. The Davis models include touring car, sport model, coupe and sedan.

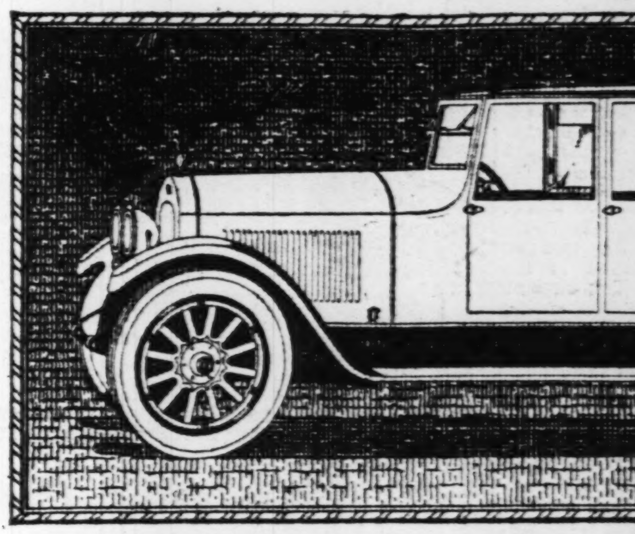
There's a Touch of Tomorrow in All That Cole Does Today

COLE INDIANAPOLIS

The Individuality of Cole's Advanced Designs Is an Inspiration



A Future Note in Present-Day Creations

WE DREAD the monotony of the commonplace. We seek, always, the thrill of the new and the original. To satisfy this desire the Cole Aero-EIGHT is dedicated.

The aim of its builders has been to be first in design—to lead the way to future improvements.

In a never ending succession of achievements the Cole has changed staid tendencies and quickened the pulse of motordom to faster progress.

Coming as a distinct departure, the Aero-EIGHT has struck a chord of broad appeal. Individuality has been its dominant note. Originality has found expression in its classic contour and in every detail of its mechanical construction.

For ten years the Cole Company has been planning ahead—for five years it has concentrated its efforts exclusively on the development of the eight-cylinder motor car.

In the Aero-EIGHT—striking in personality, sound in principle—the experience and effort of these years find expression.

A climax in a career devoted to creating the new, it has come as the herald of an advanced vogue in motor car design.

Refreshingly New Conceptions

THE Cole Aero-EIGHT has a captivating charm and freshness about it. It is like a glimpse into the future.

As gifted mechanically as it is radiant in beauty, it adds a note of futurity to present-day standards of automobile building.

Possessed of a fund of reserve power, which gives it lightning acceleration and smooth action at all speeds; endowed with tenacious road-adherence; delivering 15,000 miles on tires and correspondingly remarkable economy in the use of gasoline, the Aero-EIGHT is a marvel of mechanical efficiency, comfort and utility, as well as the criterion of advanced design.

Flush panel construction is presented for the first time in the new Aero-EIGHT all-season cars.

They rival the open models in their spirit and style, offering a combination of restful ease and finished artistry which is instantly appealing.

The careful blending of colors, the richness of fabrics, the correctness of fittings are the work of master craftsmen.

There are six new creations in the line of Cole Aero-EIGHT all-season equipages. For whatever purpose an enclosed car is desired, there is a Cole Aero-EIGHT which answers the requirements completely.

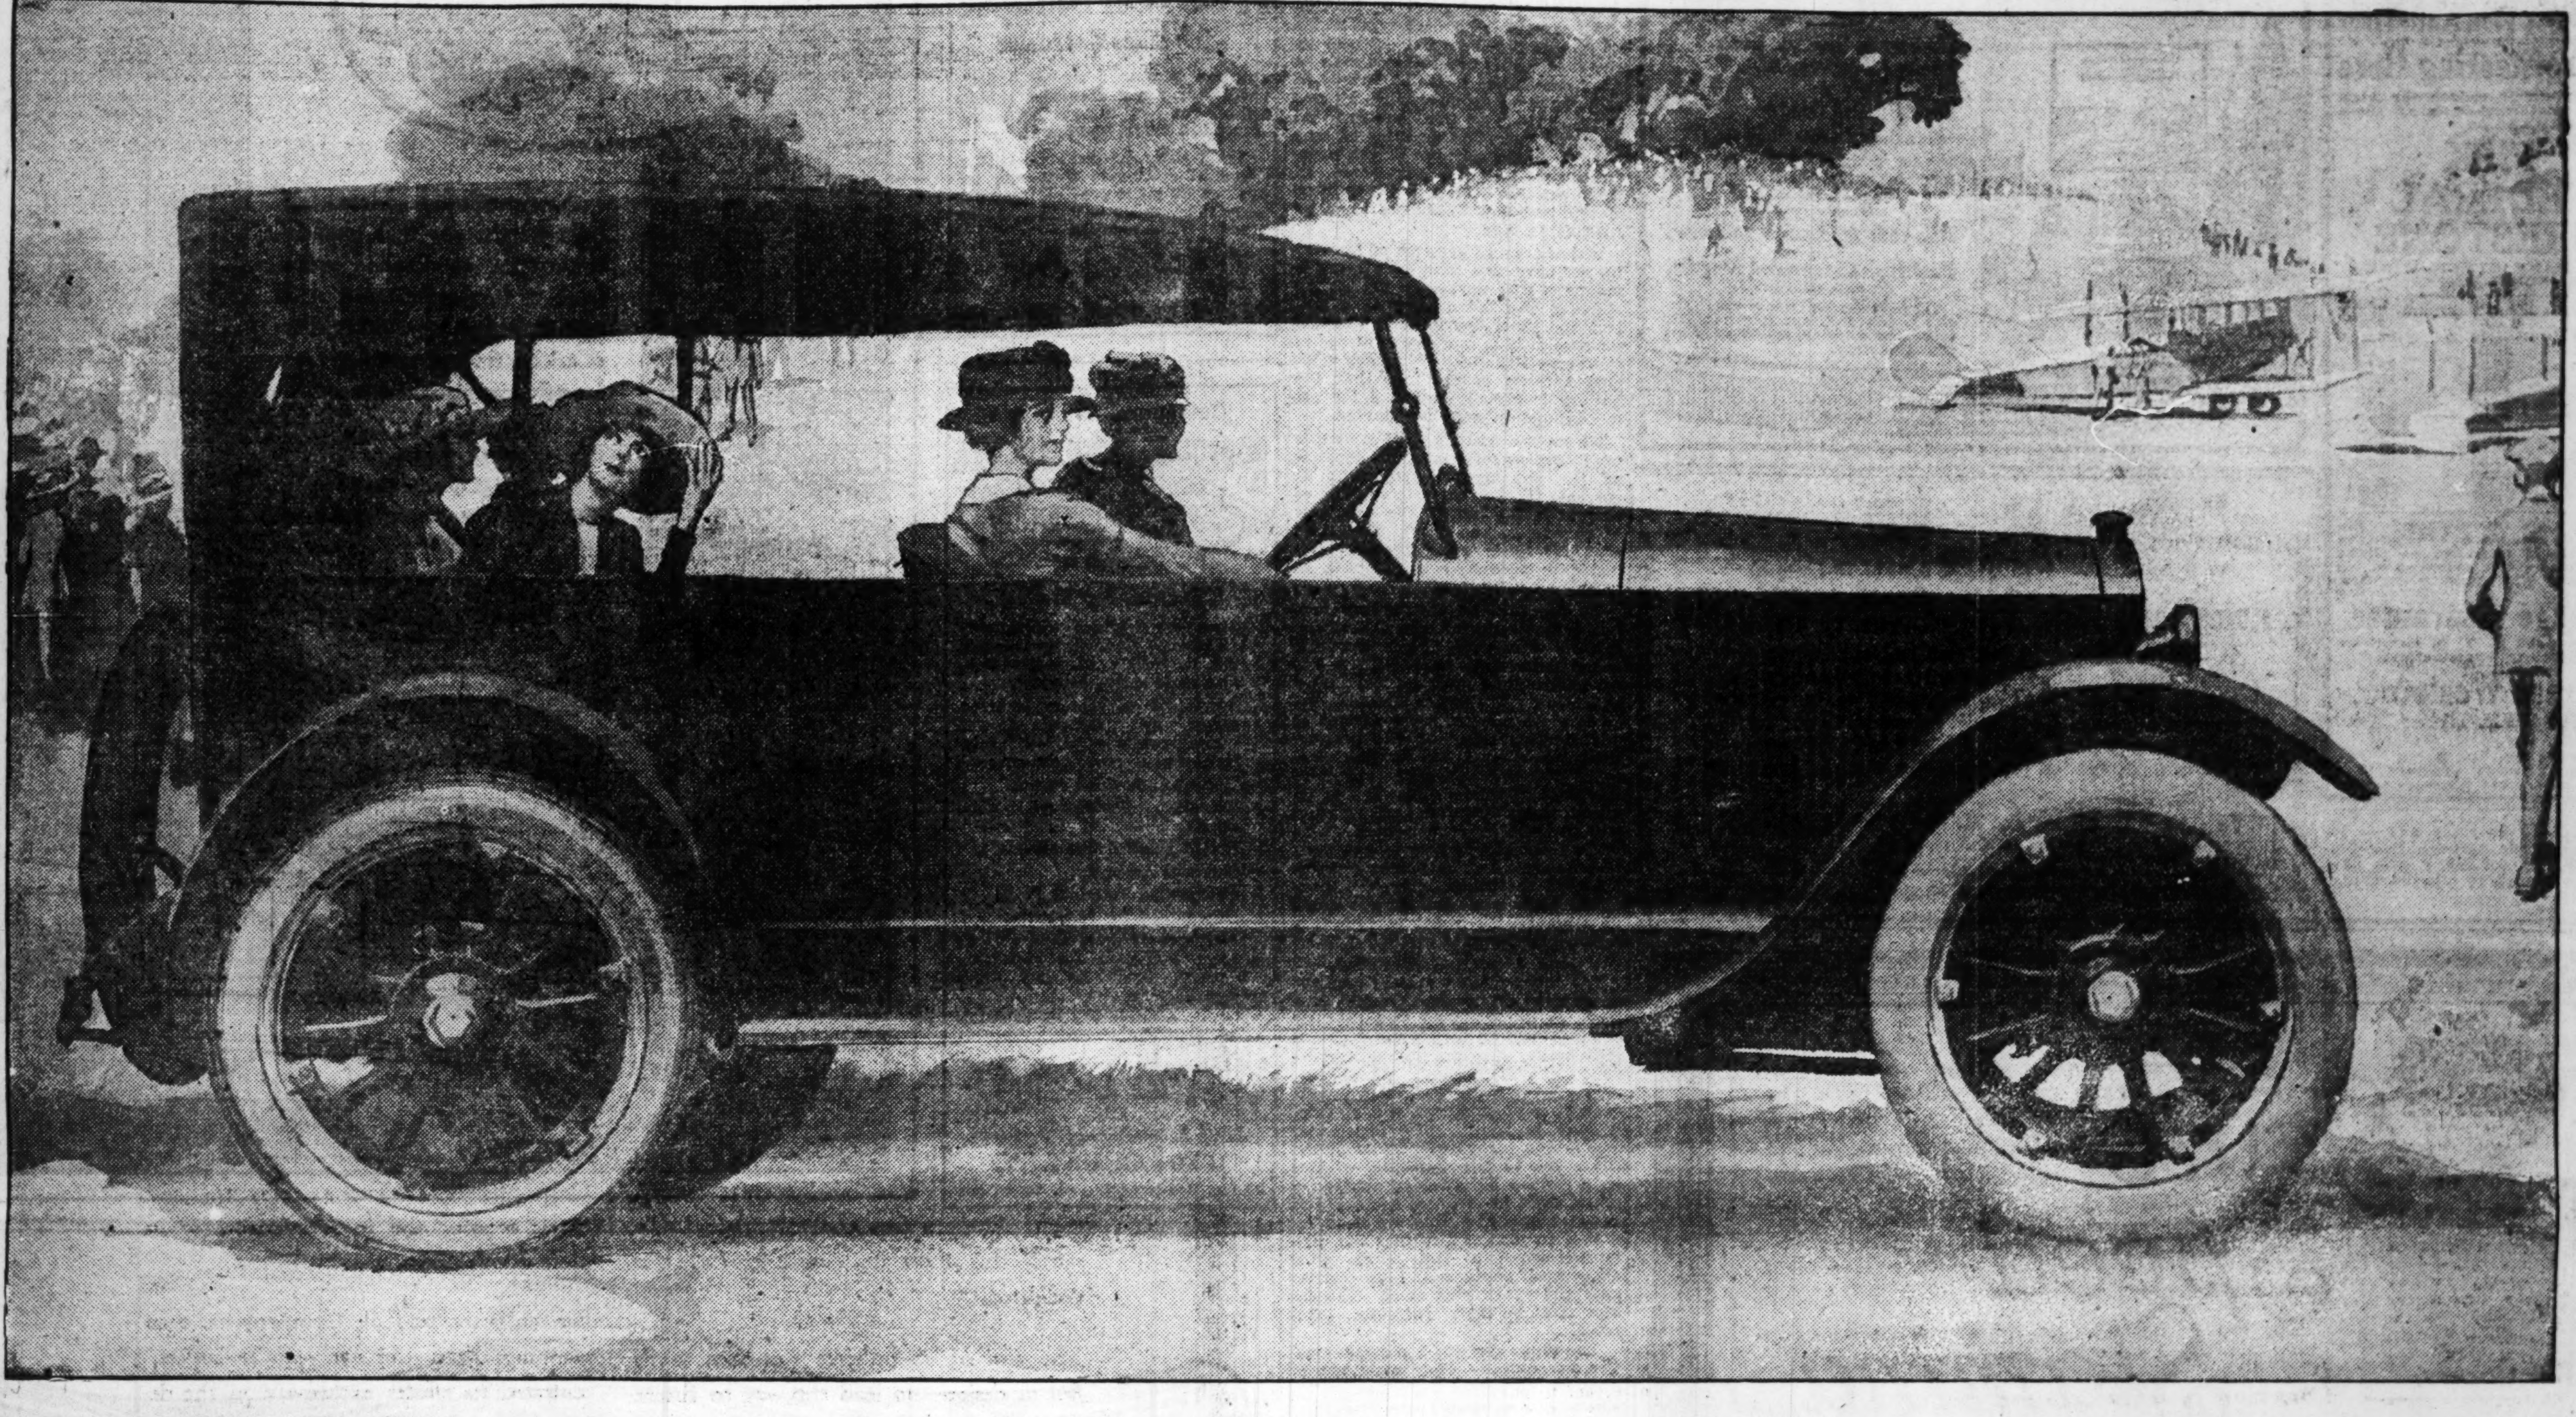
CLEVELAND SIX $1385



THE new Cleveland Six is here, the car that automobile dealers have been waiting for and talking about for two years past. It is the 1919 achievement of motordom, bringing new qualities, new ideals, new excellence into the light-car field, and at a price which will please countless thousands who care for the better things of life.

You will admire and wonder at this new car, for the industry has offered no other like it. You will be delighted with its grace and style. You will marvel at its power and speed and quietness and comfort. Truly here is a car that will dominate the whole light-car field.

Skill and Sincerity are Built into This Car

The Cleveland Six is the product of men splendidly experienced in the design and making of fine cars, men who have contributed their genius and skill and sincerity to the building up of one of America's finest high-quality cars. So the Cleveland is an expression of the best ideals for service to the world, dependable service of transportation and recreation. It is a really unusual car. It brings genuine motoring satisfaction within reach of thousands who have wanted such a car. It brings new motor-car quality at a low price.

Test Cars on the Road Three Years

The Cleveland is a finished product. There is no suggestion of the experimental about it. It is new to the public, but to the men who conceived it and developed it the Cleveland is a perfected car.

Cleveland Sixes have been on the road for three years, undergoing every conceivable test for performance and endurance. Two years ago the car was ready for productiton. But the war was coming, and the Cleveland waited.

Today, in a splendid new plant, the very last word in modern equipment and method, this car is built for you. Managing this great plant, directing all its various departments and guarding every operation, is a group of men whose sincerity of purpose is a guarantee of excellence in their car.

Powerful, Sturdy and Simple

Mechanically, the Cleveland Six is of extraordinary sturdiness and simplicity throughout. It is distinctive. It has refinement of construction not commonly found in low-priced cars.

The wheel-base is more than ample to permit of the most pleasing body designs and to provide seating capacity for five adult persons in the very extreme of comfort, with proper pitch of cushions and lots of leg-room.

Power? There is power to spare in the Cleveland Six. Power that takes the loaded car flying over the hills, and at any speed that anyone would wish over the country road and open highway. Power so flexible, so responsive to the slightest touch of the throttle, that those of us who have driven many cars know there are few motors indeed that compare with it at all.

And this motor is in no other car. It is the exclusive Cleveland Six motor, designed by engineers of the Cleveland Company and built under their supervision in the Cleveland factory.

Your Own Choice of Four Beautiful Bodies

The Cleveland Six will please you. The body designs and furnishings of the handsome touring car, the snappy single-seat roadster, and the two splendid closed car models, are worthy of the mechanical excellence of the car. In some of these four models you will find YOUR car.

THINGS TO WATCH TO BETTER SERVICE OF IGNITION SYSTEM

Keep Contact Points Clean and Wire Connections Well Insulated.

WHILE the modern ignition system is so highly perfected that it seldom fails entirely on the road, as its predecessors used to do, nevertheless it is the source of a number of troubles that reduce the efficiency of the engine and spoil the operating qualities of the car. It is the purpose of the present article to point out some of these possible defects in the ignition system and how to obviate them by reasonable care.

There are two systems of ignition in ordinary use, one employing a magneto, with perhaps a battery for starting, and the other with a battery and timer-distributor. The latter system is in more general use at the present time for passenger vehicles, because of the fact that the battery is already installed for use in conjunction with the starter.

No matter what type of system is used, satisfactory ignition depends on the unhampered generation of current, the correct interruption of current to the circuit, the free flow of current to the spark plugs and on these latter being properly adjusted to produce a good spark to insure good ignition.

In the case of the battery system it is vitally important that the battery shall be kept properly charged and duly filled with water. All connections must be kept tight and clean. If the connections become loose there is great danger of misfiring ensuing. If the connections are allowed to become corroded it will probably produce misfiring or even failure of the ignition altogether, and hard starting will certainly be experienced. The wires from the battery to the ignition device must be perfectly insulated all the time. A broken insulation will permit the wire to come in contact with metal at intervals, causing misfiring.

Good Insulation Essential.

The interrupted points are another location of possible trouble, and these parts should be separated by about .015 of an inch when they are wide open. Also the points must be kept clean and bright. Should the points become dirty, gummy, uneven or worn misfiring will be fairly sure to result. The distributer arm which turns around and passes the spark to the segments, whence it is carried by wires to the spark plugs, must be clean at the end and the segments also must be clean.

It is important also that the high tension wires to the spark plug make good contacts at both distributer and spark plug ends. The cables must be kept perfectly insulated.

The plugs also are a possible location of trouble. They must not be dirty at the points, nor must the insulators be cracked. It is important also to watch the distance of separation in the plug points. A worn dime usually serves as a good gauge to determine if the sparking points are correctly separated.

It is characteristic of ignition trouble that it usually sticks to one single cylinder. This is not always the case, as missing sometimes runs up and down the line. When you have occasion to suspect ignition trouble begin working at the spark plug, after you have located the cylinder that is at fault. Take the plug out and lay it on top of the cylinder. Crank the engine by hand with the switch turned to battery. If the plug fires it is not to blame. If the spark is weak, however, it may be that it is not strong enough to fire under compression. If there is doubt as to just where the trouble lies, this operation should be carried out on each plug until the guilty one is found.

Old-Fashioned Method.

To determine which plug is at fault, there is no better method than the old-fashioned one of the hammer or screw-driver. While the engine is running short circuit the plug by holding the metal of the tube against the top of the plug and the cylinder. If there is no change in the firing of the engine, as told by the sound, you have found the faulty cylinder. In the case of engines having separate exhaust passages for each cylinder, it was an easy matter to find one that was not firing by dropping a little water on each in turn. Naturally the exhaust of the cylinder that was not firing would be cool, while the others would be hot.

After a cylinder has been detected as not firing the first step to take is to examine the spark plug. If the plug proves up, trace the wiring back to the ignition unit. Gum or dirt on the interrupter points should be cleaned off with a few drops of kerosene. If these points are uneven they may be touched up with a megneto or jeweler's file. If they are too far apart or too near together, by all means adjust them.

In the four-unit coil system any maladjustment of the coil interrupters will probably cause misfiring.

In the case of magneto ignition the same general principles hold good as in the battery and instructions for detecting misfiring and remedying it are practically identical. In the magneto, however, weakening of the magnetos must be guarded against. This will cause misfiring at low speeds, though at high speed the trouble may vanish. Coil connections should be watched, the commonest troubles in the magneto system resulting from loose or dirty connections.

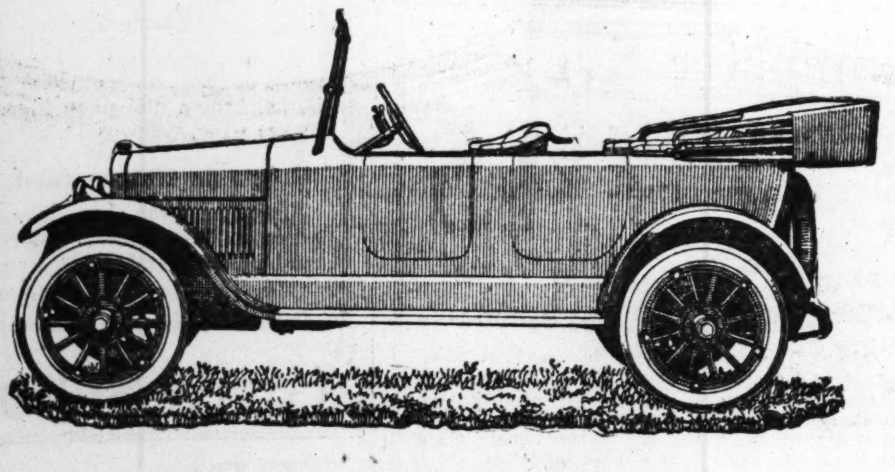
This Post-War Maxwell is a Rare Study in Automobile Development



WHILE the great plants of the Maxwell were busy in war production the engineering laboratories were working night and day on a Post-War Maxwell.

Today this car is in our salesrooms. It expresses in a decisive way the progress of automobile making in this country.

Unquestionably it leads the way among cars selling under $1200.

There's a new type radiator, larger, more efficient, more handsome; a new Elliott type front axle, which makes steering now a tireless pleasure; a new rear axle, heavier, with an indestructible four pinion differential; an improved electric system; a new idea in an instrument board; a larger and more convenient gear shifting lever; full crown fenders with wire edge reinforcing, (the front fender aprons are crowned to eliminate all vibration and rattle); a new way of anchoring the running board; a larger gas tank, and hung in the rear; a new tire carrier; a new emergency brake, located at the transmission, and not on the rear wheels; a heavier service brake, and equipped with equalizer to prevent any tendency to skid. Also equipped with Hot Spot and Ram's-horn.

These are but a few; and yet it is the same fundamental chassis on which 300,000 Maxwells have been built.

To miss seeing this Post-War Maxwell is to miss the motor car treat of the year.

center of a large farming district, where there is ample pasture land and feed is easily and abundantly produced in the rich and fertile soil of the Mississippi Valley. The cost of ordinary labor is less than in other cities, but they say in Cleveland and Chicago that the price of milk is the same as in St. Louis. However, it is a noteworthy fact, that in these two cities prosecutions have been begun against the milk producers' organizations, and indictments have been returned by the grand juries in these cities, for criminal conspiracy in fixing the price of milk. We believe that is a sufficient answer to any comparison, either by the Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association or the St. Louis dairies, with the price of milk in other cities."

Cost to Producers.

The cost of both production and distribution of milk is discussed in Cunliff's report. As to the cost of production, the so-called Pearson formula, prepared by Prof. F. A. Pearson of the Illinois State Agricultural College, is presented. It names, as the factors in the production of 100 pounds of milk, four items—20 pounds of corn, 24 pounds of mill feed, 100 pounds of hay and three hours of labor. On this basis, it estimates the cost of producing 100 pounds of milk for the coming month of September, at $4.05 by city prices of feed and labor, and $3.57 by farm prices.

The Southern Illinois Milk Producers' Association has indicated a probable price of $3.70 a hundred pounds to the St. Louis retailers, for September, the report states. To this must be added 50 cents a hundred pounds for delivery in St. Louis. The producers quote the Pearson figures, Cunliff says, to show that they are not getting enough for their product.

Cunliff argues, in reply, that Agricultural college reports are based on higher grade herds than are used in producing milk for St. Louis, and that the college figures make allowances for every possible contingency, and even for depreciation on land. They consider the farms as being used entirely for milk production, whereas on most of the farms, Cunliff says, the dairy business is a side issue, and the dairy portion of the farm is conducted by women and children.

Undersell Large Companies.

In reporting on the retail cost of milk, Cunliff says the six large dairies handle 80 per cent of the distribution of milk in St. Louis, the balance of the business being handled by small dairymen living principally in South St. Louis, who own cows and distribute their own milk, which they sell from 1 cent to 2 cents a quart below the price of the large companies.

About 40 per cent of the business of the large companies, the report states, is the retailing of milk; about 40 per cent is wholesale milk business; and about 20 per cent is the sale of milk products, ice cream, butter and cheese. The latter business is admitted to be almost uniformly profitable.

The cost of milk distribution, it is stated, divides itself into three elements, (1) actual operating cost; (2) investment cost, including profit and depreciation; and (3) loss of material and delivery by drivers.

"In investigating these three elements," the report says, "we were continually referred to a report made by Allison & Co. of the business of the large distributors in St. Louis last August (1918). This report has been accepted by the distributors as a fair report of their business, and in fact they consider it as being most liberal in that the report at that time approved 14½-cent milk, whereas they were only charging 14 cents for milk.

Figures for Last August.

"Confidential copies of the Allison report were submitted to your investigators, provided that information that was contained therein, relating to the individual companies, would not be made public.

"This confidential report shows that in August of last year the cost of handling milk on the part of the various milk dairies in St. Louis was from 5 to 16½ cents a quart.

"According to the Allison report, the average total (operating) cost at which standard milk should be delivered to the consuming public was 6.6998 cents a quart, with an allowance of 2½ cents to cover shrinkage."

Cunliff suggests certain corrections in the Allison repo[illegible] the grounds for which he presents, and then makes his own estimate of the operating expense, which comes to 6.192 cents a quart. He adds an operating and investment cost for the coming month of September, which he figures at 7.009 cents a quart.

He then proceeds to compute the fair price of milk to the consumer, for next month, as follows:

Operating and investment cost	.07009
Cost of milk f. o. b. St. Louis (at rate of $3.70 a hundred pounds)	.07991
Waste	.00199
Handling charges between Illinois and St. Louis	.01079
Total cost to consumer	.16278

"Up to Public to Judge."

"This," he says, "in my opinion, is a reasonable price for milk. In the meantime, it seems to be entirely up to the public to judge as to a fair price for this commodity. If the public feel that they are being overcharged, it is my belief that they will not patronize those industries that overcharge; they will, if necessary, abstain from the use of this commodity if the price of the commodity is increased out of proportion to its actual cost.

"An interesting side-light on the dairy business is shown in the case of certified milk. This is a product used almost entirely by babies and invalids, and it should receive the same care and consideration in cost as commercial milk. One of the large dairies in St. Louis buys certified milk from a farm in Jefferson County. This certified milk is bottled, iced and delivered f. o. b. Union Station for 13½ cents per quart. The same milk is retailed to the consumer at 24 cents per quart. The cost of handling this milk, including all necessary returns and investment charges, is 5½ cents per quart, which should bring the cost of this much-needed commodity to 19 or 20 cents instead of 24 cents a quart."

The report acknowledges the assistance and co-operation of Everett Paul Griffin, Associate City Counselor, in the investigation.

He Won't Drop Dead Any More

"My husband suffered terribly from stomach and liver trouble, which caused such bloating of gas as to seriously affect his heart. Doctors warned him that he might drop dead at any time from this trouble. A friend in Cleveland advised him to take Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and since taking it, 4 months ago, he is feeling like a young man again. All his friends are surprised at his appearance." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. IRISH AMERICANS ASK REJECTION OF LEAGUE IN HEARING BEFORE SENATORS

Speakers Declare Covenant Would Forever Prohibit Outside Aid and Thus Pronounce Death Sentence on Ireland's Aspirations for Independence.

SAY BRITISH FLEET IS MENACE TO U. S.

Walsh, Dunne, Cockran and Others Tell Foreign Relations Committee England's Rule Is Despotic—Greek Claims Also Heard.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Impassioned protests against the league of nations were presented on behalf of American Irishmen today at a hearing before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In a series of dramatic appeals which repeatedly drew cheers from the crowd jamming the committee room the spokesmen declared the covenant sought to pronounce a death sentence on the aspirations of the Irish people and to fasten forever upon Ireland what they characterized a yoke of British oppression.

Among the speakers, who said they voiced the sentiments of more than 20,000,000 Americans of Irish origin, were Frank P. Walsh of Kansas City, Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, and Edward F. Dunne, former Governor of Illinois, members of the American commission which sought to get a hearing for Ireland at Versailles.

Greek Claims Stated.

Representatives of various Greek societies also appeared before the committee during the day and made a statement of the claims of the Greek people regarding the peace settlement.

Outright rejection of the peace treaty was asked by the Irish speakers, who charged that under the covenant Great Britain would receive a guarantee that no outside nation ever would help Ireland gain her independence. The domination of the British fleet over the seas, they also declared, would be made so complete by the treaty as to be a direct menace to the United States.

In the Versailles negotiations, Walsh, Ryan and Dunne declared, President Wilson's ideals all had been brushed aside by the other Powers. At the open session when the league covenant was approved, they said, delegates in all parts of the hall tried to make protest, but were silenced by the "steam roller methods" of the controlling figures of the conference.

Of conditions in Ireland, where the commission spent some time, the three speakers painted a gloomy picture. Civil law had been suspended, they declared, and local officials were being arrested and their homes searched without warrant, while women and children were ground beneath a "despotic" military rule whose excesses they declared the censorship had concealed from the United States.

Referred to E. M. House.

The three commissioners said they had been referred to E. M. House when they tried to get a hearing with President Wilson in Paris, and that later Secretary Lansing had written them that it would be useless to press their requests further, since their utterances while in Ireland had offended British statesmen.

Great Britain, the speakers said, had drawn the United States into the league to help guarantee such "outrages" as she was committing in Ireland. At the same time, they asserted, England had been careful to preserve a sea power which gave her "a grip on every quart of salt water in the world," and which under present circumstances could be intended for use only against the United States.

Although the committee originally had allotted only two hours to the hearing when presentation of the Irish cause had been fairly launched it was voted to extend the time for as long as the speakers desired.

A brief opposing the views expressed by the witnesses was filed with the committee by Albert Kelly of New York and five others.

The brief was not read, but was ordered put into the record of the hearing. The signers said they were of Irish birth and "just plain, hardworking American citizens with no axe to grind."

Against Sinn Fein Faction.

The Sinn Fein "faction," the brief set forth, has no right to take part in the discussion of the league of na-

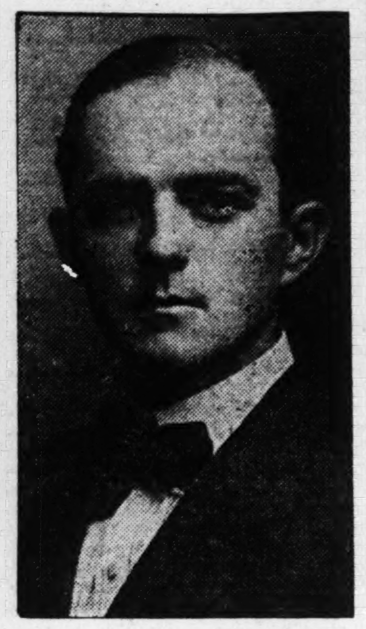
SLAYER OF SENATOR MYSTERIOUSLY SLAIN



ROBIN J. COOPER.

KENTUCKIAN, SAID TO BE 131, ATTENDS HIS FIRST CIRCUS

John Shell, Who Declares He Knew Daniel Boone, Also Will See Moving Pictures.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 30.—John Shell, of Grassy Creek, Leslie County, Ky., said to be the oldest person in the world, is in Lexington tonight. He came to attend his first circus and to be the guest of the Blue Grass Fair Association next week. Shell says he will celebrate his 131st birthday here next Wednesday. He is about 5 feet 6 inches, weighs about 140 pounds and is as "chipper as a cricket," he said.

Shell said he knew Daniel Boone, that he had prepared to fight the Indians who overran this country when me came in, but that he early when he came in, but that he early that they never had any serious trouble. Shell says he lived with his first wife more than 100 years. He has been married to his second wife about five years.

Court records are said to show that Shell paid taxes in 1809. He says he made rifles before 1800 and that he was too old to enlist in the Mexican war, although he tried to join the American troops. He has been visited by hundreds of people at the leading hotel here, and he greeted all with a hearty handshake and "jollied" every woman who came in. He never had been in a large town before and never had seen a motion picture show. He will be taken to them all before leaving here, however.

CARMACK'S SLAYER MURDERED IN AUTO, THROWN IN CREEK

Body of Robin J. Cooper, Nashville Lawyer, Discovered in Water Second Day After Disappearance.

SEVERAL MEN HELD ON POLICE THEORY

Statement to Unidentified Visitor Suggests Blackmail as Motive—Had Sought to Live Down Tragedy.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 30.—Nemesis has overtaken Robin J. Cooper, 38 years old, the attorney who was a principal in the slaying of United States Senator Edward Ward Carmack in this city in November, 1908.

Cooper's body, with skull crushed, was discovered at 10:20 o'clock this morning in Richland Creek, beneath a railway trestle in Belle Meade, a classic residential suburb.

The police have obtained no clue to the murder or reason for the deed. The case promises to become as sensational as the one young Cooper engaged in 11 years ago, when he was tried for the murder of Senator Carmack.

Cooper had seriously avoided political entanglements since that tragedy and attempted to regain the high place in society which he held previous to that event. In fact, he had been so retiring that public opinion in recent years had condoned his act as one which a son would commit in taking sides with a father in a bitter controversy.

Last Sunday Mrs. Cooper and her oldest son, Milton, departed for Louisville, Ky., to visit her father, Milton H. Smith, president of the Louisvill and Nashville railroad. Her husband remained at home with the other two children, Robin and William.

Thursday night, between 9 and 10 o'clock, a stranger called at the home, asking to see Cooper. He remained at the door until Cooper appeared. After a short parley Cooper slammed the door shut, ran upstairs to the nursery, took the two boys in his arms, kissed them good night and then returned down stairs. Maude Perkins, the negro nurse stated to the police that Cooper took off the straw hat which he was wearing, threw it on a table and went out through the kitchen to the garage. He said nothing to her of his intentions. He was joined at the garage door by the stranger. D. E. Metcalf, white gardener for Cooper, who rooms in the garage, heard them talking in low tones but could not distinguish what they said until Cooper suddenly raised his voice and in the exasperated tone, said:

Significant Words at Garage.

"Well, you could have had more if you had asked for it."

The two then drove away in the automobile and Metcalf looking out of his window saw them depart but could not distinguish the features of the stranger.

The words "you could have had more if you had asked for it" coupled with the fact that Cooper was known to have borrowed $10,000 from a local bank earlier that day, furnish the only motive for the murder outside of mere robbery, blackmail.

At 10 o'clock Josie Starks, a negress employed in a home half a mile away, heard an automobile draw up on the roadside, 35 yards away from her quarters. She says she heard sounds of violent quarreling and then arguments ceased. A few moments later she heard a pistol shot, but did not connect the two events as nearby residents, especially returned soldiers frequently discharged, fire arms at prowling cats. Anyway, she made no investigation.

The Cooper residence, on Lake avenue, is in one of the more sparsely settled section of Belle Meade Park. The nearest home is half a mile away and sits back several hundred yards from the road. Friday morning Podge Pillow, a farmer, noticed an automobile with headlights burning on Lake avenue near Richland Creek, about three-quarters of a mile from the Cooper home. He paid no attention to it, thinking that it was only a broken down machine. But it proved to be the car in which Cooper had been killed the night before.

Stone Slab in Auto.

Passers by Saturday morning noticed blood-stained papers in the driver's seat. Investigation showed that the front seat was stained. In the tonneau there were more stains and on the floor a stone slab, also stained, about 15 inches long, six inches wide and two inches thick. On the rear seat was the pocketbook of Cooper, rifled of money but containing a receipt for dues from a club and a personal check.

The police were notified and a country-wide search was made at

WILSON TO APPEAR IN PUBLIC THREE TIMES IN ST. LOUIS

Will Be Taken to Hotel From West End in Morning, Attend Luncheon at 12:30 and Speak at 8:30.

ASKS THAT ENTIRE AFTERNOON BE FREE

Mrs. Wilson to Accompany President on All His Engagements and Separate Escort Is Not Needed.

President Wilson will make three public appearances while he is in St. Louis next Friday on his tour advocating immediate and unamended ratification of the peace treaty.

The first will be when he rides from where his special train is parked, probably at Union and Lindell boulevards, to the Hotel Jefferson, at 9 o'clock in the morning. The second will be when he is guest at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler at 12:30, and the third, when he speaks at the Coliseum at 8:30 p. m.

Details of his reception and the day's program were definitely arranged last night when a telegram from his secretary, Joseph Tumulty, was received at the Chamber of Commerce. Only slight changes were made at the White House in the program which had been tentatively arranged here

The principal modifications which he asked were that President Wilson be permitted to spend the afternoon resting and attending to matters that require attention, and that no plans be made for the separate entertainment of Mrs. Wilson.

Special Will Arrive at 4 A. M.

A special train carrying the presidential party will arrive here about 4 a. m. It will be parked and breakfast will be served on the train. The Reception Committee, which will be nonpartisan in composition, will go for the President and Mrs. Wilson at 9 o'clock and escort them to the Hotel Jefferson, where they will be until time to go to the luncheon at the Statler.

This will be attended by about 1500 men and women chosen from among those who apply to the Chamber of Commerce. The telegram from Tumulty contained this request: "Please leave the time between luncheon and the evening address entirely free." The President and Mrs. Wilson will dine privately.

It had been planned to have a special Reception Committee of women to provide for the entertainment of Mrs. Wilson, but Tumulty said in the telegram that "Mrs. Wilson will accompany the President on all his engagements, so that it will not be necessary to provide a separte escort for her.'"

James E. Smith, chairman of the Special Reception Committee, conferred yesterday at the White House with Tumulty, after which the telegram was sent. A White House official will arrive here in advance of the presidential party to advise as to carrying out the plans. After the Coliseum meeting the President's train will depart at 11 p. m. for Kansas City.

Governor and Mayor Chairmen.

Members of the Reception Committee will be evenly divided between Republicans and Democrats. Gov. Gardner, Mayor Kiel and Jackson Johnson, president of the Chamber of Commerce, will be honorary chairmen.

The President's party will consist of Mrs. Wilson, the President's secretary, Rear Admiral Grayson; Charles L. Swem, Gilbert F. Close, Warren F. Johnson and Edward F. Johnston, stenographers; E. W. Smithers, seven secret service operatives, two messengers and maid and 28 representatives of the press and photographers.

ST. LOUIS SOLDIER WHO CAPTURED 53 GERMANS RETURNS

Sergt. Michael Ellis Arrives With Advance Party of the First Division at New York.

MODESTLY TELLS OF DEEDS IN ARGONNE

Winner of Congressional Medal Says He Just Ordered Machine Gunners to Surrender and They Did.

By Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Back with the first of the combat troops of the first division which arrived today in Hoboken on the transport Oribaba, the first of the American troops on the firing line and the last to leave, came Sergt. Michael B. Ellis of St. Louis, C Company, Twenty-eighth Infantry. Sergt Ellis is credited with capturing, single handed, 53 Germans, six machine guns and their crews, and has been awarded the Medal of the Legion of Honor, the Croix de Guerre and the Congressional Medal of Honor. This last decoration will be publicly awarded when the First Division reaches Washington this month.

The much decorated Sergeant is 5 feet 6 inches tall. He is a broad-shouldered, deep chested young man who, with all his experience has not forgotten how to smile. He says he is 25. He looks easily several years younger. His blue eyes are wide-set, level and cool. Capability and character are stamped on him from head to heel.

Saw 200 Days' Action.

He saw 200 days' action at the front. At Soissons, while he was yet a private, he received a brigade citation. That was in July, 1918. His "gang," as he calls the men of his division, had been fighting five days without food or water. They were eating what they could find in the effects of the dead around them. The machine-gun fire was terrific. Volunteers were asked for to head patrols to go out and bring in food.

Ellis was the first to step forward. He set out in the face of a murderous fire with eight men. Three of them came back. One of his men lost his left hand. Ellis stopped in his tracks and bound his companion's wound. His citation relates that he "showed unusual courage in carrying supplies and in attacking strong points at Breuil, Pleissy and Berzey-le-Sac."

It was in the following October that the division was thrown into the Argonne, and saw some of their heaviest fighting in the neighborhood of Exermont.

On the morning of Oct. 5, the men were ordered over the top. The zero hour was 7 o'clock. They were to advance secretly without a barrage to their objective.

"We were bothered by the machine guns," says Sergt. Ellis. "Patrols were sent out and they would catch them in the open and wipe them out. It was about that time that I decided to start out alone. I've always had a way of fighting alone at home as well as in France. The lone hand for mine every trip. I wanted to be alone especially that morning. I had a bunkie, a Sergeant by the name of Charlie Reardon, that I thought a heap of. He was killed and I haven't got over that yet. I got to thinking of Charlie that morning. Funny, isn't it, how in the face of hell's fire your thoughts will go wandering?

Went Out on a "Dirty Day."

"Well, anyway, the more I thought of Charlie the more lonesome and somehow or other the madder I got at those Dutchmen. I had a revolver with me and a rifle with a bayonet attachment. I was crawling along the shell holes when suddenly, through a clearing in the mist I saw a bunch of German helmets. Through the lull in the firing I thought I heard some Dutchmen talking, but couldn't be sure. Out there in the open you get some strange ideas.

"It was one of those moist, dark, foggy mornings. The air was heavy and the smoke of the firing mingled with the mist hung so heavy you could cut it with a knife. You couldn't see very far ahead of you. It was what I'd call a dirty day.

"Well, I crept very slowly up to that bunch of helmets, and sure enough they contained Dutchmen. I smashed into the middle of them, telling them to hoist their mitts. They didn't know what I said, but they understood what was wanted of them. Up shot their hands and then when I lined them up there were nine of them, three machine guns and their crews. turned their guns on their own lines and sat down and waited for the bunch to come along and relieve me of my burden."

"You were sure the bunch would happen along?" he was asked.

"I'll say I was sure, Buddie," re-

PERSHING DECLINES TO BE QUESTIONED BY CONGRESSMEN

Says He Hasn't Time on Last Day in France to Appear Before Investigating Committee.

ALL HIS RECORDS SHIPPED TO U. S.

Committeemen Issue Statement of Regret Over "Conflict Between Military and Civil Authority."

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—Gen. Pershing declined today on the ground of lack of time to testify before the subcommittee of three of the Congressional Committee on Expenditures by the War Department which has been conducting an investigation in France.

Gen. Pershing will leave Paris for Brest tomorrow evening, sailing on the Leviathan on Sept. 1.

The General's action led to the issuance of a joint statement this afternoon by Representatives Royal C. Johnson and Oscar E. Bland, the sub-committee, in which regret was expressed that there should be a conflict between the military and civil authorities of the Government.

In a separate statement, in which Representative Johnson did not join, Bland declared that the General's action was an example of the "indifference and contempt" shown during the entire war by the War Department toward the wishes of the people and their representatives.

The committee is investigating disposition of the army's surplus stocks abroad and other matters, including reports of attacks by American forces shortly after the armistice.

His Last Day in France.

Gen. Pershing, on being shown the statements issued by the members of the committee, said that all the activities of the American expeditionary forces were, of course, open to investigation, but that he found it impossible, on the last day of his stay in France to comply with the request of the committee, as all his records had been shipped to the United States.

Although Gen. Pershing said he had no further comment to make upon the incident, it was learned at his headquarters that all documents of the general staff were shipped to Brest on Aug. 25 and were in the hold of the transport Leviathan before he received notice that he was expected to appear as a witness before the committee.

It was said that the first notice of the visit of the committee was received at headquarters on Thursday, when the place was topsy turvy with packing cases filled with papers and books in all the hallways and the staff reduced to those immediately connected with the office of the Commander in Chief, who are leaving with him by special train tomorrow.

Gen. Pershing's engagements, it was said by a member of his staff, were such as to make it impossible for him to give the time necessary for the hearing asked for by the committee. Yesterday he lunched with Marshal Petain and called on President Poincaire. Today he saw Premier Clemenceau, received a considerable number of visits and paid a large number of social calls. The multiple attentions he has received from the French people during his stay here, it is declared, have piled up social obligations which are occupying every minute of his time to acquit before leaving.

Congressmen's Statement.

The joint statement reads:

"Subcommittee No. 3 of the Committee on Expenditures in the War Department was requested by members of the Senate and House and members of the full committee to have Gen. Pershing testify on a number of important matters which the committee came here to investigate, among which were the fixing of responsibility for the mistreatment of American soldiers in prison in France, his views on courtmartial laws and regulations pertaining thereto, regulations with reference to the burial of American dead, and certain military operations, particularly on Nov. 10 and 11, 1918.

"An outline of the early organization of the American expeditionary forces for the expenditure of funds and the payment of claims was also desired.

Information in France.

"We regard it as important that the highest officer of the American expeditionary forces give us the benefit of his intimate knowledge of all these affairs. Technically, the American Congress may have no inquisitorial jurisdiction over American citizens when outside the United States, but we know no precedent for the refusal of American citizens to recognize that jurisdiction.

"Gen. Pershing declined to testify on the ground that his records were not available. He was informed that

MAN AND WIFE ADMIT STEALING AUTOS TO TRAVEL

Took Car in Chicago, Sold It in Minneapolis, Rode Off in Another, Came to St. Louis.

"Everyone else is stealing automobiles. Why shouldn't we?" asked Mrs. Irene Hanna, 32 years old, of Detectives Helmholt and Puls in Chief Hannegan's office yesterday after she and her husband, Ernest J. Hanna, 35, had been arrested for having an automobile, stolen in Minneapolis, Minn., in their possession.

They had intended going into the business on the wholesale plan, they admitted, and had a set of dies for changing the numbers on motors, a notary public seal for putting on bills of sale and a legal form for a bill of sale written in pen and ink which Hanna said he had intended to have printed in regular form.

The Hannas said their home was at 817 Castro street, San Francisco, Cal.

They had been here two weeks visiting Mrs. Hanna's mother at 3911 Washington boulevard.

Hanna was arrested in a garage at 4136 Olive street after he had taken a Hudson touring car into the garage to have a trunk rack put on the back of it. The detectives investigating the numbers on the machine, found they had been tampered with, and when Hanna called arrested him.

Mrs. Hanna started into the garage a short time later, but walked out. She was arrested.

At headquarters both confessed, the detectives say, that the automobile was stolen. They said they had first taken a Buick automobile from the streets of Chicago, July 12, and had driven in it to Minneapolis, where they sold it for $1000.

They stole the Hudson car from a public garage in Minneapolis and drove to St. Louis.

"The night man was asleep, and we just walked in, got in the car and started off," Hanna told the detectives.

Mrs. Hanna said she accompanied her husband when the machines were stolen.

ALL WITNESSES AGREE THAT AUTOMOBILE FELL INTO RIVER

But They Have Different Versions of Accident at Lincoln Bridge in Forest Park.

Two versions of an unusual automobile accident in Forest Park were given by witnesses last night.

Herman Sicker, 4119A Farlin avenue, went to the Mounted District Police Station and said that he had seen an automobile "filled with people" "dive" from the Lincoln Bridge, which is near the intersection of the North and South grand drives at Round Lake, turn a somersault and come to a standstill upright in the bed of the River des Peres.

He said the occupants were thrown into the water, which was about a foot deep, but that none apparently was injured. Three, he said, were taken to Barnes Hospital.

At the hospital it was said that a man, woman and child had been brought to the hospital for examination. Their clothes were drenched, but none were hurt and they left.

Another witness said that the car rolled over the bank in turning sharply to avoid collision with another machine and landed upright in the river, the occupants being held in the car by the top. He said that the car carried a man, his wife and seven children. One witness said the car driver gave his name as J. Davis, 3061 Cass avenue.

NOLTE AND FRUMBERG NEAR GOAL

Hike of 17 Miles Today Will Win Wagers Aggregating $1050.

City Comptroller Nolte and Abraham Frumberg, an attorney, have only 17 miles to walk today to win wagers totaling $1050 that Nolte could not walk from St. Louis to Cooper's Hill, Mo., a distance of 101 miles, in five days, and that Frumberg could not make it in four. They were at Rosebud, Mo., last night, in trim to cover the remaining distance. They said they would start hiking at 6 a. m. today in an endeavor to reach their goal by noon, which would make their time three and one-half days.

Nolte said over the telephone last night that he had discovered that walking was a sure cure for dyspepsia.

COCAINE IN PRISONER'S CAKE

A quantity of cocaine wrapped in silver paper was found in a chocolate cake intended for Bert Grant of 422 South Third street, a prisoner at Central Station holdover yesterday, when William Wright, a negro, 518 South Second street, called at the station to pass in a basket of food to the prisoner.

Grant was arrested several days ago suspected of violating the Harrison drug act. Sergt. Drennan cut into the cake and discovered the drug. He arrested the negro. Five needles, a syringe and a box of morphine was found concealed between his trousers and the waist band. He was held for the Federal authorities. The negro disclaimed knowledge of the narcotic in the cake. He said a woman had given him the food to carry to the station to give to Grant.

TROOPS FIRE ON NEGROES IN RIOTING AT KNOXVILLE

Disturbance Becomes General in City After Mob Storms Jail in Vain Search for Negro Suspected of Murder of White Woman.

HARDWARE STORES LOOTED FOR ARMS

Officer and Private Killed, Apparently by Accident, When Machine Guns Are Turned on Crowd—Seven White Men Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 31.—After the storming of the Knox county jail tonight by a mob bent on reaching Maurice Mayes, a negro arrested early in the day in connection with the murder of Mrs. Bertie Lindsey, a race riot of serious proportion broke out in Knoxville early this (Sundey) morning.

Soldiers of the Fourth Tennessee National Guard turned a machine gun on a crowd of armed negroes at Vine and Central avenues after a fight between whites and negroes in which two negroes were killed.

Four negroes fell under the machine gun fire. Firing was continued at 1:30, and it was impossible to tell how many had been killed or wounded. Seven men, all white, are in local hospitals, wounded, as the result of the trouble at the jail and subsequent rioting.

Two Guardsmen Killed.

Lieut. J. W. Payne, regular army instructor and Private Henderson, were killed at 12:40 a. m. It is said both were slain by mistake by bullets from their own command.

All hardware stores and pawnshops have been looted to secure arms.

After being driven from the jail, that the negro had been taken to Chattanooga, the mob went to other sections of the city and two negroes were killed in the negro section.

A white man was taken to a hospital with a crushed skull and members of the mob began breaking into pawn shops and hardware stores, apparently to get firearms. Militiamen brought from the State encampment near Knoxville, to disperse the mob at the county jail, were hurried to the scenes of the rioting.

In fights between Deputy Sheriffs, police officers, and militiamen and members of the mob several men were wounded. Most of the windows in the jail were shot out.

Troops from the Fourth Tennessee National Guard were called. Two squads were rushed to the jail in a motor truck. The disorder reached its height on their arrival. Missles of all kinds were thrown and fist fights were numerous and then shooting began. The Guardsmen were soon strengthened by the arrival of a full company and the jail corridors and yards were cleared.

Mrs. Lindsey was shot to death in her home as she was preparing to leap from a window. Her niece, who was sleeping with her, was threatened by the same negro. Mayes was taken to Chattanooga for safe keeping.

Five motor trucks loaded with members of the mob left Knoxville late tonight with the announced purpose of going to Chattanooga, to get the negro.

When informed that the trucks had left Knoxville, Sheriff Bob eBss, at Chattanooga, after calculating the number of men in the five trucks, remarked:

"All right; let 'em come. I have got room for that many in jail."

GOMPERS HOPES TO AVERT STRIKE OF STEEL WORKERS

Declares A. F. of L. Is Working for Amicable Adjustment—Action on Plumb Plan Is Deferred.

PREPARING REPORT ON VISIT TO EUROPE

Says International Trade Union Discredits Bolshevism — All Workers Pledged to Aid Actors Now on Strike.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced today that efforts were still being made to effect a settlement of the controversy between the steel workers and the United States Steel Corporation. Hopes were entertained, he said, that an "amicable adjustment" could be reached, making a strike unnecessary.

Gompers and other members of the executive committee of the American Federation of Labor continued their conferences today for discussion of the general labor situation.

In a letter to Chairman Gary of the board of the United States Steel Corporation, the steel committee said it would wait until last night to receive a reply to their request for a conference. No reply has been received, but the steel men would not state whether a strike would be ordered immediately.

They have placed the situation before President Wilson, but with what results has not been made known. Meantime, the steel workers have been urged not to strike until ordered to do so by the committee.

Gompers issued the following statement:

"The executive council of the American Federation of Labor was called into extra session to consider a number of vexatious questions which are occupying the attention of the working people and the people generally of our country. They desired to have immediate information regarding the activities of the delegation of the American Federation of Labor at the Amsterdam conference of international trade unions—the conference which our delegation held with the representatives of labor in those countries. The delegation, consisting of Samuel Gompers, Daniel J. Tobin and John J. Hynes, submitted their report in writing and which will be made public very shortly, but we are not prepared to give that out at this time believing that it is most appropriate that the report be made direct to labor first, and jointly with it to the general public. This can be said for the report that it showed clearly that the wave of Bolshevism has receded and that the international trade union conference at Amsterdam voted overwhelmingly against any Bolshevik principles or tendencies; that the international trade union movement is founded now upon a more democratic basis, that is, that the representation of organized workers such as the United States, England, France and of Germany should have its seat in those international conferences and that the officers and offices have been taken away from Germany.

"The executive council had under consideration the iron and steel organizing efforts and have endeavored to bring about the very best results. The efforts are still being made and the hope is entertained that an amicable adjustment may be reached before any outbreak or cessation of work shall be inaugurated.

"The cigarmakers of the United States are engaged in strikes for improved conditions occasioned by the high cost of living and there are 122,000 of that industry who are now engaged in the struggle. The executive council endorsed that strike and pledged its moral and financial support to it and will issue additionally an appeal to all labor friends to come to the financial and moral assistance of the men engaged in that controversy.

"In regard to the actors' situation, a new charter was issued to the Actors' Equity Society and the old time White Rats Association under the title of Actors' and Artisans' Association of America and the pledge was given for the full support of the federation with its membership to the actors engaged in the contest.

Railway Problems Discussed.

"The executive council had before it the representatives of the labor organizations and their council who favored the Plumb plan of railway ownership of railway control and administration. The council considered the plan as well as the provisions of the Sims bill dealing with this important subject. The plan and the bill, so the council declared, are of such transcedent importance to labor, to the people and to the country that the council decided to defer final action determining the position of the A. F. of L. of there on and that in the meantime a sub-committee was created for the purpose of examining into all the facts and evidence obtainable to secure the advice of all we can who can contribute to a full understanding of the subject, and the subcommittee, after its examination and investigation is to report to the executive council of the A. F. of L., upon the entire subject.

"There were other matters of importance considered by us, but these are regarded as hardly of public interest."

ST. LOUIS SOLDIER WHO CAPTURED 52 GERMANS RETURNS

plied Sergt. Ellis, with a smile.

"When you've fought with the First Division as long as I have you will know they'll happen along when you want them, and that's the truth."

Sergt. Ellis doesn't explain that he was crawling through No Man's Land under indirect, direct and counter-fire. When asked if he didn't feel a bit timid at his exposed position he voices his philosophy as follows:

"It's like crossing a trolley car track, buddy. No matter where you are you have got to use your bean. That's what a bean was given to you for. It's one of the best possessions a man has. They've given me several decorations for using my bean, that's all. There is no more credit due me for what I did than there would be if I didn't fall off a merry-go-round. In St. Louis you deal with trolley cars and automobiles when you cross the street. You don't step in way of a swiftly moving car in St. Louis any more than you step 'n the way of a machine gun bullet in France. You can't dodge a bullet that's headed toward you. All you've got to remember is to travel a different track from the lead. It's very simple."

In cold print that looks like the talk of a soldier who after 200 days at the front finds himself headed homeward, unscathed, with several of most coveted medals of the soldier pinned to his breast. When you hear Sergt Ellis say it it takes on a different complexion. He went to the army, he says, because he liked the fighting game. His viewpoint is that of a particularly unassuming, courageous American soldier.

After Ellis had taken his first machine gun nest he went ahead, or, as he says himself, "nosed around a bit" to see if he could locate any more machine guns.

"Stuck Up Another Bunch."

"The next bunch I caught up with," he says, "was on the edge of a wood. I had no sooner bumped into the outer line of woods than I came across two Dutchmen. They were machine gun helpers and I remember they were whistling as they walked. I stuck them up and they got their hands up so quickly I thought they'd never be able to get them down.

"Where there are machine gun helpers there must be machine guns. I wasn't taking any chances with this bunch. I got a hunch to wait so I stood there with htem until some of our crowd came along. I remember Lieut. Gans coming up. He could speak German. I turned the two Dutchmen over to him and after questioning them in German he learned that some yards back further in the woods there was a nest of six guns."

Lieut. Gans must have read the determination in Ellis' eyes, for it is on record that he specifically ordered Ellis not to enter the wood in quest of the Germans. But there was such a din going on at the time that Ellis didn't hear what the Lieutenant said. Maybe the Lieutenant forgot, and issued his order in German, which Ellis proudly says he cannot speak, even if he had been doing duty for some months on the Rhine.

Into the woods he plunged, and, luck favoring him, he bumped into the nest, head on.

"It's funny when you think of it," he says, "that a bunch of men will drop work on a machine gun and stick up their hands when you tell them to. But that's what those Dutchmen did. Every blessed one of them called it a day. For them the war was over. I lined them up, found three of their guns loaded and three out of commission, turned them on the enemy and then lined the crowd up and waited some more. I tried to tell them stories about old St. Louis to while away the time, but they didn't seem to get me and I noticed that when I smiled at them they began to get fidgety and to look as if they were sorry they had given up. So I changed my tactics and put on the mean, nasty look we were taught to wear when dealing with the Dutchmen. And believe me, Buddy, the man who manufactured that mean, nasty look for the Boche knew what he was doing. The Boche is a good fighter if his gang is around. Another thing, he respects force and harshness. You can't be kind to a Dutchman. He does not get you and thinks you are weak.

"I guess a Dutchman is trained so thoroughly in doing what he is told to do that it doesn't make any difference who gives him the order he obeys it. That's the only way I can account for that bunch surrendering to me one after another.

Bandaged Wounded Man.

"I noticed as I sat there that one of the prisoners had a wounded shoulder. They had been taught to believe that when they once fell into the hands of the Americans they were to be scalped and drawn and quartered and boiled in oil and a lot of junk like that. We all knew that was the sort of stuff they were passing out in the other lines, and while I was waiting for the gang to come up and get the Dutchmen I thought I'd give them a little lesson. So I put my revolver on the ground where I could get it at a moment's notice and, putting my rifle in the crook of my left arm, I got the boche with the bum shoulder and proceeded to bandage him up. I did it with two hands, but I only used one eye. I had the other one skinned for surprises.

"That bandaging stunt seemed to get them. They began to jabber among themselves and finally burst out laughing. It seemed to me then that a certain relief came into their faces and they looked as if their surrendering was the foxiest thing they had ever done in their lives.

"And now comes the funniest part of the yarn. One of the Dutchmen nodded toward a dugout some yards off, and said something in a low tone to me, in German. I haven't the faintest notion of what he said, but I took his action to mean that he was tipping me off to the fact that there was something that I might find of interest in the general direction he had indicated.

"I didn't know whether it was a trick or not, but having a swelled head—that's the only way I can account for it now—I got the bunch up in line and marched them off toward the dugout. Just as we got there a boche company commander and a Lieutenant came out. I called to them to halt and join our May party. They half turned as if they didn't like the idea. So I let loose with my revolver and that decided them. They stepped in line and shortly after that our gang tumbled into the woods and relieved me. I had left our gang about 7 o'clock and had been foraging around alone for four hours and a half. At 11:30 my party was over, because the sun began to come out and chase the mist and a breeze swept the smoke of firing out over our heads."

Wants to Be Married.

And now that it's all over, "shoved behind him, long ago and far away," Sergt. Ellis nurses a great desire to leave the army and to get back to St. Louis and get a job and settle down and get married.

"A number of guns opening up and blazing away used to delight my heart," he says. "But I've had my fill. I'm ready to quit this man's army right now and get back home and stay there. I feel that I've done my duty. I may have to stay three years on reserve. I hope not. I've been in the army seven years this month. I re-enlisted after the Vera Cruz affair. I wanted to get action. I'll say I've had all the action I need."

"Maybe you'll feel different when you get back home and have a taste of some of the things you've forgotten," it was suggested.

St. Louisans His Benefactors.

"Don't ever let anyone tell you that," said Sergt. Ellis. "I know what I'm going back to. I've thought of it many a time. Maybe you don't know that I was left to rub up against the world when I was a little shaver. Just think of it, I was only 6 years old. A Polish gentleman and his wife adopted me. And when I say gentleman I mean that word in every syllable. And when I speak of his wife as a lady I'm meaning that. They gave me the education I've got and taught me the printing trade. They run a little Polish newspaper in St. Louis. I don't know whether I'll be able to get back as a printer or not. I've been out of the game some time now and I suppose it will be hard getting back. But whatever it is that I decide on and whoever gets me on the payroll won't get the half-baked kid that left St. Louis when the Kaiser let loose the dachshunds of war."

At the headquarters of the First Division in Camp Merritt the correspondent learned that Sergt. Ellis will be publicly presented with the Congressional Medal of Honor when the division parades in Washington.

ARMOUR & CO. ATTRIBUTES PRICE SLUMP TO U. S. FIGHT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Armour & Co., reviewing the meat trade for the week, say in a statement:

"Government propaganda against the high cost of living paralyzed business and has caused marked depression in livestock prices, which has been reflected in all food commodities. The effects of these depressions are felt in distributive channels.

"Prices are lower in provision products, regardless of the fact that the products now being sold were cut out from very high-priced hogs.

"Supplies in the dressed beef market have been liberal, with a limited demand, no doubt due to the high cost of living agitation; and, consequently, prices have slumped severely."

tions because it "failed to support the allies' in the war, conducting a propaganda hurtful to the allied cause and giving "aid and comfort to the enemy by creating strife and turmoil at home."

Statements that Ireland has not self government were denied, the brief saying the Irish have the franchise, have a representative Government and are subject to laws made by Parliament in the same manner as for England, Scotland and Wales.

Ireland is not suppressod religiously nor industrially, it was declared, and never has been one undivided nation, approaching unity only under British rule. Injection of the Irish question into American politics, it was argued, would bring up racial and religious, would bring up the principles of American life.

The hearing today attracted unusual attention.

In his address closing the argument for the Irish societies, Cockran made an impassioned plea for rejection of the treaty. Although he had followed President Wilson politically and had believed profoundly in the President's ideals, he said there could be no greater calamity than ratification of the treaty he negotiated at Versailles.

Only One Alternative.

Tracing the struggles of Ireland through many "attempts by British rulers to exterminate her," he said the Irish people had kept alive against the greatest adversity their love of liberty and their aspirations for freedom. History had demonstrated, he argued, that England could not do justice in Ireland if she tried and the point now had been reached when "the only alternative to extermination is emancipation."

"All your leagues of nations," he declared, "won't keep Ireland under the domination of this incubus. All the powers of the earth can't do that.

"Is there in this treaty a single word of which any one can be proud? Does it bring freedom to any single people except as an act of revenge against conquered and dismembered foes? The league covenant is admitted by its friends to be imperfect. Shantung is an abomination. Yet we are told we must accept it. Must? Since when has that word been applied to the American people?

"I mean no disrespect to the President of the United States. His place in history is a high one. The words in which he enunciated the principles of the war will forever be the priceless possessions of the nation. The 14 points are not dead; they can never die. But I believe the only thing which can dim his high place in history will be the acceptance of this treaty."

Only One Avenue Open.

Referring to a Senate speech by Senator Walsh of Montana saying that the only one avenue to Irish freedom, that involving aid from an outside nation, was cut off by the league covenant, Cockran declared if this were true then it meant that "the only avenue is cut off."

Describing how the league covenant was adopted at the peace conference, Walsh told the committee it reminded him of "the mob primaries out in Missouri."

"The league of nations was never assented to," said Mr. Walsh, "even by the ones who signed it, in the sense that we understand it. Anyone who was present at the Quay d'Orsay when the covenant of the league was so splendidly and dramatically read by our President and saw the delegates jumping up all over the room wanting to say a word will tell you that. You could not tell who they were, but Clemenceau blandly said, 'There being no objection, the covenant of the league is agreed to.'"

Asked whether the "surprise of the assembled commissioners over the league covenant was "marked," the speaker replied:

"Oh, it was very marked. They jumped up all over the place to make protests. Man after man got up. You know there was an awful censorship upon this whole business."

For U. S. Interventon.

Cockran in his argument closing the case said that conditions in Ireland were "inestimately worse" than those in Cuba in 1898, and the only way they could be remedied was through intervention by the United States.

"We citizens of the United States of Irish blood," said a memorial read to the committee, "but attached above all things to this republic and its Constitution, respectfully pray that the prooosed treaty now before you be rejected as a direct violation of the principles on which this war was fought, as they were defined by President Wilson.

"Ireland has been asserting continuously her claim to independence for eight centuries. One-fifth of this entire population of the United States is of Irish extraction.

"We ask that Ireland be not the only nation excluded from the benefit of the glorious principles enunciated by Mr. Wilson as those which the great war was fought to establish.

Article 10 Denounced.

"We especially denounce article 10 of the proposed league of nations as a device to stifle the conscience of civilization and render it impotent to condemn and by condemning to end the oppression of weak nations enslaved by powerful neighbors. It impeaches the most creditable page in our history and discredits the circumstances and conditions in which our republic was born and our liberty achieved.

"The conscience of civilization, the only force to which the oppressed can appeal, would no longer be able to take effective jurisdiction of wrongs perpetrated by powerful nations on weaker people. No struggling nation has ever achieved its independence except through the aid of other nations."

Cohalan's Objection to League.

Taking particular exception to the league of nations proposal, Justice Cohalan declared it would be "intolerable" to give Great Britain six votes in the league assembly to one for the United States.

"We fought," he said, "to destroy autocracy which means not only militarism, the control of the land, but also navalism, the control of the sea. We contend that the position of the British fleet is made such by this treaty that it can be used only against the United States. Germany and Russia are in no position to contest it and France practically has been turned into a continental vassal of England.

"If we enter into a scheme which leaves to another country the mastery of the seas, we place ourselves voluntarily in the position where we shall carry on commerce with other countries as a matter of privilege instead of as a matter of right. We are asked also under the proposed plan practically to give up the Monroe Doctrne.

"We insist that this is in no sense a league of nations; but is simply a cover for an Anglo-American alliance under which the freedom of America would be abridged and the power of the governing classes in England permanently secured."

Walsh "Almost Pacifist."

Walsh, chairman of the American Commission of Irish Independence, declared the league would put more than half the world in rebellion. He said he always had been a Democrat "and almost a pacifist," but that the best friend President Wilson has is the man who will stand up and "keep him from the great mistake he is about to make."

Walsh offered to give the committee, "in executive session," reports of the interviews between members of the Irish-American delegation sent to Paris and President Wilson and other American peace delegates. At the suggestion of Senator Johnson, Republican, California, the committee voted to receive the records and print them for public circulation.

When Ireland separated from Great Britain in the uprising during the war, Walsh said, "they separated forever." The Irish were willing "to fight to the death," he asserted, if it became necessary.

Experiences in France.

Describing his experiences at Paris where his commisssion was refused a hearing at the peace conference, Walsh read the names of a long list of delegations from small nations who called on the Irish-Americans to ask "why the 14 points were being digregarded." The witness said he understood that the peace conference "drew lines on the map by mistake" in several cases, and got several nationalities into the wrong nation.

"The English army is in Ireland today," he said, "with every device for dealing death. I saw them fix the emplacements for machine guns to sweep the city hall in Dublin.

"The jails are crowded with the best men in Ireland. Why? Only because they are Republicans. Thousands of dollars' worth of property is being taken. Everything is being done to break the spirit of those people.

"If this league is assented to 200,000 men stand ready to die to bring the world back to the ideals for which America has stood."

Walsh's statements brought repeated laughter and cheers from the largest crowd of spectators that has attended any of the committee's hearings. Although only two hours had been set aside for the hearing, when the time expired Senator Fall, Republican, New Mexico, moved an indefinite extension and it was agreed to.

Covenant "A Perversion."

The league covenant, Walsh, declared, was "a perversion" of the ideas of the men who really wanted a league.

"No interpretation and no amendment," he said, "can make this an honest document."

Referring to the provision about disputes arising in the league, the witness said "that a dispute is going to arise very quickly about Ireland." The league, assembly and council he said, would be "stacked" because the members were admittedly bound by a series of secret agreements.

"All Paris knew," said the witness, "that the ideals for which the United States entered the war were circumvented at the peace table. President Wilson, though a man of honest ideals, found that every one of his 14 points had been abrogated by secret treaties."

Walsh declared Sir Eric Drummond, permanent secretary of the league, would have greater power than a majority of the council. Having just returned from Ireland, the witness declared, he could assure the committee that the Irish cause was making much more material progress and that British "oppression" was much more severe in Ireland than censored news dispatches indicated.

Michael J. Ryan of Philadelphia, another member of the Walsh Committee to Paris, told the committee that Irish claims were based on the principles of President Wilson.

Ryan's Testimony.

Ryan said he had been told that only 10 minutes was alloted for final consideration of the league of nations covenant by the peace conference.

"Was there any difference between the steam roller used in the United States and in France?" asked Senator Borah.

"No," replied the witness. "We regarded it with admiration."

When his commission asked for a hearing at Paris, Ryan said, it was referred to Mr. House.

"I suggested," he continued, "that President Wilson and the other delegates be brought together to hear us, but Col. House said all of the five delegates never had come together to discuss any question."

Making a dramatic appeal for rejection of the treaty, Ryan declared the Irish in this country had rallied to a man to fight for the American cause in the great war.

"Three of my own household went into the army," he said. "One of my own kin is dead at Chateau-Thierry. They fought for the rights and the desires of the small nationalities. I beg of you, Senators, not to break faith with them."

Dunne's Testimony.

Dunne, who was a member of the Walsh commission, said he had visited Ireland and was convinced that "nearly 80 per cent of the Irish people are insistent upon and demanding an independent republic."

"To repress and suppress this overwhelming sentiment," he said, "the British Government maintains a standing army of approximately 100,000 men in Ireland. Jury trials for political offenses have been abolished. The ahbeas corpus is practically suspended; the right of assemblage is suppressed; free speech and a free press are prevented by the most outrageous censorship, private and public houses are entered and searched and seized without warrant, and men, women and even children are being arrested without warrant and held in jail without trial, or deported to English prisons and held without ny limitation as to the terms of imprisonment.

"The elected representatives of the people are thrown in jail and kept in imprisonment in either England or Ireland at the pleasure of the Government. With my own eyes I witnessed an assault upon some boys and girls in the County Mayo by British soldiers under the command of a British Lieutenant with guns and bayonets, without any warning to disperse, who were guilty at the time of no offense excepting that of bringing a cup of tea and some bread and butter to the occupants of an automobile which had been disabled on the roadside and outside of any military district.

"With my own eyes I saw the gathering of three or four hundred fully equipped soldiers, who were gathered together for the sole purpose of preventing the Lord Mayor of Dublin extending the courtesy of a reception in the mansion house, in Dublin, to the visiting delegates from this country.

"By article ten of the proposed treaty now under consideration by the Senate, the American republic is asked to perpetuate this character of Government in the 20th century, and to assist the British Government maintain the same."

For Irish Independence.

The committee was addressed by Lieutenant-Governor McDowell, of Montana, who said sentiment in his State was "very strongly in favor" of Irish independence and "in decided opposition" to authority to any clause in the treaty which would handicap that movement.

John Murphy of Buffalo, N. Y., told the committee England was seeking, "under the specious title of a league of nations, to draw a wall of iron around the markets of the world, where, by a preferential imperial tariff, the products of our factories will be handicapped in their efforts to obtan a foregn market."

D. C. O'Flaherty of Richmond, Va., told the committee that "as a Virginian, as a Protestant, as a Mason and as a Democrat" he believed ratification of the treaty would only "make the world safe for hypocrisy." He presented a resolution, adopted on August 26 at a mass meeting of 4000 people in Richmond, expressing opposition to any proposed league of nations which does not protect all American rights and ideals and which binds us to guarantee the territorial integrity of the British and Japanese empires."

St. Louis and Kansas City Irish at Washington.

Delegations represnting Irish societies of St. Louis and Kansas City are in Washington to appear before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate in opposition to ratification of the league of nations covenant in the treaty of peace.

Representing the St. Louis societies are the Rev. Peter O'Rourke, president of the Friends of Irish Freedom; John P. Leahy and Dr. Robert Emmett Kane. The Kansas City societies are represented by E. Emmett O'Malley, who made the recent unsuccessful fight for Senator Reed before the State committee to preevnt indorsement of the league and repudiation of Reed.

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within Twenty-Four Hours.

Every druggist in this country is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer in this vicinity that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conquerer of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marveious results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Allenrhu relieves at once. Immediately after you start to take it the good work begins. It searches out the uric acid deposits, dissolves the secretions and drives rheumatic poison out of the body through the kidneys and bowels.

It's marvelous how quickly it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two days, and even in cases where the suffering is most painful all traces disappear in a few days.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed your druggist to guarantee it in every instance.—ADV.

LEFT WING SOCIALISTS EJECTED FROM CONVENTION AT CHICAGO

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Strife which presages a split developed in the ranks of the Socialist party, before Adolph Germer, national secretary, was able to call the opening meeting of the national convention to order here today. Delegates of the so-called left wing of the party were forcibly put out of the hall by policemen because Secretary Germer said they were trying to pack the convention by seating delegates who had no credentials. There was a fist fight between two delegates, which the police stopped.

Immediately after their expulsion from the convention hall, left-wing supporters, led by John Reed of New York, held a meeting. Reporters were not allowed in this meeting or in the main convention, where the process of seating delegates went on.

Members of the left wing who did not heed the advice of Reed said that if they were not recognized in the convention they would organize a new branch of the party.

PREPARE FOR TAILORS' STRIKE ON REFUSAL OF 8-HOUR DAY

Employers Offer Wage Increase of 25 Per Cent, but Won't Change Contract System.

Demands by the journeymen tailors' unions that an eight-hour day scale replace the present system of paying by piecework have been refused, W. J. Romer, spokesman for told a Post-Dispatch reporter. Romer says the merchant tailors are expecting a strike after tomorrow.

An increase of 25 per cent in the rate of pay has been offered by the merchant tailors, Romer said. He added that there is no disagreement on the wage question, but that the deadlock is on the question of changing the system. It would result in curtailing the output, he said.

The journeymen admit that it would. They say they now work from 12 to 18 hours a day, doing the work by contract at home.

FIUME QUESTION REPORTED UNSOLVED IN AUSTRIAN TREATY

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Council this morning decided to hand the peace treaty with Austria to the Austrian delegation next Tuesday afternoon.

Five days' delay will be granted the Austrians before signature of the treaty.

The Council concluded its examination of the treaty and approved the covering letter to accompany the document. The text of the treaty was sent to printers this evening.

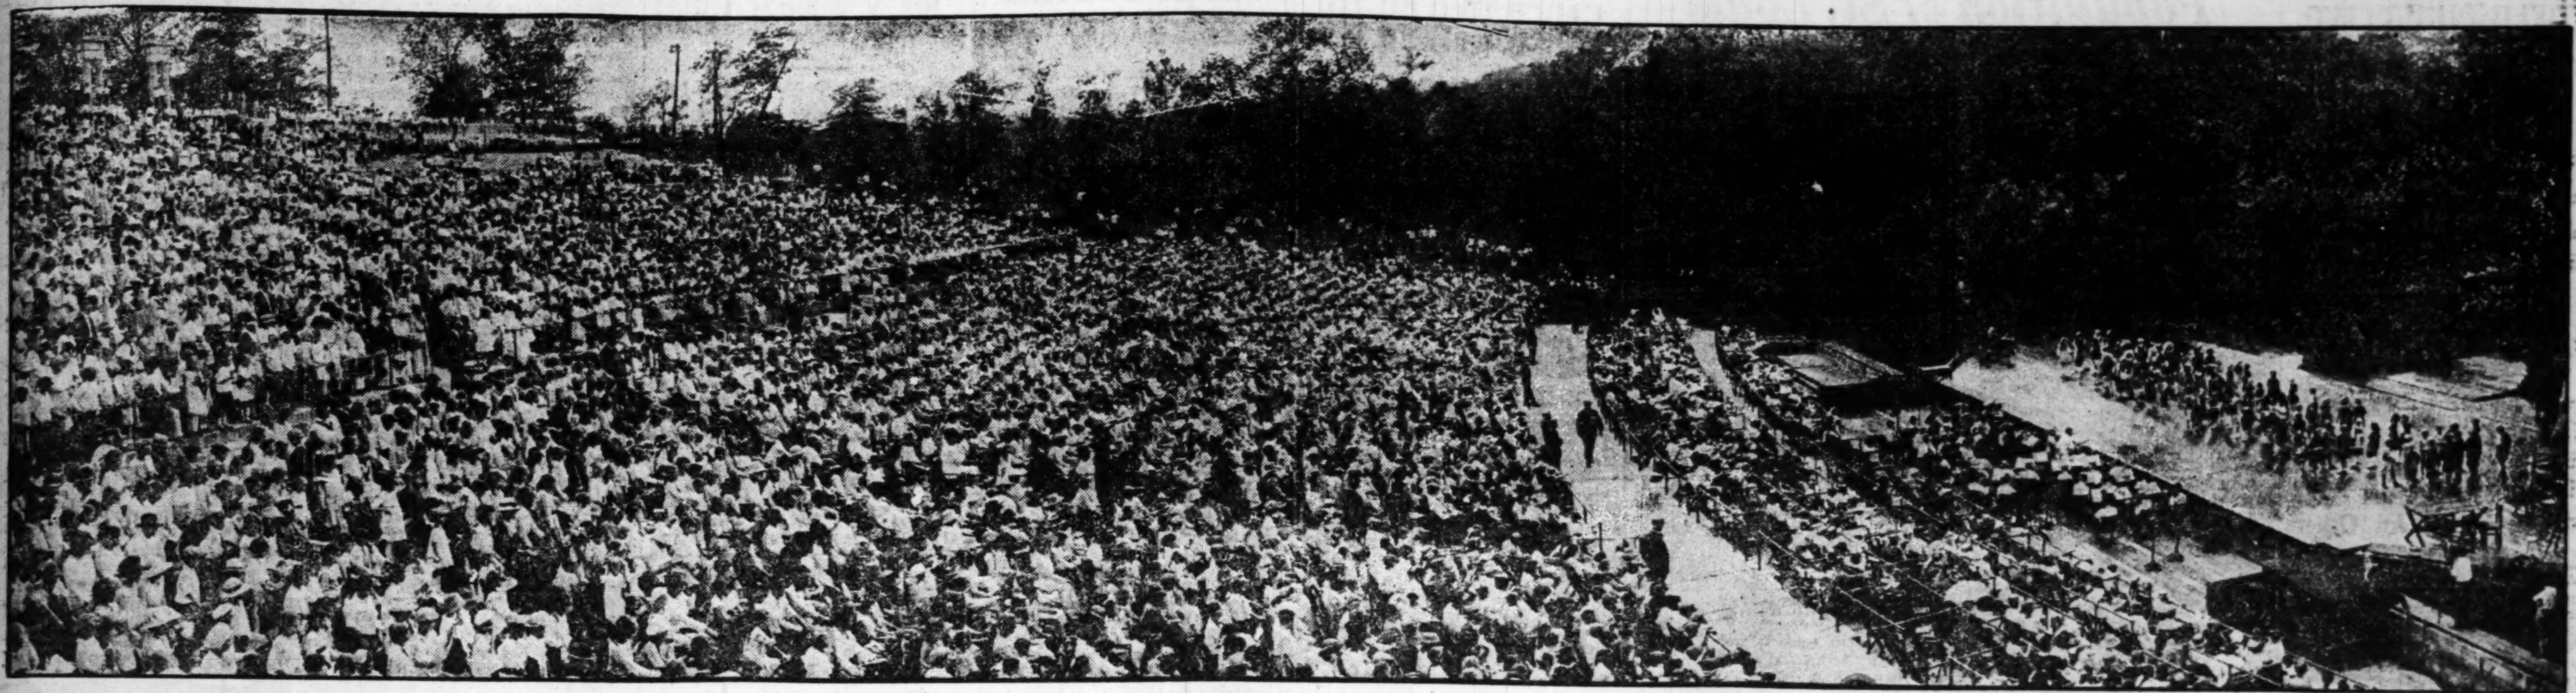
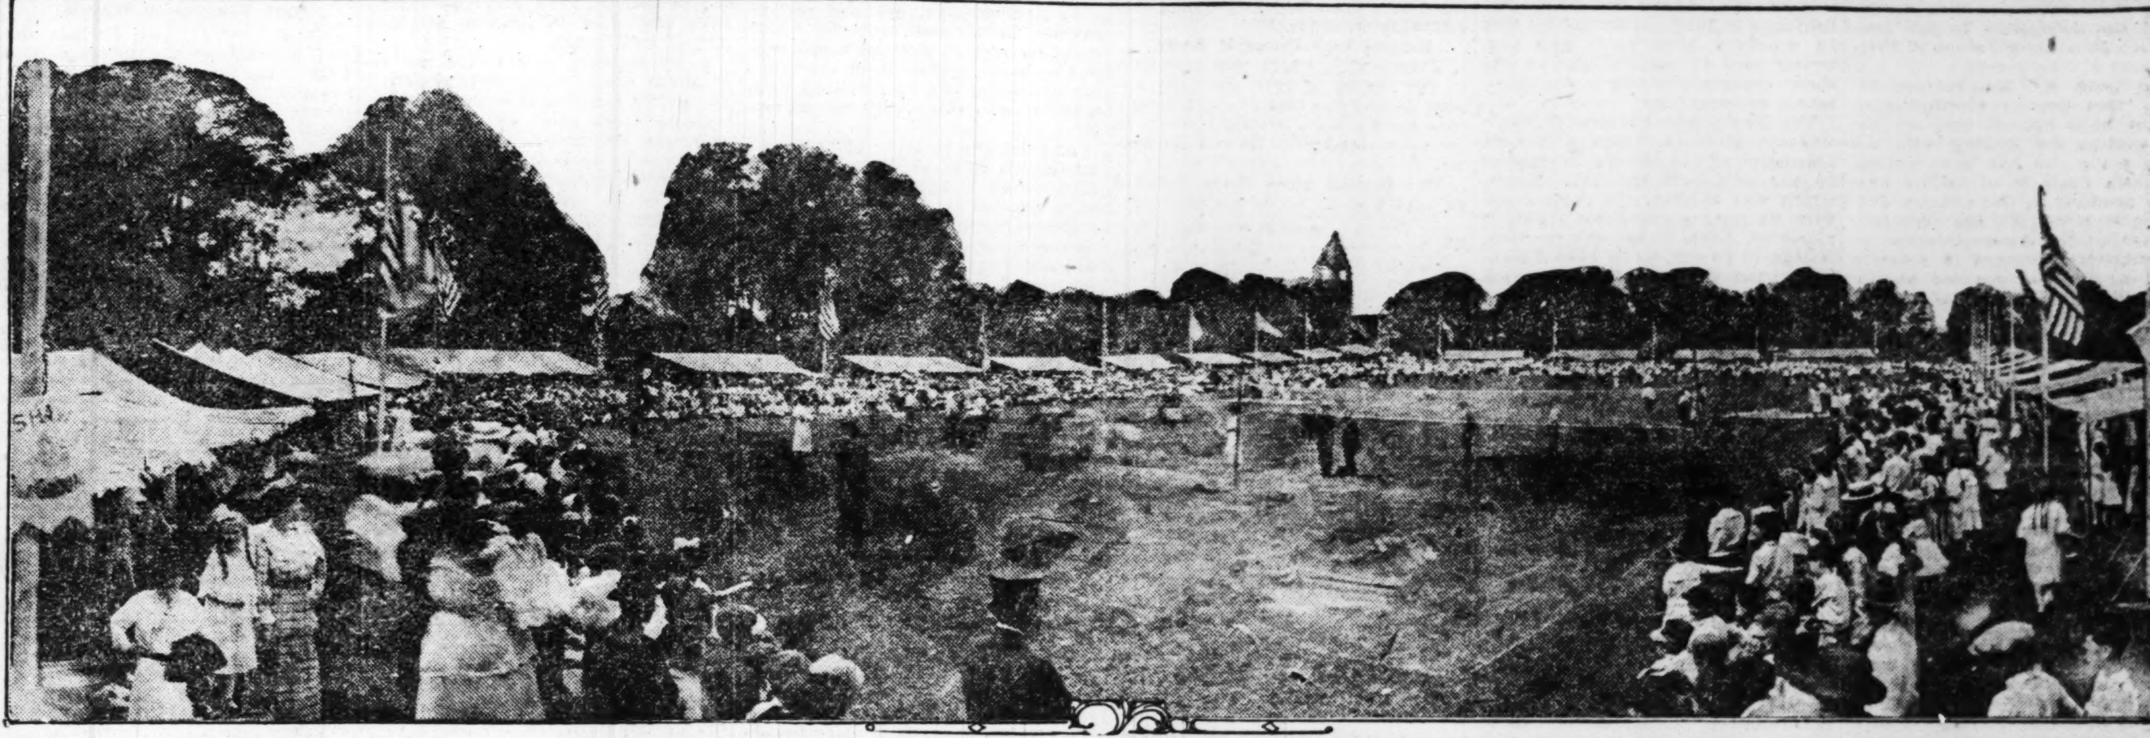
Two Striking Panoramic Views of the Playground Exhibition in Forest Park Yesterday





The upper photograph shows the crowd, stage and performers during the presentation of the play in the open-air theater, and the lower one shows the big playground and the booths for each of the playgrounds represented during the games.

8000 Children Romp All Day in Forest Park at Playground Festival

Participants, Including 1000 Orphans, Play Games, Eat Lunch and Sing—Hansel and Gretel Tale Presented.

Seven thousand children from the 24 municipal playgrounds and 1000 orphans, guests of Mayor Kiel, yesterday attended the thirteenth annual municipal playground festival on Cricket Lawn, Forest Park, which was postponed from last Thursday because of rain. The playground festival, held for the children of the city on the last Thursday of every August, is under the auspices of the Division of Parks and Recreation.

The children met at the various playgrounds at 9:15 o'clock and proceeded to the park on chartered cars. Those of the Shaw division marched from their park to the King's highway entrance of Forest Park, from where they were taken in the two park busses to the picnic grounds near the Lindell Pavilion. Shortly after their arrival the children of the other playgrounds began to appear, marching in columns from the De Baliviere entrance, cheering and singing, and carrying lunch baskets.

Many shelter tents fitted with tables and chairs were arranged around the lawn on which running tracks, jumping standards and volley ball courts were constructed.

Handwork on Display.

On display in the tents was the handiwork of the boys and girls. Toys they had made, crocheting, knitting, sewing and the crops of many small war gardens occupied places on the tables. Soon many of the girls and boys were exploring the park, visiting the lagoons and playing in the "woods," while others watched the athletic contests between colored children from the Kennerly, Leffingwell, and Dumas districts. The baseball teams of the Soulard and Gamble playgrounds played for the senior championship of the city, the Gamble team winning, 7 to 3, and later the Fairground tea mdefeated the Pontiac team, 10 to 3, for the junior championship.

The city provided 20,000 ice cream cones, and 20,000 bananas, peaches, and pears to be distributed free. Each child was given tickets for the refreshments and long lines formed early.

At noon lunches were spread and everyone "fell to" eagerly, except three small boys, conquerors in a tomato eating contest in which each had succeeded in consuming about a dozen tomatoes before some hundred and fifty competitors had finished. The boys, Morris Mandel, Gamble playgrounds, Anthony Leffler, Soulard and Tony Dugo, Shaw, all 12 years old, complained that they "didn't feel like eating much more."

H. C. L. Was Forgotten.

That such a thing as the H. C. L. exists was evidently not realized by the children's parents, who provided bounteous baskets, and what the children lacked the instructors made up.

After lunch there were more athletic contests. Foot races, shot put, high jump, and volley ball games lasted until 4:30. The Carr Square playgrounds outpointed the others. A feature of the afternoon was the "window jumping" contest between girls in which the object was to dive through the space between two horizontal poles. Mary McGee, 13 years old, O'Fallon division, won this event after diving through a 14-inch space 26 inches from the ground.

At 4:45 o'clock the children and members of the playgrounds staff presented the fairy tale of Hansel and Gretel in pantomime at the Municipal Theater. About 1100 children, all in costumes made by themselves, participated. Municipal busses were operated for the public from the De Baliviere entrance to the theater from 4 to 6 p. m., and shortly after 4 o'clock people began to arrive. Before the time for the beginning of the performance the theater was more than half full. Most of the spectators were women. At "curtain time" few good seats were available and Noel Poepping's band began to play.

Cast of Characters.

The part of Peter, father of Hansel and Gretel, was taken by Louis Kittlaus, director at the Fairground playgrounds, while Miss Lillian Harrison, instructor at the Riddick grounds, took the part of Gertrude, his wife. Gustavus Tuckerman was the witch. Minnie Mandelkern, 13 years old, was Gretel; Katherine Bottger, 13, Hansel; Ruth Beatty, 16, the guardian angel and Katherine Blake, 8, the fairy imp.

The two large oaks and the foliage and shrubbery in the background, natural "props," shaded the stage from the sun, only a network of light setting off the varicolored costumes to their best advantage.

The rest of the cast, villagers, angels, sprites, witches, and fire imps, danced through the play in a very creditable manner. They were instructed by Miss Agnes Cady. Two hundred negro girls clad in brown and without make-up were the ginger bread sprites who almost lured the two lost children to destruction in the second act, and 125 boys in small trunks with their bodies painted a bright red were the fire sprites who saved them.

Park Commissioner Cunliff, Rodowe Abeken and Miss Sarah Wolf arranged the festival. The performance of Hansel and Gretel will be repeated Tuesday night.

After the performance the children returned to the De Baliviere entrance where they were met by chartered cars to take them home.

10:30 o'clock the body was found beneath the railway trestle in Richland Creek, half a mile away, by a passing motorist, who saw a man's hand sticking out of the water.

The body had evidently been taken from the car after the death struggle and thrown into the creek, which was high owing to recent rains, and it had then floated down to the trestle, where it lodged against one of the stone pillars.

Cooper made a valiant fight against his assailant. This was evidenced by the clinched right arm, which was still flexed with closed fist as though to ward off blows to the face.

The trousers were torn at both knees and the right hose supporter was unfastened. The right side pocket of the trousers and a rear pocket were turned inside out.

His coat and vest had been half torn off in the struggle. The coroner's jury made an investigation. Death, physicians stated, resulted directly from a crushed skull, on which three blows, evidently made by the stone slab, had fallen respectively on the forehead, the right etmple and the base of the skull.

A Dragnet by Police.

The police soon had rounded up a number of suspects, following a theory they had worked out as he motive behind the crime. Going on the premise that this theory is correct, they have examined every man in Nashville who could have any relation to the motive that they believe instigated the murder.

That Cooper was sent for to go and meet some one, business associate, friend or stranger on important business, is the general idea on which the police are building their structure of deduction.

Two general theories have been advanced by nearby residents—first, that he was the victim of blackmail and, after meeting some one to whom he was to pay tribute, was murdered following an altercation. This is supported by his recent bank loan and the significant words to the stranger at the garage door. The other supposition is that Cooper was killed for purposes of robbery.

Frequently passing motorists who run out of gasoline will stop at the nearest house and ask for enough to get their machine back to town. The request is nearly always granted in the old-fashioned hospitable southern style. Upholders of this theory contend that the stranger had asked Cooper to lend him a little "gas" and drive him to his car at some mythical point; then, when they were in a dark place, an accomplice held up the machine and dealt the blows which resulted in death. This theory is partly carried out by the fact that his wallet and pockets were rifled.

Gov. Roberts has offered a $500 reward for the apprehension and conviction of the slayer, and Dr. Lucius Burch, brother-in-law of Cooper, has offered an additional $500.

The Killing of Carmack.

In November, 1908, former United States Senator Edward W. Carmack of Tennessee was shot to death in a duel in the central portion of this city by young Cooper and his father, Col. Duncan B. Cooper, following a bitter State political fight on the prohibition question, Carmack being leader of the "dry forces." Father and son were placed on trial, the former being convicted and sentenced to serve 20 years in the penitentiary, but was pardoned by the then Gov. Malcolm R. Patterson. Robin Cooper was convicted March 20, 1909, of murder in the second degree. The case was reversed as to him by the State Supreme Court April 13, 1910 and when it came back to the Davidson County Criminal Court it was dropped.

COUNTY PROSECUTOR LEARNS ABOUT SHOOTING AT MADISON

State's Attorney's Office at Edwardsville Has Taken No Action.

The State's Attorney's office at Edwardsville is no longer in ignorance of the fact that, in the "shoot-up-up" of a Madison labor meeting by Chief of Police Patrick McCambridge Wednesday night. One man was wounded seriously.

The news was conveyed to the office of the prosecutor yesterday by I. O. West of Edwardsville, chairman of the local Grievance Committee of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen.

West did not find State's Attorney Streuber, but told the story to one of his assistants, William M. P. Smith. The latter asked that the facts be laid before another assistant, Joseph F. Steele, of Granite City, who, he said, had been detailed to investigate this case.

Streuber, before West's visit, had announced that he would inaugurate prosecution if the facts warranted, but said he had not been apprised of the circumstances, except by hearing newspaper accounts spoken of. He had not read them himself, being busy with hearings before the Board of Tax Assessment Review, he said.

Joseph Wegdic, who was shot through the left lung while standing on the sidewalk near the hall where the labor meeting was being held, is in St. Elizabeth's Hospital at Granite City. McCambridge is still acting as Chief of Police of Madison.

CONFERENCE TUESDAY ON WATERWORKS WAGE

Conroy Says He Will Meet City Officials Again to Discuss Question.

James B. Conroy, representing firemen, oilers and coal passers at the city waterworks who are threatening to strike if their wage demands are not met, yesterday said that he would meet city officials Tuesday to again discuss the question with them.

Water Commissioner Wall and Charles Hertenstein, chairman of the Efficiency Board, Friday issued a warning to the public that the strike was not an "idle threat but a grave menace" and that if it takes place the city's water supply would fail within 12 hours. Wall said that the effect of such a failure upon business and private life would be "indescribable."

The statement attacked Conroy for failure to keep agreements and failure to abide by the provisions of the city charter in presenting his demands for the men. They ask $180 a month for firemen and oilers and $125 a month for coal passers.

The city officials charge that Conroy's first demand was for 75 cents an hour for firemen and oilers and $125 a month for coal passers and that he promised to put them in writing.

He did not fulfill his promise, it is charged, and at the next conference changed the demand. At another conference Thursday, he agreed to submit a list of firms paying the scale demanded, it is set forth, attention being called to the fact that the city charter provides that the city can pay no more than the prevailing wage, but that early next morning, he called the Water Commissioner from his bed and told him to support the men's demands or a strike would follow.

TREATY LABOR SECTION DEFENDED BY GOMPERS

Federation President Declares It Was Drawn by Labor Men for Labor, and Will Stand.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement to the League to Enforce Peace, takes issue with the opposition to the labor articles of the peace treaty which has a proposal before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to strike them out.

"The covenant for a league of nation and the treaty of peace of which it is a part," said Gompers, "hold the first world agreement among the nations to keep all that has been secured for labor and to make the standards already gained universal, advancing and improving for all men, for all women and for all children. Until ratified the covenant and treaty are not safe and the United States is not a party. Any amendment to this treaty will send it back to all the 27 nations concerned, Germany included.

"This first international charter for the rights of labor should be adopted without delay. It begins among the nations the great and sublime task of raising the level of the conditions of labor the world over. Every workman in the world, wherever he may be, is put in peril by every workman whose hours are long, whose pay is inadequate, whose conditions of labor are dangerous and whose standard of life is low.

Difficulties Intensified.

"Every child at work at too early an age makes it more difficult to maintain the age standard for the labor of childhood. This is 14 years in many of our states. It should be 16. Children working at a lower age make it harder to improve and keep the present child standards. So with the women. Every woman toiling 12 and 14 hours a day renders it harder for every woman working eight hours a day—it should be six—to keep her hours secure.

"The world needs to be made safe for labor as well as for democracy. The world cannot be safe for democracy until it is safe for labor. The only sure protection for any labor anywhere is universal justice to all labor everywhere. The covenant and treaty delayed so long in the Senate proposes to gain this. This cannot come in a day, in a year or in a decade; but it is possible to turn the world of nations in this direction, to give the command of forward, march! to keep the world moving until this great end is won. This cannot be done if the treaty is amended or delayed.

Denies Claim by Fall.

"Senator Fall of New Mexico has already proposed that the labor articles of the treaty be cut out under the pretense that they level down. They do not!

"The article of the treaty creating a conference of labor in which all nations are represented provides that the article 'shall be interpreted in accordance with the following principles: "In no case shall any member be asked or required, as a result of the adoption of any recommendation or draft convention by the conference, to lessen the protection afforded by the existing legislation to the workers concerned." The labor articles of the treaty were drawn by labor men for labor. They will stand."

PERSHING DECLINES TO BE QUESTIONED BY CONGRESSMEN

most of the questions to be propounded would not require data. He then declined to appear before the committee and testify. He will later be called to appear before the committee in the United States.

"The subcommittee has already examined the Secretary of War and the Chief of Staff concerning some of the matters referred to, but was told that the information was in France.

"It is regrettable that there should be even the appearance of conflict between the military and civil authority at a time when the world should become normal and be governed not by armies or individuals, but by law."

Representative Bland's statement reads:

"All I care to say personally about Gen. Pershing's refusal to testify before the Congressional Committee—and, I speak for myself alone—is that he and his army are bigger than our sergeant at arms of the House of Representatives, and he, of course, can avoid giving us the information we desire. I think it is apparent that the War Department has during the entire war shown its indifference and contempt for the wishes of the people and their representatives and this is only a clear cut, concrete example of that sentiment.

"For the time being we will try to get along in our investigations here without Gen. Pershing's aid."

The Panama peace delegation, in behalf of the President of Panama, has presented Gen. Pershing with a gold medal in appreciation of his efforts in the allied cause.

The sparrows were huddled in an opposite corner apparently in fear.

PALMER EXPLAINS FRELINGHUYSEN'S FIGHT ON HIM

Attorney-General Says New Jersey Senator Was Interested in Properties Affected by War Legislation.

CITES VOTE AGAINST TRADING MEASURE

Declares Senator's Insurance Company Blocked Liquidation When All Others Co-operated With Him.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON Aug. 30.—Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer in a statement issued tonight ascribes personal interests in enemy owned corporations as the motive behind the opposition to his confirmation by Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey.

"The truth is," Mr. Palmer declares, "that Senator Frelinghuysen has not been against me; he has been against the trading with the enemy act ; he has been against the whole business of taking over enemy property in this country during the war, and he has especially been against the Americanization of the industrial concerns in America owned by our enemies and heretofore used in a hostile way against this country's interest."

In his statement the Attorney-General also charges that Senator Calder of New York, with Frelinghuysen "is pleasing Germany with this business. They have received special mention by the German Foreign Office for their activities, which Germany hopes may result in the Germans getting all their property back."

Palmer in his statement goes back to July, 1917, when the original Trading With the Enemy Act was under consideration by Congress when Senator Frelinghuysen requested the Senate Committee on Commerce to hear Neal Bassett, urged that enemy insurance companies be not interfered with.

"Mr. Bassett was followed by Senator Frelinghuysen," Palmer says, "with a statement to support Bassett's argument, but Senator Frelinghuysen did not tell the committee that he was at that time financially interested in four insurance companies whose relations with German companies would be so adroitly affected by the legislation then proposed. So far as the records show, Senator Frelinghuysen was the only member of Congress who appeared before the Senate Committee to endeavor to influence its conduct in the framing of trading with the enemy act."

"I am informed that Senator Frelinghuysen carried his fight against me to the end," Palmer's statement begins, "by speaking and voting against my confirmation as Attorney-General when the matter came up in the Senate yesterday. It is only fair that the motives which had actuated Senator Frelinghuysen in his continued opposition to my appointment should be clearly known. He has raised no question of my fitness or character, but has complained of my qualities and conduct while serving with the office of Alien Property Custodian."

The Attorney-General declares that Senator Frelinghuysen was the only member of Congress who ever sought to stay the hand of the Alien Property Custodian in taking over and disposing of enemy-owned properties in the United States. "When the Alien Property Custodian took over the enemy interest in the six great woolen and worsted mills of Pasiasc, N. J.," Palmer says, "Senator Frelinghuysen called upon him to protest against the then official management of the properties and against any sale of the enemy interests."

Palmer says that when the liquidation of branches of enemy insurance companies was in progress the Alien Property Custodian received cheerful co-operation from all American companies which had contracts of reinsurance with the German companies, permitting a par tliquidation of the enemy compart liquidation of the enemy com-

"When we came to liquidate the Balkan insurance companies," he says, "we found they had reinsurance contracts with 12 American companies. Eleven of them promptly agreed to rewrite their contracts so as to permit us to close up the Balkan affairs. Only one company of the 12 refused to do so, and insisted that this reinsurance contract should run until the end of the time, which would be in 1920. This position on the part of the one company effectually blocked the final liquidation of the Balkan companies, and the only American insurance company that stood in the way, therefore, of the final and complete liquidation of the German insurance companies in the UnitedStates was the Stuyvesant Insurance Co., of which the president, is Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen of New Jersey.

"When the original Trading With the Enemy Act was adopted no power was given the Alien Property Custodian to sell enemy owned properties except to prevent waste. The Alien Property Custodian was expected to take over and administer these German properties, and by his administration earn great profits for their owners which they might claim the benefit of at the conclusion of the war—profits which resulted from the war itself for which their owners or owners friends were responsible. This seemed to me an almost immoral proceeding and I conceived the idea that since many of these German-owned properties had been spy centers and most of the sedition was planted here with hostile intent, it would be quite proper to strike a real blow at the enemy by destroying the German hold upon American industries. I, therefore, asked the Congress to give the Alien Property Custodian the general power of sale, in order to permit these great properties to be put in American hands, the proceeds to be held for final disposition after the war. That amendment was presented at the Congress in March, 1918, at the time when German successes on the field of battle were calling for the strongest measures on the part of the United States and her allies. When the amendment—designed to destroy the German commercial and economic penetration of America and to strike a blow at the enemy from which he would be slow to recover—finally reached a vote, of all the 526 members of the American Congress only one recorded his vote against it, and that was Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey.

"I was not surprised, therefore, when my nomination as Attorney-General reached the Senate that only one Senator would object, and that one Senator Frelinghuysen of New Jersey, and neither was I surprised when the vote on confirmation was finally reached to find him still plotting and voting against me."

Statisticians Estimate Population of St. Louis as Seventh in Nation

Put Cleveland, Detroit and Boston Ahead in Count Based on Water and School Report.

What is the population of St. Louis?

The United States Government will answer this question next year, in the course of the 1920 census. But St. Louis, like other cities, cannot wait until next year to find out.

The publishers of the new city directory estimate the population at 922,900, on the basis of two and one-half inhabitants for every name in the alphabetical list.

The Bell Telephone Co. makes an estimate of 830,000, based on a canvass which its employes made in the fall of 1917, and on a percentage for subsequent increases.

Company Makes Estimate.

Neither of these estimates makes a comparison with the present population of other cities. An estimate has just been made by the Newspaper Feature Bureau of Wheeling, W. Va., which specializes in municipal statistics, of the present population of cities which had 25,000 inhabitants in 1910. It announces that its estimates were made with particular view to the statistics of city water departments and to the latest school enumerations.

The Newspaper Feature Bureau's estimate gives St. Louis a present population of 824,435, an increase of 20 per cent over the 1910 figure, which was 687,029. In comparison with its figures for other cities, it places St. Louis in seventh position, instead of fourth, as in 1910. Cleveland, Detroit and Boston, which were behind St. Louis in the 1910 official figures, are placed ahead of this city in the Bureau's estimate, although only a small margin in Boston's favor is shown. Cleveland and Detroit are shown as tied for fourth place. Boston is ranked as sixth.

Selections in Order.

"The Bureau's selection of the 20 leading cities, in estimated present population, is as follows:

RANK—City.	1910.	1919.
1—New York	4,766,883	6,244,616
2—Chicago	2,185,282	3,039,396
3—Philadelphia	1,549,008	1,936,260
4—Cleveland	560,663	936,300
4—Detroit	465,766	936,300
6—Boston	670,585	830,625
7—St. Louis	687,029	824,435
8—Baltimore	558,485	726,030
9—Pittsburg	533,905	667,381
10—Los Angeles	319,198	574,556
11—San Francisco	416,912	555,882
12—Buffalo	423,715	516,932
13—Milwaukee	373,857	504,707
14—Cincinnati	363,591	472,668
15—New Orleans	339,075	440,797
16—Washington	331,069	430,390
17—Minneapolis	301,408	421,971
18—Newark	347,469	416,963
19—Seattle	237,194	396,323
20—Rochester	218,149	349,038

Its estimates for Missouri and Illinois cities aside from St. Louis and Chicago, are:

MISSOURI.	April 15, '10.	July 1, '19.
Joplin	32,073	44,902
Kansas City	248,381	331,175
St. Joseph	77,403	103,204
Springfield	35,201	44,001

ILLINOIS.	April 15, '10.	July 1, '19.
Aurora	29,807	41,729
Bloomington	25,768	28,989
Danville	27,871	39,019
Decatur	31,140	49,824
East St. Louis	58,547	97,579
Elgin	25,976	29,223
Evanston	24,978	34,969
Joliet	34,670	48,558
Moline	24,199	32,265
Peoria	66,950	93,730
Quincy	36,587	43,904
Rockford	45,401	75,065
Rock Island	24,335	36,563
Springfield	51,678	67,181

The latter table shows East St. Louis as the second city of Illinois, a distinction which it has claimed for some time past, with Peoria third and Rockford and Springfield following in order.

Kansas City Crowded Down.

Kansas City, which was twentieth in the census of 1910, does not appear among the first 20 cities in the list, having been crowded down in the estimates by Seattle and Rochester.

The bureau gives these detailed estimates on St. Louis' population:

	April 15, 1910.	July 1, 1919.
White	642,488	770,985
Negro	43,960	52,753
Other races	581	697
White, native parents	269,836	323,803
White, foreign parents	246,946	296,335
White, foreign born	125,706	150,847
Males	346,068	415,281
Females	340,961	409,154
Males of voting age	221,913	266,296
Illiterates over 10	21,123	25,348
No. school age, 6-20	181,402	217,682
No. in school	101,320	121,584
Families	155,555	186,666

In explaining the means by which it reached its estimates, the Bureau says it sought first-hand information, and did not figure on the assumption that the increase since 1910 would be in the same ratio as between 1900 and 1910. The Government is said to have followed this method in some of its estimates. The Bureau says the report of the St. Louis Water Department shows an increase of 16 per cent in the number of water consumers, over 1910, and that the enrollment figures of public and parochial schools showed a 20 per cent increase.

TENTH WARD FOOD SALE ENDS UNTIL STOCK IS REPLENISHED

Store Sells Out at 2:30 P. M. With Record Receipts of $2021.64—to Reopen Thursday.

The demand for army food was so great yesterday that the store which the Tenth Ward Improvement Association is conducting at 3908 South Broadway closed its doors at 2:30 p. m., its stock exhausted and $2021.64 receipts in the register. It will require until next Thursday to replenish the stock. The store will reopen on that day with a larger supply than on any of the five days it has been operated.

The receipts yesterday were the largest of any of the five days, whose total was $5721. Customers began forming in line at 6 a. m. There were 100 waiting at 6:30 and 400 outside when the doors opened at 9 a. m. Twenty clerks were required to serve them.

A grocer across the street, himself a member of the Tenth Ward Association, goodnaturedly remarked that he could handle his business single-handed. Boys who waited about the army food store with their wagons did a thriving business among those who bought more than they could carry home.

The customers came from all over the city. One man and his wife resided in Walnut Park. Letters from housewives by the score expressed inability to come in person and asked that certain desired purchases be "laid aside." Each letter is being answered with the information that customers must call in person.

Buttermilk Creates Beauty Overnight

Delightful New Vanishing Cream Containing True Buttermilk Makes You Look Years Younger or Money Back.

The first application of Howard's Buttermilk Cream will astonish you. It creates beauty almost like magic, but the most wonderful thing about it is the fact that whilst it turns the dullest and most lifeless complexion to radiant beauty and makes red or rough arms snowy white, yet there is not the slightest sign of its use after application. It actually vanishes from sight, and the most heated atmosphere will not produce the least shininess or greasiness of the skin.

There is no secret about it, nor is there any doubt about the result—it's just common ordinary Buttermilk in the form of a wonderful cream gently massaged with the finger tips around the corners of the eyes and mouth.

To prove this to your complete satisfaction obtain a small quantity of Howard's Buttermilk Cream at your druggist on the money-back-if-dissatisfied plan. The directions are simple, and it costs so little that any girl or woman can afford it.—ADV.

INCREASE OF CASH FARES TO 8 OR 10 CENTS INDICATED

Public Service Commission Is Expected to Order Change Early This Week—Executive Session Held.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 30.—All indications here tonight are that the Public Service Commission will increase street car fares in St. Louis by an order to be delivered early next week. The new rate will be an 8 or 10 cent maximum for single rides, with a rate of 7 or 7½ cents, if tickets or tokens are bought in larger numbers.

The commission will not adopt the zone plan suggested by officials of the company, and urged by R. Perry Spencer, chief counsel to the commission, because the commission believes such a radical change in the system of fares would create a serious disturbance in real estate values throughout the city.

Increase Conceded.

The commission met in executive session today, and probably voted upon its verdict, but the result will not be made public until the opinion and order can be prepared by a member who voted with the majority.

At least one member of the commission is said to favor a 7-cent fare, when tickets are bought in bulk, another favors an 8-cent fare.

Everybody interested in the decision concedes that the commission will order an increase in fares. No application by a utility corporation of any prominence has been denied by the commission for many months. The street railway company in Kansas City was given 8-cent maximum fares, with tickets selling at 7 cents each if bought in groups of 50.

The maximum wage in Kansas City is 48 cents an hour for motormen and conductors, while in St. Louis the maximum is 60 cents under the recent ruling of the commission, which sat as a board of arbitration. This ruling has been accepted by the company.

Will Hear Protest Tuesday.

The commission will hear a protest from a citizens' committee of Kirkwood and St. Louis County residents at the hearing room in Jefferson City Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

Immediately after that hearing, the commission will prepare its order in the case, so that the increase to be granted will be available for paying the increased wages.

U. R. Discontinues Sale of Tokens Until Fare Decision Is Announced

STREET car riders who yesterday sought to buy tokens issued by the United Railways to be used in payment of fares were told by street car conductors that the sale of tokens had been discontinued.

Col. Albert T. Perkins, manager of the company, said last night that the token had been recalled for reissuance "in a different form."

"Is the form to be changed?" he was asked.

"Not exactly," he said, "but they will be wrapped differently."

"The tokens have been recalled to be reissued at whatever rate the Public Service Commission may fix next week, have they not?" Col. Perkins was asked.

"Yes," he said.

ARGUMENTS OF CITY ON FARES AS SENT TO SERVICE COMMISSION

The argument of the city's legal department against an increase in street car fares in St. Louis was forwarded to the Public Service Commission last night. It sets forth chiefly:

1. The company bases it petition upon its need for further revenue to meet increased wages authorized for trainmen and to provide a fair return on a tentative valuation for the property. The only issue at this time is to determine whether there is need for further revenue to meet wage question. The question of return on valuation and all other considerations is one to be left until the commission's valuation of the railways now in progress is completed.

2. An increase ought not now to be awarded, because government, business and labor are insisting that the status quo be maintained until present uncertainties become adjusted. The prospect of higher street car fares has created "greater discontent in St. Louis than has prevailed at any time in the past." The burden of increased car fares will fall upon those least able to bear it.

Company Earned Surplus.

3. Readjustment of the operating charges to compliance with facts establishes that the company earned a "substantial surplus" for the year ending May 31, 1919, and reports for June and July indicate a greater surplus next year.

4. An increase now would put a premium upon bad management. The public has a right to expect that revenue needs shall be met with operating economies. If revenue needs are to be met each time they occur with increased fares, there would be no end to the increased fares demanded.

5. Since the consolidation of street car lines, car riders have returned $30,000,000 to the company above its operating charges and fixed return on capital investment, which either has been paid back to the security holders or reinvested in the company, increasing their equity. Owners have been repaid a considerable portion of their investment. If fares are to be increased to continue this policy, it should be recognized by formal contract that the car riders are purchasing the property.

Double Transfer Defended.

6. The application for elimination of the double transfer is "particularly unreasonable and indicates a wanton disregard for the rights and convenience of the traveling public." It is pointed out that double transfers usually are employed to go from one line via a second line to some point on a third line without the longer trip into the congested district to the point where the first and third lines intersect. Its abolishment would mean longer rides and greater congestion. The company can correct any abuse of the double transfer by compelling its trainmen to punch the route for which it is issued.

7. The present plight of the company was brought about by mismanagement. The receiver, in his presentation of his case, did not disclose any change in policy from the previous management. The same arguments were presented, the same figures used, the same incorrect bookkeeping methods used and the policy of compelling riders to pay "several times" for the same service continued.

8. The application for increase in fares affecting a populaton one-fourth of that of the State of Missouri has been too precipitate and the city is unable to more completely defend the welfare of its citizens, but asks the commisson not to dispatch the matter without due regard for the rights of the people affected.

Commission Will Hear Protest of Kirkwood Citizens Tuesday.

The Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City yesterday, after receiving a telegraphic protest from a mass meeting in Kirkwood against granting the petition of Receiver Wells of the United Railways for permission to increase the street car fare from Kirkwood to St. Louis from 11 to 22½ cents, set the matter for hearing in Jefferson City Tuesday morning.

This is an indication that the commission will not put into effect, before later in the week at least, increased street car fares on the county lines. The company asked that increases in city and county fares be ordered effective Monday, when the wage increase recently allowed by the commission becomes effective.

The application on the Meramec Highlands line, which serves Kirkwood, is for the creation of two zones between the western limits of St. Louis and Kirkwood. At present the fare is 5 cents from Maplewood to Kirkwood. The company is asking that it be made 15 cents, and that the fare from the city limits downtown be made 7½ cents, a total of 22½ cents.

More than 600 residents of Kirkwood met Friday night and formulated a protest, declaring that the increased fare would ruin the town of Kirkwood in that many persons residing there and employed in St. Louis would move into the city, and Kirkwood real estate values would suffer. They asked a hearing before action favorable to the company was taken. The granting of the hearing followed.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL

Few People Know How Useful It Is in Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, and after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."—ADV.

STRIKING MINERS TO BEGIN MARCH TODAY

Belleville Men Will Go Into Southern Illinois in Effort to Bring Out Workers.

More than 500 striking miners of the Belleville district, who have disregarded the orders of their union officials to return to work, met last night in Budweiser Garden, Belleville, and heard plans outlined for the intended march into Southern Illinois, in the endeavor to call out miners in the Duquoin, Carbondale and other important fields.

The march, it was announced, probably will begin today, as it is desired to get into the Southern Illinois fields by Tuesday, when the miners will be returning to work after tomorrow's observance of Labor day. The march has been compared to that of Coxey's Army upon the national capital, which took place 25 years ago last spring, but it is planned to have the miners' march better provisioned, and to have a more definite purpose in view, than was the case with Coxey's Army.

The men were urged to appear at Hitchings' Hall, Belleville, at 9 o'clock this morning, to enlist for the march. The exact time of starting was not announced.

Soup Kitchen on Wheels.

Dan Slinger of Glen Carbon, the chief speaker at the meeting, told of the plans for the march. He said a soup kitchen on wheels would accompany the marchers, that a 30-gallon kettle would furnish "mulligan," the chief article of diet, and that bread and coffee would be provided.

Captains and lieutenants will be chosen, he said, men who have been in the army being preferred for these posititons, and strict discipline will be maintained. No pilfering of food supplies in towns or from fields will be permitted, he announced.

"Wear overalls and hobnail shoes," he instructed the men. "We will go on the Illinois Central tracks. At Duquoin we will meet a bunch that will start from Springfield, and at Odin Junction we will take on some comrades from O'Fallon."

Luke Coffey, chairman of the policy committee, also spoke. The men seemed to favor the idea of the march, and some said the number leaving Belleville would be between 200 and 300.

Speakers Attack Farrington.

The speakers attacked the authority of Frank Farrington, president of the State United Mine Workers, and said the existing contract must be "smashed," as it did not provide a living for the miners, owing to the scarcity of work.

Farrington had announced that the local union's charter would be forfeited unless the miners returned to work by noon yesterday.

An Associated Press dispatch from Springfield last night said that coal operators there predicted that the Belleville strikers' pilgrimage to the southern part of the State would be a failure. The miners in the southern end of the State, the operators declared, are hostile to the radical program, and will not welcome the Belleville visitors.

The Springfield dispatch said that most of the miners in the Springfield district were at work, and that the State officials would carry out the threat to revoke the charters of local union whose members remained on strike.

At Mine No. 2 at Glen Carbon, Madison County, yesterday morning, a group of about 150 miners, returning to work, encountered about 200 miners from Maryville, three miles distant, who were striking, and who urged them to remain out. Many of the men in both groups were accompanied by their wives, and the women joined in the discussion.

Men Induced to Strike.

The Glen Carbon women said they wanted their husbands to work, because they need the money. The Maryville miners' wives said the strike was for a principle, and that the Glen Carbon men ought not to give in. A number of hair-pulling matches between the women were stopped by their husbands. The Maryville women had their way, and the Glen Carbon miners did not go to work.

At a Collinsville mine about 75 men who desired to return to work were met by a much larger body of strikers and were dissuaded.

The charter of local No. 4499, at Collinsville, whose members are employed at the Donk mine in Edwardsville, was taken up yesterday, for failure of the members to return to work as directed. Mose Johnson, member of the executive board for sub-district 12, was asked to make recommendations to the State executive board on the subject of forming a new local for the Donk mine, with headquarters in Edwardsville.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

STEEL STOCKS FEATURE WEEK'S TRADING ON THE WALL STREET EXCHANGE

Crucible Steel Registers Gain of 24 Points on Active Buying—Oil Shares and Rails Also Strong.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"Nobody can have failed to observe that when disquieting news regarding railway labor came to hand, it was the industrial shares of the highly speculative type which were weakest, and that when that situation seemed to have suddenly improved, it was the speculative industrials which advanced.

"This may have seemed odd to some observers. It meant nothing more, however, than that Wall Street was really directing its speculative energies almost wholly to these fluctuating industrial stocks. Their rise or fall did not necessarily indicate any betterment of their earning prospects or intrinsic value, but the cheerful or despondent mood of the moment in financial circles generally.

"It would be quite in line with stock market precedent, circumstances being what they are, for the price of Mexican Petroleum to rise excitedly if the Senate should ratify the treaty, or for Royal Dutch to break on news of a great victory by the Russian Bolsheviki. The market for these stocks is the easiest channel through which Wall Street emotions can find expression.

Industrials Active.

"The reason for the exceptional activity in that kind of stocks at the present juncture is perhaps not so obvious. Whether and to what extent the money market is destined to tighten this coming autumn, is, no doubt debatable; but there can be no dispute of the fact that if Wall Street were to be confronted with a 'money squeeze,' these highly speculative stocks would feel the effect of it more than others would. It is those stocks whose position in the market after a violent rise, is particularly dependent on the facilities of the money market.

"In that regard, however, it is the teaching of Stock Exchange experience that an extremely speculative movement of the sort is rarely visited with apprehensions about curtailment of its financial facilities.

"There is, however, another reason for the converging of interest on these stocks at just such a time as this. With other investment shares—the well-known and 'seasoned' industrials or the railway stocks—there are special elements of perplexity in calculations for the future, and they impress Wall Street for the very reason that so much of a definite character is known of the earnings and prospects of the companies.

"Doubts over the attitude of labor in a given standard industry, or over impending legislation on the control of transportation enterprises, will check speculation and limit advances, where the scope of all such possibilities can be definitely measured.

Traders Play Favorites.

"But a stock whose actual situation or outlook is only vaguely known—of which it is supposed that an overnight incident of nature or of legislation or of court decrees, may suddenly enrich the holder, and whose actual prospects are only vaguely known—gives play to the imagination which is not provided by the others.

So far as regards even the standard investment shares, however, the developments of this week, notably in the field of labor, have been disinctly reassuring. An element of sober intelligence, which has not existed in European labor circles, has come into pretty plain sight, and it has brought into united action, along conservative lines, the Government and the union officials.

"It is possible that the dominant influence of the very near future will be, that question of paramount importance, the provision by legislation for the future of the railways.

"The current report that the Senate Committee's railway plan will be made public within a week is not surprising; as matters stand, Congress has only the four months up to Dec. 31 to legislate on the matter. The Senate Committee has had the problem longest in hand; it heard all the necessary testimony months before the House Committee began to consider the question, and it has the most competent and experienced leadership for such problems. Whatever plan of railway readjustment it submits will be at least the nucleus of the coming discussion.

The Railroad Question.

"Doubtless it may be a storm center; for many of the known ideas of the Senate Comittee leaders are as far apart as the poles from the happy-thought 'Plumb plans,' of the past few weeks. We are likely to hear from this committee a good deal more about private administration and Government assurance of earnings large enough to give the properties the standing which they need, than about handing over control to the railway employes for their peculiar benefit.

"All this may bring the discussion back to a sane and profitable basis; even the author of the 'Plumb plan' has admitted to friends in labor union circles that Congress is strangely unresponsive of his solution of the transportation problem. But we have yet to learn the attitude of the general public—which will settle the matter.

"The stock market was sharply higher on the week, with steel shares the strongest issues. Crucible steel lead with an advance of 24⅝ points. Mexican Petroleum gained 15¾ points."

Trading was suspended on the Stock Exchange yesterday, to permit brokerage houses to catch up in their work, which was far behind owing to recent heavy sales of stocks. The St. Louis Stock Exchange and other stock markets, as well as the New York Cotton Exchange, also voted to close. The Chicago Board of Trade, the St. Louis Merchants' Exchange and other commercial exchanges, and the livestock markets held sessions as usual. All of the important markets of the country, with the exception of the livestock markets, will be closed tomorrow, Labor day. Banks and financial institutions also will suspend business. Owing to the New York Stock Exchange being closed yesterday, Friday's final figures are used in compiling the weekly stock tables on this page.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE NEW YORK CURB MARKET

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Trading on the Broad Street curb during the past week was marked by many variable movements, weakness prevailing at the start, with an orderly recovery at the end. The industrial issues were pressed for sale when reports were current of labor unrest, but these issues were in better demand after the announcement of the President's attitude, and the apparent agreement to join hands with the executive by the labor leaders.

General Asphalt, after declining to 73, advanced to 78, and Indian Packing, which dropped from 34 to 27¼, rallied to 34½.

Allied Packing sold down to 54, and then rallied to 58. United States Rubber "rights," after selling at 9½, advanced to 12½, and United States Industrial Alcohol "rights" first yielded to 22 and then advanced to 28. Tobacco Products Exports moved in the same way, declining to 30, with a rally to 33.

American Shipbuilding was in supply for a time, selling at 34, but suddenly improved and advanced yesterday to 39. Madison Tire, a new comer on the curb, ranged from 45 to 51. New York Shipbuilding was exceptionally heavy, declining from 61 to 56. Submarine Boat was also heavy, selling from 16 to 14¾. The Savold issues failed to recover much of the losses sustained in the preceding week, Sabold Tire ranging from 43 to 39 and Ohio Savold from 38 to 34.

Independent Oil stocks followed the course of the petroleum group on the Stock Exchange closely. Sinclair ranged from 55⅝ to 59; and Sinclair Gulf from 55¾ to 59, both stocks reacting from the highest range. Home Oil was in good demand, with trading at 17¾ to 19¼. Midwest Refining had the widest range, being traded in at 163 to 170.

General Tractors, which first appeared on the Curb yesterday, started at 9¼, but met offerings in large volume and dropped to 6¼. Columbia Graphaphone was in fairly good demand, ranging from 45¾ to 47½.

A new feature appeared in the mining market in the development of strength in the silver shares, which were bought on the advance of the silver metal in the London market, and the outlook for favorable adjustment of the labor situation in the Tonopah fields.

Hay Market.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by Graham & Martin Grain Co., Merchants' Exchange.

Timothy hay market is strong and higher on the better grades of timothy, which are in excellent local request. The medium grades are in better demand, buyers being unable to supply themselves with the best grades, have bought freely of the medium grades. Low grade hay, hay that is grassy and weedy is slow selling, the demand being very limited and values low. Quote:

HOG MARKET IS $2.35 LOWER FOR THE WEEK

Prices at National Stockyards Are Under Pressure on All Grades of Hogs.

Cattle receipts this week total 38,000 head, compared with a run of 33,500 the preceding week and 43,800 the same week a year ago. Offering was fair in respect to quality and about the average volume of steers were included.

Early trade on choice to prime steers was steady, but late week market weakened and values closed 75c to $1.00 lower on practically all grades. Market was slow and one of the dullest in months. Best steers topped for the week at $17.85, with a spread of $12.00 to $13.75 covering the rank and file.

Butcher cattle were slow and dull after Monday, declining 50c to $1.00 on the average. Choice light weight heifers suffered least. Good fat cows came in for severe hammering all week. Bulk of the cows sold from $7.00 to $9.00, with choice to prime up to $11.50. Canners sold as low as a nickel late, the low point in past two months. Stockers and feeders moved about steady until late, when a drop of 25c to 50c was recorded. Vealers topped at $19.50 and sold about a dollar lower than last week's average.

HOG MARKET IS WEAK.

On the closing day last week $22.35 was paid for best hogs. Today they were down to $20, registering a drop of $2.25 for the week. Many believe the loss will serve to hold up receipts and a recovery in part will follow next week, but, on the other hand, it is not unlikely that packers will press the advantage gained with the result of further depreciation.

At this time $19.60@20 takes the cream of the offerings, with good lights from $19@19.50; mixed, $18.50@19, and some badly mixed lots at $18. Friday alone values slumped $1@1.50. Pigs have followed hogs down and are $2@3 lower, with best at $17.75@18.75; middle grades from $15@17.50, and trashy to fair grades from $11@15. Packer sows and stags are quotable at this time from $15@17, or $2 to $3 under last Saturday.

The sheep market stands around $2@2.50 lower on lambs for the week, having sustained losses of $1.50@2 since the midweek. Aged stock closes 50c to $1 off. Top lambs down from $16.75 to $14.50, with bulk now from $13.50@14. Culls between $7 and $8. Sentiment strongly against medium and common grades. Fat mutton sheep sell from $8@8.50 instead of $9; canners, $3; choppers and bucks, $5@6, and breeding ewes, $10@13.50.

Notwithstanding a comparatively heavy run of native horses last week, the market held up on a comparatively strong basis on anything with a reasonable show of quality. Fat Southerners in particular received good action and plainer types found outlet, although at prices considerably under those of better quality. Eastern trade was limited in volume, but local demand was sufficient to take care of the better class of work horses, 1400 lbs. and over. There was good inquiry for speed and more were sold than ordinarily, prices attaining a strong level.

Mules held to a good level early in the week, fat cotton and mine animals receiving chief action. Late in the week demand slackened somewhat and market showed an easier feeling. Light receipts at the finish, however, prevented any decline of material importance.

HORSE QUOTATIONS.

Good to choice drafts	$150@300
Eastern chunks	140@200
Choice Southern horses	125@160
Fair grade Southerners	80@100
Plain Southern horses	25@65
Plugs	25@ 50

MULES—A few fresh loads of mules drifted in, and in addition, there were a few holdovers from yesterday, making a moderate Saturday offering. There was little trading of much importance, and general trade failed to show quite as firm a tone as earlier in the week.

MULE QUOTATIONS.

16 to 17 hands	$200@350
15 to 15½ hands	110@215
15 hands	100@200

Above quotations are extreme high and low range, covering the sale of mules in the commission barns. Top prices refer only to strictly finished mules of the class specified.

CORN IS OFF 5 TO 9 CENTS FOR THE WEEK

Market is Influenced by Decline in Hogs and Fight for Lower Living Cost.

Grain and provision prices on the Merchants' Exchange here, through last week were subjected to several depressing circumstances, which were reflected in marked declines from prevailing figures a week ago. The fight, national, State and individual, against the high cost of living was a constant factor on the bear side.

Early in the week holders of large stocks of grain put them on the market with a resulting sharp decline, which was in part offset the next day by a renewed demand.

About the middle of the week live hog prices fell off sharply, the fight against excessive charges and a belief that there was no outlet awaiting large shipments forcing the decline. The drop in live hogs caused an immediate decline in grain and provision prices, corn losing nearly 6c in three days.

While the bearish conditions and the low live hog prices continued Friday saw an advance in corn, oats and meat products for future delivery, shorts having taken fright and rushing to cover, forcing prices up in proportion to their desire to accumulate supplies. Yesterday, however, the market dropped again. Compared with a week ago, all prices showed a distinct decrease, corn being 5⅝c to 9⅜c net lower, and oats 2⅛c to 4¼c down. Through the week trading was not in great volume.

Oats traveled in close sympathy with corn, affected by similar factors, but fluctuating within narrower limits. Yesterday's market was weak.

The weakness in corn futures yesterday, which extended to 2½c and 3¾c, resulted from declaration, by the United States Grain Corporation, of a temporary embargo on shipments of grain to Atlantic and gulf ports. Traders jumped to the conclusion that this was an additional move in the Government's game to reduce living costs, as much of the strength in grain recently, especially oats, has been based on anticipation of heavy exports as soon as the foreign exchange situation improves and ships are provided for the movement of the grain.

It was pointed out that unless supplies of grain are moved abroad shortly, a congestion of wheat, corn and oats may be seen at primary markets as well as ports, and prove sufficient to further lower costs of corn which now is down nearly 40 cents a bushel from the recent high level.

The market corn ignored an advance in hog prices in Chicago, or around $1 a hundred pounds, and a sharp advance at the yards here. Low prices of the session were made just before trading ended for the day.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash corn was 1c to 5c lower here yesterday and slow sale.

Cash oats ½c to 1c lower and in fair demand.

EMBARGO ON SHIPMENTS LOWERS CORN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—The embargo placed by the United States Grain Corporation on all grain shipments to Atlantic and gulf ports had a depressing influence today on the corn market, and was felt still more by oats traders. An advance of more than $1 in live hog prices went unnoticed and bear pressure was exerted on corn prices virtually throughout the session, except for an early flurry, when short covering sent corn prices well away from the low points.

Later liquidation, particularly in the September article, was evident and prices sagged all along the line. A slight rally preceded the close.

Corn closed steady, ⅝c to 2⅝c net lower, distant deliveries showing the greatest decline. September finished at $1.77¼ to $1.77¾, and December at $1.36⅝ to $1.36½.

Oats lost from 1c to 1⅝c and at the close September pork was 75c lower, lard was unchanged to 10c higher and ribs unchanged to 10c lower.

Cash corn prices were about 1c lower than yesterday, and receipts were larger than of late.

Oats at the start were inclined to move with corn, but later developed independent weakness, the effect of the transportation suspension being greater on oats than on the major grain. Domestic demand was only of fair amount.

Provisions were higher with the advance in hog values, but the bulge brought out profit-taking sales and except for lard closing prices were lower, pork showing the greatest decline.

12-Swat Shell From Detroit Artillery Gives Jungaleers An Even Break With Browns

Sothoron Blanks Tigers 4-0 With Six Hits in First Game and Davenport Holds Them to 3 Hits and No Runs in 7 Frames —Then Bombardment Overcomes Seven-Run Lead.

After Allan Sothoron, the right-hander, had shut out the Tigers, 4 to 0, in the first game yesterday, Hugh Jennings' third-placers developed an unexpected batting streak in the last two frames of the night-cap and batted out an 8-7 victory. In the final rounds of the closing clash the Junglemen rapped out 12 hits, after being held to nine in the first 16 against Sothoron and Davenport. About 12,000 fans saw the double bill.

While the Browns managed to gain only an even break, the fans saw Ty Cobb and George Sisler, the two greatest players of the day, at their best. Cobb was practically silent in the first battle, but he played a mighty important part in the second. During the day, Sisler made five hits in eight attempts, including a homer; while Cobb had four in eight attempts, his contribution including a double and circuit drive.

In the eighth inning of the second game, a peculiar play, which robbed the Browns of a run and as matters turned out a tie in the regulation number of innings turned up. It came after two had been retired. Gerber bumped one to right, which looked as if it would bound into the right field seats. However, a fan leaned out, caught the ball, and Umpire Chill ruled that Gerber was entitled to only two bases. Had the spectator not touched the ball, it would have given the Browns their eighth marker of the game.

Squeeze Play Falls Through.

However, this play followed one, which to the second guessers was absolutely unnecessary. With Tobin on third and only one out, Burke called for the squeeze. Gerber missed the ball, and Tobin was run down. After this Gerber slapped his two-bagger to right.

The contest was one of the toughest the Burkemen have lost this season. Going into the eighth frame, the locals had a lead of seven runs, and Davenport, prior to this round, had pitched great ball, permitting only three safeties. But then the fireworks started, and before it ended, five hits had netted four markers off Davenport and Koob, who replaced him.

Howard Ehmke started the eighth with a double. Bush's single scored Ehmke. Young forced Bush, and then Cobb put his mates in the running with a liner into the right field bleachers. Veach and Heilmann hit and the pair moved up on a wild pitch. That forced the retirement of Davenport and Koob went in. Flagstead walked, filling the bases. Dyer, for Jones, forced Heilmann, Veach scoring.

Ehmke Again Starts It.

And then the horrible ninth! Ehmke again started trouble, beating out an infield hit, his fourth safety of the day. Bush lined to Jacobson and Young singled. Cobb rapped a double to center and Ellison, running for Ehmke, scored. Veach scored Young and Cobb with a hit to right, tying the count. That proved the signal of distress for Koob and Gallia went in. Heilmann greeted Gallia with a hit and Veach crossed. Flagstead also singled, but Dyer fanned. Ainsmith then beat out an infield hit, and Heilmenu was out when he overran third.

That's the story of how the Browns let a seven-run lead slip away from them.

In the first the Browns scored on passes to Austin and Gedeon and infield outs by Jake and Sisler. Billings' single, Davenport's pass to first, by virtue of being hit, and Austin's two bagger gave a pair after two were out in the second.

Sisler Hits Home Run.

Two more were added in the third, when with one out, Jacobson singled and Sisler rapped one into the right field bleachers for a homer. Passes to Austin and Gedeon and hits by Sisler and Tobin gave the final two in the fifth.

As regards the opening game, which the Browns won, there was little to it except Sothoron. The right-hander gave only six safe raps, no two of them coming in the same inning. He also struck out seven batters.

The Browns got a run in the first inning off "Dutch" Leonard, when Austin walked, Gedeon went out, and Jacobson reached second, while Austin scored on Heilmann's wild throw after picking up Baby Doll's grounder. A pass to Gedeon and singles by Jacobson and Sisler gave another in the third.

Demmitt Gets Circuit Drive.

Ray Demmitt, who had replaced Earl Smith in right field, started the eighth frame with a drive into the right field seats, while after Gerber and Severeid had been retired, Sothoron and Austin doubled, scoring the hurler. This latter assault came off Y. Y. Ayers, a righthander.

In the fifth, the Browns missed a good scoring chance, when with only one out, Gedeon, Jacobson and Sisler singled, but Tobin and Demmitt, for Smith, failed.

So effectively did Sothoron hurl that in the nine rounds not a Tiger reached third base, while only three got so far as second. The Junglemen had 10 men left on the bases.

Austin Pulls New Play.

Jimmy Austin pulled a new one in the second inning of yesterday's second contest. He started to steal home and when about 10 feet of the plate saw that he was gone and started back to third. What's more, he came close to walking it, as Ainsmith did not get the ball to Jones a minute too soon.

Sisler and Sothoron Star.

George Sisler and Allen Sothoron turned two pretty plays in the first game, when Sisler took bounders from Cobb and Heilmann and tossed to Sothoron running for the base for the out.

Cobb Gets First Homer.

When Ty Cobb rapped into the right field bleachers yesterday it was his first circuit wallop of the 1919 campaign.

Leifield to Face Detroit in Final

Righthander Boland Probably Will Oppose Burke's Charges in Game Today.

The Tigers and Ty Cobb will make their final appearance of the season at Sportsman's Park this afternoon, when the fourth clash of the series is played, starting at 3 o'clock. "Lefty" Leifield, the come back southpaw, will likely do the hurling for Burke's aggregation, while Bernie Boland, a right-hander, is due for the Junglemen. Following the Tigers, the Indians will visit here, after which the Browns hit the road for the remainder of the A. L. season.

Pitcher Shocker Injured.

Urban Shocker, the Browns right-hander, injured his side while pitching against the Tigers in the first clash of the series and may be missing for a few days. The extent of Shocker's injury has not been determined.

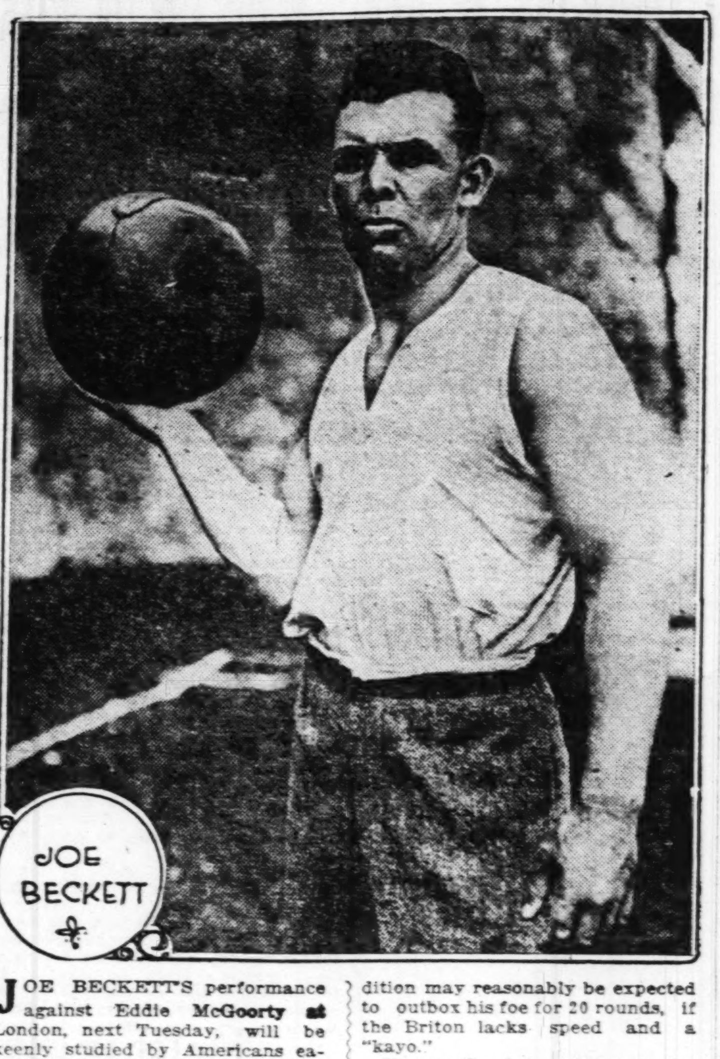
Jacobson Gets Sacrifice.

"Baby Doll" Bill Jacobson got his first sacrifice at the local park since June 26 in the first inning of yesterday's second game. His martyr death June 26 came against Dick Kerr of the White Sox.

Sisler Outhitting Cobb.

George Sisler, the Browns' star is outbatting Tyrus Cobb on the series. Sis has made six hits in 12 attempts for a .500 average, while the Georgia Peach has 12—4 .333.

English Heavyweight Champion Battles American, Next Tuesday



JOE BECKETT'S performance against Eddie McGoorty at London, next Tuesday, will be keenly studied by Americans eager to get a line on his ability as a possible challenger for Jack Dempsey's crown.

McGoorty, although formerly a middleweight, has grown considerably, and has fought several bouts against British light heavies. McGoorty is past the prime, or what is usually so considered. He is 30 years old, and is said to be a poor trainer. Unless Beckett eliminates him decisively it will be difficult to believe the British champion is a real rival of the present world's title holder.

McGoorty is very clever and experienced, however, and if in condition may reasonably be expected to outbox his foe for 20 rounds, if the Briton lacks speed and a "kayo."

Eugene Corri, in a letter to the Post-Dispatch answering the sporting editor's request for information concerning Beckett, stated that he was a strong, powerful hitter, with little more than a novice's knowledge of boxing.

The Beckett-McGoorty match resulted the George Carpentier-Beckett contest, arranged for Sept. 2, was postponed. Carpentier had just stopped Dick Smith, a former British champion, when it was decided by the promoters to hold the big attraction for the championship of Europe, at a later date.

Mamaux's Hurling Beats the Giants

McGraw's Men Get Only Five Scatered Hits and Brooklyn Wins, 3-1.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 30.—Mamaux held New York to five scattered hits, only one of which was clean and Brooklyn won, 3 to 1. The Giants scored their solitary run on a pass, Zimmerman's scratch hit, a force play and Miller's wild throw. Brooklyn scored in the first inning on two hits, a steal and a force. They bunched two singles, a sacrifice and Kilduff's double in the fourth for two more runs. Score:

Pirates Nose Out Reds in Eleventh

Hit, Two Walks and Squeeze Bunt Give Adams Victory in Mound Duel.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 30.—Pittsburg defeated Cincinnati, 1 to 0, in 11 innings here today, in a game featured by good pitching on each side and splendid fielding. Adams and Ring opposed each other and were invincible until the eleventh, when the visiting pitcher wavered. Southworth led off then with a single and Whitted walked. Barbare sacrificed and Cutshaw walked, filling the bases. The squeeze play scored Southworth with the winning run when Terry bunted in front of the plate as Southworth came down the base path. MISS DETROIT II WINS SECOND GOLD CUP HEAT

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 30.—Miss Detroit II won the second 30-mile heat of the Gold Cup race here today, leading the Miss eDtroit III across the line by one second. The winner's time was 59:58, an average of only 30.03 miles an hour. The speed was kept down by a heavy sea. This produces a tie for first place as Miss Detroit III won yesterday. The third and final heat will be raced Monday.

The Eleventh Hour, the third starter, was capsized on the second lap within a couple of lengths of the Miss Detroit III which was leading. The air in the bow of the boat kept about a foot of her prow out of the water and she was towed to shore. Driver Paul Strasburg and his mechanician were thrown free and picked up uninjured.

Both Miss Detroit III and Miss Detroit II stopped immediately and turned back to give assistance to their competitor. "Gar" Wood, driving the Miss Detroit III, tarried longer than Driver W. E. Sanborn, which lost him the race.

M'GILLIVRAY BEATS CANN IN 100-YARD TITLE SWIM

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Perry McGillivray, Illinois Athletic Club, won the national A. A. U. 100-yard swimming championship by a scant yard from Ted Cann, New York A. C., today, in time of 1:05 4-5. Norman Ross, I. A. C., former champion, was third.

Cann had a slight margin at 75 yards, McGillivary having got out of his lane. The latter spurted ahead five yards from the finish.

Ross, ill of indigestion, made a game race and was even with Cann at 50 yards and then faded rapidly.

Radical Pitching Reforms Planned, Ban Johnson Says; Spitball Will Be Retained

American League President, in Letter to Post-Dispatch, Believes Moist Curvists of Today Will Be Permitted to Continue, but Thinks New comers Will Be Barred.

By John E. Wray.

THAT action of some sort against "freak pitching" deliveries is in contemplation was made evident yesterday in a letter from President Ban Johnson of the American League to the Post-Dispatch.

The letter, which was in answer to an inquiry from the sporting editor, suggested several changes that would probably be made relative to pitching rules, at the next meeting of the joint committees of both leagues.

The inquiry was provoked by the fact that Umpire Chill had forwarded to President Johnson several balls, taken out of local games, in which pitchers had been using questionable deliveries.

President Johnson was also asked if any action would be taken to prevent the purchase of big league players by pennant contenders on dates prior to July 1. His reply to both questions follows:

CHICAGO, Aug. 28, 1919.

Mr. J. E. Wray,
Sporting Editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch,
St. Louis, Mo.

My dear Mr. Wray:

In the last few weeks I have discussed with considerable length the matter of placing restrictions on the pitchers of the Major Leagues. The National Agreement provides that the Rules Committee of the two organizations shall meet some time in October.

It is my purpose to appoint a committee from the American League to meet a like committee from the National, and it is my judgment radical reforms will be instituted next year.

I am inclined to believe no great restrictions will be placed upon the spit ball pitchers of the present day. They will be allowed to run their course, but it is my judgment those who drift into the two major leagues from now on will be penalized in this particular.

I cannot say that a firm rule will be established prohibiting the transfer of players between the Major League clubs, and fixing the date July 1. This is something that we want thoroughly discussed before passing final judgment. It is my belief the clubs will protect themselves adequately in this matter.

Very Truly,

N. B.—Translated into English the accompanying signature reads: 'B. B. JOHNSON.'

Good-bye, Spitball!

THE action contemplated with regard to spit-ball pitching is logical and will mean the complete elimination of moist-curve artists in a few years. The action of certain minor leagues in barring this freak will quicken the elimination of this much-discussed delivery.

The spitball has been considered undesirable, in baseball circles, for some years; but the problem of getting rid of the evil, without causing a great hardship to certain clubs, has not been solved.

Not only is the method of moistening the ball disgusting, but the application of moisture to the ball was frequently followed by bad results, such as bad throws by the catcher or fielder handling the slippery sphere hurriedly.

Its tendency to injure pitching arms, the inability of hurlers to accurately master its control, the constant threat of wild pitches and passed balls and other objections have been urged against it.

All other "freak" deliveries—that is, those based on the theory of obtaining a pitching "break" greater than is possible by legitimate curving—are already doomed. These include the "shine," "paraffin," "emery," etc., and depend for their effect on one side of the ball being materially smoother than the other.

Limiting Transfers Impractical?

THE fact that the joint committee of the big leagues will discuss the possibility of fixing a date beyond which major league contending clubs may not purchase playing strength from rival teams, is directly due to the howl that attended the July and August (1919) purchases by the New York teams—and the Mays episode in particular.

There is much unfairness in placing an absolute embargo on purchasing playing talent after July 1. Injuries or accidents might leave a club without adequate substitutes for its stretch run. To handicap this team by saying that it could not buy a player held for sale by another club in the same league would be harmful and autocratic. The difficulty of framing a rule that will be elastic enough to fit all circumstances may prevent any legislation in this particular.

Schultz's 4 Swats Only Bright Spot in Cards' Defeat

Rickey's Outfielder Gets Triple, Double and 2 Singles, but Cubs Win, 6-3.

HENDRIX IS EFFECTIVE

Jakie May Also Hurls Good Ball After Fourth, Bruins Failing to Score in Last Four.

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Behind Claude Hendrix's steady pitching the Cubs had little trouble beating the Cardinals this afternoon in a rather dull game. The score was 6 to 2.

A crowd of 10,000 turned out to welcome the Cubs home. Schultz, a former Cub, was the batting feature of the occasion, making a triple, a double and two singles in his five trips to the plate.

Neither side threatened seriously after the fourth round. Schultz led off by tapping Claude's first offering for a triple to center. Heathcote bumped feebly to Hendrix and Schultz, strolling off third, was nailed by Killefer's snap to Deal. Stock got a life on a bad throw by Hollocher, but was forced by Hornsby.

The Cubs started all kinds of stuff, ending in three runs in their half. After Flack flied out, May hit Hollocher. Herzog's out advanced him. Merkle's bounder leaped over Stock's head for a double, Holly counting. May passed Magee and the two runners pulled a double steal without drawing a throw. Deal nailed a single to left, scoring Merkle. Magee raced home also and was safe when McHenry's return throw bounced off his back to the stands. Deal went around to third and died while Paskert fanned.

Schultz added a double in the third and had better luck as infield outs by Heathcote and Stock sent him across the plate.

The Cubs had a laugh on the fans in their half of the third, particularly Paskart. Herzog singled and Merkle walked. Magee's sacrifice effort forced Herzog at third, but Deal put over the deal bringing Paskert up to drive in the runs with two gone. Dode hasn't been hitting anything lately and the fans laughed. Paskert got sore and slammed a double against right field wall and sent in the two runs.

The Cubs filled the bases in the fourth in rapid style on hits by Hendrix and Flack and an error by May. All they got home was one on a sacrifice fly by Merkle.

Both May and Hendrix tightened after the fourth until the ninth when a two base muff by Flack of Mollditz's fly started a St. Louis rally. Lavan's double scoring Mollwitz. Shotton pitched for May, but did nothing. Schultz made his fourth hit scoring Lavan and that ended the counting.

MEADOWS BEATEN AGAIN; BRAVES WIN TWIN BILL

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 30.—Boston won both games of today's doubleheader from Philadelphia, 5 to 4 and 3 to 2, the second contest going 11 innings. In the first game Cheney's wild throw on a bunt in the ninth inning allowed Holke to score from second with the winning run. Scott blanked Philadelphia in the second game until the ninth, when Bancroft doubled, which sent home two runs, tying the score. In the eleventh Meadows hit Pick with a pitched ball and scored on Holke's single and J. Smith's sacrifice fly. Meusel failed to get a hit in the second game, after hitting safely in 17 consecutive games.

Tilden's Slashing Volleys Eliminate Veteran Brookes From U. S. Tennis Tourney

American Rises to His Top Form to Defeat 42-Year-Old Australian Wizard—Johnston Beats Murray, Williams Trims McLoughlin and Johnson Is Victor Over Hall.

By J. P. Allen.

The Post-Dispatch's Eastern Tennis Authority.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 30—An American is destined to become the holder of the All-Comers National Singles title. That was decided by William T. Tilden II today when in impressive fashion he conquered Norman F. Brookes, the world-famous Australian. The defeat of the master of the courts had the place of honor in the fifth round on the turf of the West Side Tennis Club. Once Tilden had lifted his cannon ball service, the fastest in the world, and his smashing volleys to the limit of their speed he had the great Australian quailing under the most intense bombardment. He won at 3—6, 6—4, 7—5, 6—3.

Next to the overthrowing of Brookes the defeat of the national title holder, Robert Lindley Murray furnished the thrills as the four survivors of the battles drew into the semi-final round. Murray was never able to attain steadiness against the marvelously clever playing of William M. Johnston, the Pacific coast star. The champion fought with all his vigor and spectacular power. He was compelled to yield to the same line-cutting volleys and drives that had accounted for the downfall of Gerald Patterson in the preceding round. The tally of this engagement was 5—7, 6—1, 6—2, 6—4.

In the other matches Richard Norris Williams II, the former champion, easily defeated his old rival, Maurice McLoughlin at 6—0, 6—3, 6—2. The match that had the element of a reversal was that in which Walter Merrill Hall, No. 4 of the ranking list, yielded to the baffling chopstroking of Wallace F. Johnson, former Davis cup star, at 6—4, 6—0, 6—2. Hall could do nothing effective with the ball, the majority of his returns never getting across the net.

Tilden at His Top Form.

Tilden in his match against Brookes easily rose to the topmost heights. He was visibly nervous at the beginning so that the Australian never encountered effectual resistance as he fought his way up to the net through the first set. At the barrier Brookes worried the American by his persistent short volleying, holding such a commanding position as to make it appear that the man from overseas was in for a decisive victory.

The change came in the second set at 3—all on games. At this point Tilden was shooting his fast ball over, gaining confidence, and beginning to take the offensive with greater security. Discovering that Brookes was forcing the net to his disadvantage, Tilden began to lob. He managed the tosses ably so that Brookes was sent recoiling to the base line of his court on the chase for the ball. The shift of tactics on the part of the American proved to be a master stroke. His lobs were deeply placed and true so that the Australian had to constantly break position.

Brookes' Accuracy Wrecked.

These changes soon wrecked Brookes' accuracy. Encouraged by this, Tilden's service became stronger and he bravely took the offensive. Thereafter with each successive game his strokes became more powerful and sure. He had Brookes on the run, giving chase to the ball, as he sent it lashing into the corners or passed him with sizzling forehanders down the lines.

An analysis of the playing cards of the two men shows that Tilden won three sets to one, 22 games to 18, 126 points to 113. The stroke analysis shows 25 outs for Tilden to 43 for Brookes, 47 nets to 27, five double faults to two, 38 placements to 23 and 16 service aces to 2.

Tilden's pace in the third and fourth sets was irresistible. When he held the service he repeatedly shot the ball across for aces. Brookes could not hold him, for the American brought off astounding recoveries, sprinting over the court and rarely missing the ball. Even when he got to the net Brookes was unable to do anything effective. Tilden used his chop stroke, and a variation of underspin on the ball that made Brookes go down to defeat as he sent the ball into the net.

This match was interrupted at the conclusion of the second set by a shower. The players soon resumed their places on the court, however, to finish before dark. The four men who gained the semi-finals will rest over tomorrow and resume their matches for a decision of the championship Monday.

CANDIDATES FOR ARMY ELEVENS START PRACTICE

WEST POINT, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The army football training season opened here today with prospects for a winning team not very promising. All cadets familiar with the army scheme of play have been lost to the team by premature graduation in the war period, while few cadets now at the military academy have any previous experience.

Of the 65 men who apeared in uniform today for practice, few were heavy enough to make good line men and the backfield material is inexperienced.

The team will be coached by several veteran army players. The season opens Sept. 27, closes on Nov. 29 with the navy game at New York.

Majority at U. S. Net Meet Would Eliminate Use of Word "Love"

BY DAVIDSON OBEAR.
Secretary St. Louis Tennis Association.

FOREST HILLS, L. I., Aug. 30.—A majority of players and officials interviewed today favored the elimination of the word "love" from the score in all tennis games. The suggestion for this change originated in Chicago. At the request of the Sherwood Tennis Club of that city the Western Tennis Association sent in a report of the codification of laws committee which will no doubt present an opposition at the next annual meeting.

Edwin Fully Torrey, secretary of the U. S. National Lawn Tennis Association declined to express an opinion for or against the elimination, but said it would not make any difference one way or the other. He further stated that it was a matter for the committee to decide.

Paul Gibbons, the prominent Philadelphia official, said: "I think the suggestion an excellent one and hope it will be carried out next year."

William T. Tilden, former clay court champion is also a strong advocate of a change.

"A Touch of Sentiment."

Frank H. Floyd, president of the Detroit Tennis Club, remarked as follows: "I am absolutely opposed to any rule barring the word 'love' from tennis or any other thing. It has too great a touch of sentiment."

Fred B. Alexander, the famous international player, believes that too much stress is laid on minor rules and regulations. "We should not worry about such things," said Alexander. "It would have been better to have eliminated the word 'love' some years ago, but I do not favor it now."

Albert Hoskins, former vice president of the National Association, said: "I used to be a strong believer in keeping the traditions of the past, but in recent years have changed my views somewhat. Some of these new suggestions, if practical, should be adopted and I think that the word 'love' should be eliminated from the scoring."

The words "dawn" and "national" as related to tennis organization are also coming in for some discussion. An Eastern tennis magazine writer wants the word "national" removed from the United States Association. A number of other enthusiasts here favor the abolition of "lawn" from organization titles. R. N. Williams, former national champion, thought well of it, but expressed a doubt that it could be revived because he says there is another game called tennis and a distinction would have to be made between the two. One official here said: "Certainly the game when played indoors or on clay or dirt courts could not be properly called lawn tennis."

A Play From St. Louis.

In his match against Murray today Johnston surprised the gallery in the third set by attempting to play a return of Murrays' from off the back stop. He failed in the attempt as a line judge was in the way. However, a number of players do not think much of the play, but it is gaining some weight and is perfectly legal. The play got its start at the Triple A Club in St. Louis, was carried to the clay court tournament at Chicago and brought East by several players who were entered there.

The national Executive Committee met Friday night and Saturday and due to so much business adjourned until Monday morning. It is understood that the Westerners are getting some attention on the equalization of voting power question.

SPORT SALAD BY J. C. Davis

Vacations.

HE needs a long vacation,
His works are running down;
Sans "pep" and animation
He ambles round the town.
With sad and listless manner
His daily toil he seeks,
He'd like to tote the banner
For thirty-seven weeks.

From lack of relaxation
His nerves are far from strong;
He needs a long vacation
Far from the madding throng.
He'd dearly love to amble
To some bucolic scene
And watch the lambkins gambol
Upon the well-known green.

His work he is pursuing
Without the old ambish;
Instead of what he's doing
He'd much prefer to fish
His ginger has departed,
His snap and vim are gone;
His manner is half-hearted,
But he must carry on.

At last the boss says, "Thomas",
You've lost your zip and zest;
So seek some place of promise
And take a well-earned rest."
With heart that's like a feather
His ginger reappears;
He cracks his heels together
And gives three rousing cheers.

He hied him from the city
And all the dirt and noise.
He hummed a little ditty
And thought of coming joys.
He figured on canoeing
And golf and tennis courts
And there'd be something doing
For all the outdoor sports.

He thought his health was menaced,
He wasn't feeling right,
And so he golfed and tennised
With all his main and might.
He took a whirl at camping
Upon the river side;
And then he took to tramping
Across the country wide.

He's back from his vacating
All down and out and sore;
He'll be recuperating
For thirty days or more.
He sits him down to figure
With eyes upon the boss,
But as for vim and vigor
He is a total loss.

SOUTH ATHLANTIC TEAMS STAGE 20-INNING TIE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Aug. 30.—Before the largest crowd that ever saw a baseball game in this city, Columbia and Charlotte, contenders for the South Atlantic League championship, played 20 innings today in a vain effort to break a five to five tie existing since the last half of the ninth inning.

With the score 5 to 1 in favor of Columbia in the last half of the ninth, the bases full, two out and two strikes on the batter, Butts of the Charlotte team, hit a home run, tieing the game. The present series which will be finished Labor Day, closes the season and the two clubs are one and a half games apart.

Carr Park Takes Honors in Annual Playground Meet

Representatives Score 17 Points in Athletic Events, Two More Than Columbus.

ENTRY LIST TOTALED 500

Baseball, Volley Ball and Other Features Run Off at Forest Park.

About a dozen boys and girls who spend their spare hours at the city's recreational field at Sixteenth and Carr streets carried the municipal playground athletic honors to Carr Park, yesterday, when they outscored representatives from 23 other playgrounds on the cricket crease at Forest Park.

The meet was the city's annual play day and 7000 children participated. Besides the track and field games, there was volley ball, baseball, net hand ball, quoits, dodge ball, end ball, and a host of novel contests which served as vehicles for the athletic capabilities of youngsters from every section of the city.

The competitions were so arranged that boys and girls of all ages, weights and heights had equal opportunities in the contests for the banners, ribbons and medals which went to the successful contestants. Each event had weight and size limits, so that the entrants would be equal physical footing as possible.

Carr Scores 17 Points.

The track and field part of the program went to the Carr Park team with two first, two seconds and one third, making a total of 17 points. The Columbus entrants scored 15, and the Fairground squad, 13.

Probably the most interest was shown in the tug-of-war event, which was contested between teams of 12 boys. The Fairground "tuggers" won first place in this event after a strenuous contest with the Columbus rope squad. Laclede finished third.

Previous to yesterday's meet, there were preliminary games in the various sections of the city, eliminating many of the original entrants. About 500 boys and girls competed in the contest yesterday, this being the final entry from an original field of 1500.

HERMAN TO MEET LYNCH IN EAST ON LABOR DAY

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Pete Herman has come out of his shell to meet a really good man, Joe Lynch of New York on Labor day. Pete is a crafty cuss because he wouldn't listen to anything over a 10-round whirl with the New Yorker, and he wouldn't think of letting any refereo say who he thought had the better of the 10-round mixup.

He's getting quite a slice of money for this essay and if he doesn't come up to the drawing power that Joe Mulvihill believes he will, there'll be trouble in Waterbury, Conn., the place set for the bout. Mulvihill has built an outdoor arena at Waterbury which will seat 15,000 people. If he fills it, Herman will be a hero, and if he doesn't—well he's anything one can guess in Joe's mind.

Even though it's only a 10-round tilt, it bears some significance, for it may result in Herman being forced to go the marathon with Joe if Joe does anything worth while to him. Herman is still called the bantamweight champion, but he is no more that than Johnny Kilbane is, for the reason that he can't make the limit of 116 pounds. The bout on Labor day is at 118 pounds.

Chance Denies Rumors.

Frank Chance, former manager of the Chicago Cubs and New York Yankees, denies reports that he will purchase an interest in either the Chicago Nationals or Boston Red Sox. He stated that nothing could induce him to return to the national pastime.

Mrs. Perry Fisk Wins Golf Title in Western Final

Brilliant Play From Hazards Gives DeKalb (Ill.) Woman 3 and 2 Victory.

BEATS FORMER CHAMPION

Mrs. F. C. Letts, Runner-Up, Twice Has Won Crown in Western Association.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Perry Fisk, De Kalb, Ill., won the championship of the Woman's Western Golf Association today, chiefly through her brilliant play from hazards, defeating Mrs. F. C. Letts Jr. of Chicago, twice Western champion, 3 and 2 in the 18-holes final.

Twice during the second nine was the lead at stake on Mrs. Fisk's play from hazards, and both times she came out of trouble within a foot of the hole, halving one, which had seemed lost, and winning the other.

Mrs. Letts was never ahead. She was weakest where Mrs. Fisk was strongest, in the bunkers, although outdriving her opponent.

The former champion rallied on the second nine, and by winning the tenth and twelfth and halving the eleventh, squared the match. Mrs. Fisk snatched the lead by holing a 35-foot putt which won the thirteenth, and never was overtaken after that.

The cards:

Out—

Mrs. Fisk	564	747	554—47
Mrs. Letts	567	6x6	x56—41

In—

Mrs. Fisk	749	463	5—38
Mrs. Letts	546	564	7—37

C. A. C. PLANS TO OPEN BOXING SEASON WITH 6 BOUT AMATEUR SHOW

The Columbian Athletic Club will open its boxing season with a six-bout amateur entertainment late in September, according to "Young Foley," boxing instructor at the South Side organization. Boxers of all weights who wish to enter the amateur ranks are invited to report at the club gymnasium Monday, Wednesday or Friday evenings or Sunday afternoons to exhibit their prowess.

Foley also said the club would enter its amateur stars in the South Broadway A. C. September show. Benny McGovern, Orb Jolley and other professionals lined up with the C. A. C. will assist Foley in training the amateurs. The club will form soccer and basketball teams to assist in training the boxers.

Foley, who out of the ring is William Fouke, asserts the C. A. C. is prospering since its reorganization and that the club is counting on getting back to the position it formerly occupied among local athletic bodies.

LIST OF CANDIDATES FOR JOB AS COACH OF TIGERS NARROWS DOWN TO 2 MEN

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 30.—The list of candidates under consideration for the position of head football coach at the University of Missouri has narrowed to two, Coach John S. Miller and another man whose name Dr. W. E. Meanwell, athletic director, declined to make public today.

Dr. Meanwell today said the man with whom the athletic department was in communication was one of the best football coaches in the country, and a man with a reputation. He is the only man of his caliber in the United States who would be likely to consider coming to Missouri at this time, Meanwell said.

The university probably will have to abandon its policy of low pay for coaches if it obtains Meanwell's man, the athletic director said, and he intimated that he believed the committee would be willing to pay more than the $2500 which in the past has been the limit of a coach's pay here.

"Good coaches are in the same class with teachers of law, medicine and other professions," Meanwell said, "and must be paid accordingly."

LEONARD AND TENDLER MAY MEET NEXT MONTH

It looks now as if the much-talked-about match between Champion Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler, the crack lightweight of Philadelphia, may be fought after all at one of the baseball parks in Philadelphia on or about Sept. 22. Phil Glassman, manager of Tendler, has agreed to talk over the match with Billy Gibson, manager of Leonard, and so anxious is he to land the match for his man that he is likely to give Gibson the terms which "Gib" demands for Leonard's services. This bout is expected to draw $40,000, as the fight fans of Philadelphia and all through Pennsylvania are willing to pay any price to see these two stars clash.

SPECTATORS ARE INJURED AT ATLANTA BALL PARK

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 30.—More than a score of spectators were injured, some severely, in a demonstration following today's double header baseball game between Atlanta and New Orleans.

A crowd estimated at more than 12,000 had jammed the stands and surrounded the field to see the two games, the last of the season here. When the final out of the second game was made, the crowd rushed for the exits, throwing "pop" bottles, cushions and even chairs. Some spectators were hit and others were injured in the jam.

CASTING RECORD BROKEN

CHICAGO, Aug. 30.—Two world's records were broken today in the eleventh international fly and bait casting tournament. In the one-half ounce average distance bait event, Carl Lingenfelter, Chicago, made a toss of 274 feet, bettering his own record of 243 feet ½ inch, made in 1912. D. R. Linder, Chicago, established a new figure of 198 1-3 average for the 5½ ounce distance fly.

Ty Cobb and Cravath Still Lead; Six Cardinals Hit .290 or Better

St. Louis, for a lowly club, has a fine list of good hitters. Six Cardinals are batting around .290 or better. Of these three are in the .300 class and McHenry just below the coveted limit. Rousch is crowding Cravath for the league leadership.

Cobb, of the regulars, is still league leader with a fine margin over Veach, Jackson, Sisler and Jacobsen, who are bunched.

Ethelda Bleibtrey Easy Winner in Title Swim Race

New York Woman Easily Leads Charlotte Boyle in 880-Yard Championship Event.

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Miss Ethelda Bleibtrey of the New York Women's S. A. and Fred Sponberg of the New York A. C., captured national aquatic championships at a water carnival under the direction of the Rye Beach Club at Rye, N. Y., today.

Miss Bleibtrey won the 880-yard swimming title for women in 15 minutes 26 2-5 seconds, with her team-mate, Miss Charlotte Boyle, second, a couple of feet behind; Sponberg took the high diving championship for men with the fine score of 139.3 points, beating by 5 and 6 points, respectively, his fellow clubman, George Dahm and Thomas Rirschfield of the City A. C., who finished second and third.

Miss Ruth Smith, formerly of Columbus, O., now of the Women's S. A., but competing unattached, shared prominently in the laurels. She won a 100-yard breast stroke handicap from scratch in 1m. 32 2-5s, beating by two seconds the national outdoor record, set on Aug. 10 in Chicago by Miss Mina Wylie of Australia.

The women's national event proved disappointing owing to the absence of Miss Fannie Durack of Australia and to the poor condition of Miss Boyle who started despite a severe cold. With her only two dangerous opponents missing or crippled Miss Bleibtrey had the race at her mercy all the way and was satisfied to keep alongside Miss Boyle until the last 25 yards, when she quickeled her pace a bit and earned the decision.

The scratch 100-yard swim for the Thompson Cup brought out two of Honolulu's most famous swimmers, Harold Kruger, now representing the Oakland A. C. of California, and Fred Kahale of the Hawaiian S. C. To everyone's surprise they were led home by Paul Chase of the New York A. C. who just managed to nose out Kruger for first in 61 2-5 seconds.

By a curious incidence these three placed in the same order in a 200-yard handicap in which Kruger started from scratch and conceded 6 seconds to Kahle and 7 to Chase. The latter won in the actual time of 2m 29 2-5s.

DICKERSON IS ALLOWED CLAIM OF $6425 BY NATIONAL ASSOCIATION

AUBURN, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The National Board of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues today allowed a claim of E. W. Dickerson for $6425 against the Western Baseball League for alleged breach of contract.

Dickerson was elected to the presidency of the league in 1917 for a three-year term and when the league suspended in July, 1918, on account of war conditions, went overseas as a soldier. A. R. Tearney of Chicago was tendered and accepted the presidency of the league last February, a month before Dickerson's return to this country.

The board also affirmed its previous decision denying the application of the Texas League to be advanced to a Class A rating.

New rules for the drafting of players were announced by Secretary John H. Farrell. The drafting period will run from Oct. 1 to 10, inclusive.

On Oct. 1, 2 and 3, Class AA clubs may draft one player from Class A clubs for $3000; on Oct. 5, 6 and 7, Class A may draft from Class B, unrestricted number, at $1800 each, and on Oct. 8, 9 and 10, Class B may draft from Class C unrestricted, at $900 each, and Class C from Class D, unrestricted, at $350 each.

Bingham Wins Net Title.

ASHVILLE, N. C., Aug. 30.—Robert W. Bingham, publisher of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, won the championship of North Carolina in the open tennis tournament here today by defeating Eugene Jones of Asheville, 6—1, 6—0, 6—1.

Big Tiger Squad Is Still Without a Football Coach

Few Letter Men, but Many Veterans Among Warriors Assembling at Columbia.

CAPTAIN TO BE CHOSEN

Heine Bass, Incumbent Last Year, Favored for Re-election This Season.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Aug. 30.—The beginning of class work at the University of Missouri Monday will see only a few letter men of the football squad back, according to indications today. The Tigers played no games last year, and for that reason no letters were awarded. The new men of last year's squad who, under normal conditions, would have won their Ms are coming into the squad as veterans, but not as letter men.

There will be no lack of material, however, for the freshmen of last year and of the year before are flocking back. Among the veterans who are back is Heinie Bass, captain of the team which failed to play a game last year, and who, it is understood, is slated for the job again this year. Colb, center; Edwards, half; Shroeder, end, and Greenwood, center in 1917, complete the list of letter men who have so far shown up at Rothwell gymnasium.

Many Veterans Returning.

Other veterans on the list are Hudson, Shannon and King, who have played with the Tigers in the line, and Gerald Cross, the midget halfback of the 1917 squad.

Bill Collins, one of the best halfbacks of recent years, is slated to return after a year's services overseas, and his brother, Herschel, who showed up well in practice two years ago is already back in school.

Of the freshmen of two years ago, the men who would have made last year's Varsity team, Goepel, Travis, Hardin, Eberhard, Simons, Hill, Allen, Webber Forrester, Kershaw and "Chuck" Lewis, will be fighting for berths on the team.

Among the freshmen of last year on the squad this year will be Packwood, Ruth and Knight.

Midget Quarter Not Heard From.

Stankowski, the midget quarterback of two years ago, has not shown up, and the athletic department has been unable to get in touch with him. It is understood that he has not yet received his discharge from the army.

Harry Viner, another old man who had been slated to return, is going to Texas, where he will go into business.

According to the Missouri Valley conference ruling football practice cannot start until Sept. 15. Equipment will be issued Monday, however, Dr. W. E. Meanwell, athletic director, announced today, and the men will be permitted to work out without coaches until the formal opening of the practice season.

Miller Is Coaching Favorite.

While no coaching can be done during the next two weeks, the early opening of school will give the coaches an oportunity to get in line on the men, and the men themselves will have an opportunity to get into condition two weeks earlier than usual.

The number of men back who are eligible for the team is most encouraging, and unless the choosing of a football coach is so long delayed as to menace the success of the team Missouri fans are confident that a good season is in store. It is understood that a coach will be named in a few days, and sentiment here still strongly in favor of the naming of Coach John F. Miller, although it is known that there are several other names before the committee.

STAG TEAMS PLAY.

The married men of the Stag Athletic Club will play the single men of the Stag Athletic Club this morning at Lemp's Park.

The lineups are as follows:

Single men: Beck, 1b; Sherman, 2b; Feldt, ss; Hansher, 3b; Desmond, rf; Tully, lf; Moser, cf; Bippen, p; Konradi, cf. Married men: Shengel, c; Tuly, p; Leiman, lf; Ackerman, rf; Ackerman, 2b; Reeg, cf; Mullen, 3b; Sutter, ss; Dierkes, 1b; Emery, p.

Umpires—O. Shindler and Bud Magee.

Readville Races Off—Rain.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 30.—The grand circuit races, scheduled for today, which were to have closed the meeting at the Readville track, were canceled because of rain. The horses were shipped to Hartford, Conn., for the meeting next week.

AN ECHO OF ACTORS' STRIKE HEARD HERE

The first reverberation heard in this city from the battle between the Actors' Equity Association and the Producing Managers' Association comes with the announcement that the opening of the Shubert-Jefferson Theater, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed until next Sunday night. "Unsettled conditions due to the actors' strike," is the explanation given by the theater management.

The American Theater is fortunate in that the company which opens its season with the apartment house farce, "Twin Beds," also opens its road tour in this city, and has been rehearsing in St. Louis during the week. Therefore the American will open tonight, as promised. This joyous comedy is appearing for the sixth time here, and Lois Bolton will once more play the vivacious and much harassed young wife. In the company are Virginia Fairfax, R. M. D'Angelo, Thomas J. Evans, Katheryn Mills, Thomas J. Manning and Callie Van Vliet.

The show which was to have raised the curtain at the Shubert-Jefferson tonight and which has been postponed for a week, is a new musical comedy, "Sunshine," starring Richard Carle. The score is by Alexander Johnstone, composer of "Fiddlers Three."

Orpheum Opening Tomorrow.

The Orpheum reopens tomorrow afternoon with a bill headed by Elizabeth Brice and Will Morrissey in the "Overseas Revue," said to be based on humorous incidents observed by the principals during their engagement on the Overseas Theater Circuit with the American Expeditionary Force. The act calls for a supporting company and chorus.

Others on the week's program at the Orpheum are Ernest Evans and a troupe of girls, presenting "A Smart Divertissement;" Francis Renault, human fashion plate; James B. Donovan and Marie Lee, in an original comedy, "Doing Well, Thank You;" Sam Hearn, rustic fiddler; and Everest's Novelty Circus.

To the Gayety Theater this week comes the only burlesque show which has recently appeared on Broadway, New York, at Broadway prices. It is "Peek-a-Boo," a Jean Bedini production, which was showing at the Columbia Theater in New York when the actors' strike began. It was thereupon moved to the Central Theater, one of the big Broadway playhouses, and ran for two weeks. The Standard this week will present "The Monte Carlo Girls."

The list of attractions at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater for the season was made public last week, and includes several offerings of unusual distinction.

"The Jest" to Be Seen Here.

First of these, in the opinion of many, will be a presentation of "The Jest," with star parts for both John and Lionel Barrymore. This great drama of medieval Italy is by Sem Benelli, whom St. Louisans will remember as the author of the admirable libretto of Montemezzi's opera, "L'Amore dei Tre Re." The play was produced in New York last spring and was instantly pronounced the dramatic sensation of several seasons.

E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe are promised in revivals of "Twelfth Night," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Hamlet" and other Shakspearean plays. Bertha Kalich is to be presented in "The Riddle Woman," and Jane Cowl in "The Crowded Hour." Louis Mann is announced in "Friendly Enemies."

Other announcements are Al Jolson in "Sinbad," Lew Fields in "A Lonely Romeo," Florence Moore in "Breakfast in Bed," Grace George in "She Would, She Did," Alice Brady in "Forever After," Guy Gates Post in "The Masquerader," McIntyre and Heath in "Hello, Alexander," Nora Bayes in a new musical comedy and the Dolly sisters, also in a new vehicle. William Hodge will have a new play.

Stomach is Quick to Upset When School Children Are Idle

VACATION days are days of over-eating and under-exercising for most boys and girls. They loll around nibbling at light food, unconcerned whether the fruit is green or ripe.

The result is cramps, skin eruptions, pimples, "summer colds," constipation and diarrhea. The basis of such trouble is an upset stomach, and nothing will give safer and quicker relief than the well-known Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is just a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, a formula evolved some 30 years ago by Dr. Caldwell himself. Syrup Pepsin is now used by millions of people and is today the largest-selling liquid laxative in the world.

It is the mildest and gentlest of laxatives. It regulates the stomach and bowels so well that they can soon work normally again without the aid of medicine. And unlike the harsher physics and cathartics, Syrup Pepsin does not gripe or cause discomfort, even to a tiny baby.

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be bought at any drug store for 50c and $1, the latter the family size. A free trial bottle can be had by sending your address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 480 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

10,000 Owners Speak for Its Performance and Reliability

Decide for an Essex

What owners say of a car is a pretty good indication of its worth.

And when you add to that, the enthusiastic endorsements of thousands of motor-wise individuals the proof should be conclusive.

But the Essex has still another way of showing its value.

You Can Test It Yourself

Performance limitations have naturally grouped cars into classes. Certain cars may be depended upon for unlimited service. They know no frontiers of distance. They are dependable and require practically no attention.

But such cars are large and costly, costly to buy and to operate.

An exception is the Essex. Its performance qualities can be demonstrated at any time.

Take a ride with us to see how it can be driven just as easily, as fast and with as much certainty of endurance as any high-priced car with which you care to compare it.

Moderate Cost Due to Smaller Size

If the Essex were as large as the cars whose performance it matches, the price would have to be as high.

But because it has no useless length or useless weight, costly car quality in every detail is possible with proportionate saving in cost.

And by skill in design, and care in construction, the performance is just as satisfactory.

It is because of these qualities that the Essex is praised as it is.

Its Worth Is Shown in Service Not Price

The strongest Essex boosters are those who have driven their cars the hardest.

It is so easy to handle—so lively and so comfortable that there is pleasure rather than work in driving it.

You may be undecided between the Essex and some other car of similar weight and price.

The two cars look bright and attractive on the sales floor.

The demonstration will give the Essex an advantage that everyone is glad to describe.

Then the thing for you to decide is how those two cars will compare after several months of service.

For answer, note the Essex cars in your neighborhood.

Take a ride in one whose speedometer registers long service.

Look out for performance. See if it still has the power to do the things it did when new. Is it quiet and rigid and in good condition?

Every Essex makes new friends.

It is what they are saying that is increasing the demand so much. You should speak for your car without delay.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces That Perspire

Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. It also must perspire—must expel, through the pores, its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this, there would be fewer self-ruined complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolized wax instead of cosmetics they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin, also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from any appearance of artificiality.

Obtain an ounce of mercolized wax from your druggist and try it. Apply nightly like cold cream for a week or two, washing it off mornings. There's nothing quite so good for an ever-red, tanned or freckled face.—ADV.

Bad Sickness Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people only realized the health-destroying power of an acid-stomach—of the many kinds of sickness and misery it causes—of the lives it literally wrecks—they would guard against it as carefully as they do against a deadly plague. You know in an instant the first symptoms of acid-stomach—pains of indigestion; distressing, painful bloat; sour, gassy stomach; belching; food repeating, heartburn, etc. Whenever your stomach feels this way you should lose no time in putting it to rights. If you don't, serious consequences are almost sure to follow, such as intestinal fermentation, auto-intoxication, impairment of the entire nervous system, headache, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver; sometimes even catarrh of the stomach and intestinal ulcers and cancer.

If you are not feeling right, see if it isn't acid-stomach that is the cause of your ill health. Take EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy. EATONIC Tablets quickly and surely relieve the pain, bloat, belching, and heartburn that indicate acid-stomach. Make the stomach strong, clean and sweet. By keeping the stomach in healthy condition so that you can get full strength from your food, your general health steadily improves. Results are marvelously quick. Just try EATONIC and you will be as enthusiastic as the thousands who have used it and who say they never dreamed anything could bring such marvelous relief.

So get a big 50-cent box of EATONIC from your druggist today. If not satisfactory return it and he will refund your money.

CONSTRUCTION OF 12-STORY HOTEL TO BEGIN NOV. 1

Improvement of Corner at 18th and Locust Streets, With Equipment, Estimated at $1,000,000.

By Berry Moore.

Charles F. Levy, president of the Hub Furniture Co., yesterday closed the option recently acquired by him on the southwest corner of Eighteenth and Locust streets as a site for a 12-story hotel structure. The site has a frontage on Locust street of 75 feet by a depth along Eighteenth street of 155 feet. The price paid was $125,000, the purchase being made from the Taylor estate through Cornet & Zeibig.

Plans for the improvement of the site with a hotel structure of a high type were announced in the Post-Dispatch several weeks ago, but execution of them was deferred pending the modification of the zone ordinance which now, according to Levy, will permit its erection.

The plans of the building are being perfected and construction is to begin not later than Nov. 1. Including furnishings and equipment it is estimated that the building will cost upwards of $1,000,000 exclusive of the site. There will be 350 rooms, each with bath.

One of Several Hotels.

The hotel will be operated by the Charidge Hotel Co., of which Levy is president and Morris Corn secretary and treasurer, and which operates the Plaza and other up-to-date hostelries in St. Louis. The extraordinary success of the Marquette Hotel, at the southeast corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue, erected 10 years or more ago as a result of the activities of the McNair & Harris Realty Co., demonstrates the potentialities of Eighteenth street corners in that locality for hotel purposes.

As foreshadowing the growth of Locust street on a larger scale, announcement of Levy's plans is noteworthy, especially in view of the fact that Festus J. Wade, president of the Mercantile Trust Co., recently disclosed plans for the erection, at the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets of a 12-story addition to the Jefferson Hotel, now occupying the east half of the block on the west side of Twelfth street, extending from Locust to St. Charles street, and which is owned by the Hotel Realty Co., of which he is president, and the stockholders of which are composed of wealthy clients of the Mercantile Trust Co.

Plans for this structure, according to President Wade, are being developed by C. H. McMillan, vise president of the trust company, in collaboration with its architect. It will be of a type designed to enhance the tone of Locust street. Incidentally, a picture of the present Jefferson Hotel is shown in an advertisement of the Mercantile Trust Co. in the rotogravure section of today's Post-Dispatch.

New Life for Locust Street.

Since the announcement of the Hotel Realty Co.'s plans for the erection of a full-sized annex at Thirteenth and Locust streets, development of the latter thoroughfare has received decided stimulus. Receiving, perhaps, his inspiration from Wade, Sam Hamburg Jr. purchased the southeast corner of Leonard avenue and Locust street, which he is improving with a handsome fireproof building at a cost of $350,000 for the Motors Sales Co., which is a selling organization of the General Motors Co., and which will occupy the building under a 10-year lease.

Hamburg also only recently purchased a site at Ewing avenue and Locust street for improvement for a five-story structure, plans for which are being made.

The Walter Scott Realty Co. has effected the sale of 20 or more homes of all prices in University City, Ames place and in Parkview during the last week. The firm also reports negotiations pending for many more homes. The demand for houses in these additions is fast absorbing the supply it is declared.

YECKEL-FEYDT-EARICKSON.

The Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co. reports the following sales:

5434 Gravois avenue, single flat, for John S. and Joseph Birchler, to a client.

4420 Louisiana avenue, 7-room house, 50-foot lot, for Myrtle Johnson, to Halleck and Suda Jones.

Vacant lot on Goethe avenue, for a client, to Anton Burgmann.

4853 Siebert avenue, St. Louis County, 4-room cottage, for a client, to Edward J. Wiethop and wife.

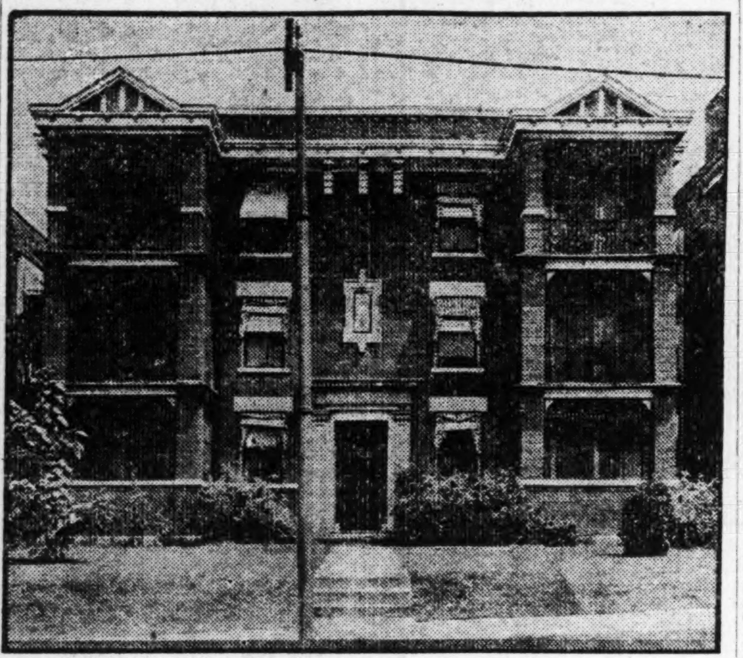
Milentz avenue lot, for Frank and Florence Mathers, to John and Bertha C. Beller.

2045 Allen avenue, 7-room house, for Barbara Saul, to Henry and Emma May Schlenker.

Etzel Avenue Apartment Yielding $4000 a Year Sold for $30,000



A. ULMAN has purchased through the Goldman Realty Co., the handsome apartment building at 6009 Etzel avenue. The consideration was $30,000.

The building is divided into six suites of five rooms and sun porch each.

It returns an annual rental of $4000. The seller was J. C. Craib.

EXHIBIT OF HOW BANK DEPOSITORS AID UPBUILDING

Forty buildings of industrial, commercial or social character, 37 of them in St. Louis and three in Webster Groves, are pictured in the central pages of the rotogravure section of today's Post-Dispatch. All the buildings were financed in their erection by the Mercantile Trust Co., according to John Ring Jr., advertising manager of that company. They appear, with their locations, designated as "factory," "hotel," mercantile building," "hospital," "church," "school" or "warehouse."

These buildings, which are among the best of their respective classes, are a demonstration of the service which the depositors of a financial institution can perform to the city through well-directed employment of their money in its upbuilding. As these pictures show, depositors of the Mercantile Trust Co. have contributed to the improvement and benefit of all parts of the city and suburbs. The showing is only partial, for the Mercantile Trust Co. has made and sold loans in the serial debenture from aggregating millions of dollars on other building properties in St. Louis and its suburbs. This class of business is handled through the company's real estate loan department, of whch J. B. Moberly is the head.

The Mercantile Trust Co. recently increased its capital and surplus from $6,500,000 to $7,000,000 from profits not previously disclosed. The company's deposits are from $40,000,000 to $45,000,000, exclusive of large temporary deposits. Its capital is $3,000,000. The company was organized 20 years ago by Festus J. Wade, its president, and is o monument to his financial acumen and business enterprise.

The Mercantile Trust Co is financing the 11-story Grand-Leader store annex being erected at the northeast corner of Seventh street and Washington avenue and which is to cost more than $1,000,000. Twelve or fifteen years ago the company promoted and financed the erection of the Grand-Leader's present building, occupying the entire east half of that block.

REALTY NOTES.

Albert T. Terry returned to the city yesterday after a three weeks' outing at Pointe Ann Parques, Mich., where Mrs. Terry is spending the summer and where a number of St. Louisans have cottages.

Henry R. Wiesels, vice president of the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., has just completed an automobile trip which took him to the Thousand Islands.

Isaac Archshoeffer is back after a triy to Yellowstone Park.

F. G. Zeibig of Cornet & Zeibig, has returned from Michigan, while Louis H. Tontrup of Papin & Tontrup was greeting friends after three weeks in Wisconsin.

The C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co. announces that Arthur C. Moyle is with the company as salesman. He will devote a large part of his time to South Side business.

Wyler At New Location.

E. M. Wyler, formerly located at 4914 Delmar bl., has removed to 5016 Delmar bl. He is one of the best known real estate men in the city. He played a prominent part in the big special sale, which closed out the remaining lots in Kenwood Springs.

LARGER QUARTERS LEASED BY EXPANDING BUSINESS CONCERN

The Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co. reports having leased the seventh floor of the Lesser-Goldman Cotton Co. Building at Twelfth street and Washington avenue to the Delmar Manufacturing Co., now located at 411-15 North Eighth street. The quarters will double the floor area now used by this company, which manufactures infants' and children's headwear, and is the only company west of New York City in that line of business.

The company also leased the southwest corner of Eleventh and Locust streets to the Majestic Paint Co., now at 1103 Locust street and being the Western distributers of the Chi Namel varnish and paint. Extensive alterations are to be made to the interior and the front will be modernized. The property is owned by the Louderman Realty Co.

The Martin-Breitt company also leased the four-story building at 1402 Chestnut street to the American Gold Label Co., now at 1811 Pine street. This will give the company about three times the floor space it now has. The property is owned by Mrs. Caroline Kamper.

REAL ESTATE BOWLING LEAGUE OPENS FRIDAY WITH 8 TEAMS

The Real Estate Bowling League will open the season Friday with eight teams, as follows: John S. Blake & Bro., F. Sherwood, captain; F. L. Dittmeier Co., C. E. Henderson, captain; Giraldin Bros., H. PICNIC FOR REAL ESTATE EXCHANGE MEMBERS PLANNED

The entertainment committee of the Real Estate Exchange, of which Barney Dickman is chairman, has been holding a number of meetings and figuring on means of transportation, and it has become generally believed that the committee is preparing a picnic for the members of the Exchange, to be held at some county resort possibly as soon as next Saturday. Dickman is expected to relieve the suspense by an announcement within a day or two.

This is the second factory to be located at this point since the City Plan Commission modified the zoning law covering that section. The Taylor Bros. The theater will be ouerated under the auspices of the Greater Amusement Co., showing exclusive first run pictures contracted for by the syndicate.

One of the most select orchestras in the city has been assembled for it.

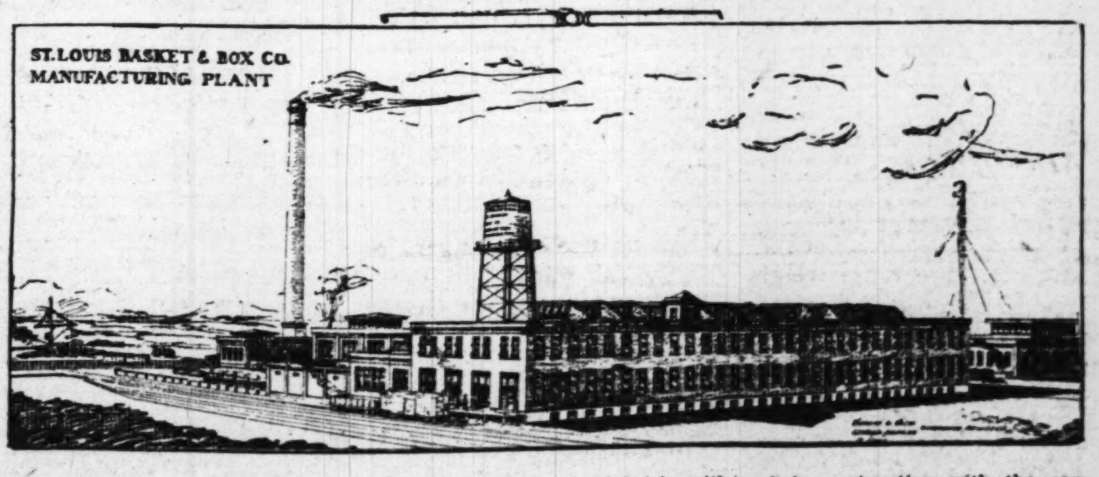
Addition to Give Industrial Concern 90,000 Feet of Space



CONTINUED expansion of the business of the St. Louis Basket and Box Co., of which Christopher W. Johnson is president, has resulted in the erection of an extensive addition to the buildings of its five-acre plant on Penrose street near Buschmann. The new structure will be 325x92 feet, two stories and basement, with a floor space of approximately 90,000 square feet. It is to be of concrete and brick, with steel columns, flat composition roof with saw-tooth steel skylights, and will be equipped with a sprinkler system. There are also to be constructed three large dry kilns and a spacious storage house for the seasoned lumber. The entire plant will be equipped with modern manufacturing facilities.

The buildings and equipment will represent an investment of $350,000 and in conjunction with the company's present plant at Second and Arsenal streets will form what is said to be the largest plant in the world for the manufacture of veneered panels and tops.

Plans for the building were prepared and the work will be supervised by Widmann & Walsh and George Pankau, and the contract has been awarded to the Fruin-Colnon Contracting Co.

FINAL CLEAN-UP SALE OF LOTS IN RIVERVIEW GARDENS BEGUN

The active condition of the St. Louis real estate market is illustrated by lot sales at Riverview Gardens. The addition originally comprised 255 acres, fronting the river, between Baden and the Chain of Rocks, and has been practically disposed of in less than two years. The buying has kept such close pace with the development that as the last improvements are being finished, there are only 47 lots left for sale, according to Sikking & Beckwith, agents for the company.

The company is opening its final clean-up sale, to continue till O 8. The agents anounce that if any lots are unsold on that date, the price will be raised and the property held to take advantage of the rapidly rising values in that section.

Winding roadways have been built from Riverview Drive, on which the tract fronts, to all parts of the land. The lots are large, all being 100 feet front and ranging from 150 to 3 feet deep. With the exception of those facing Riverview Drive, the prices range from $3 to $10 per foot, on terms of $25 down and $1 per month, without interest or taxes for one year.

Riverview Gardens is reached by the Broadway car and changing to the municipal line at Baden.

ANNOUNCEMENT

I wish to make known to the many people who have applications on file for suites in this new building that we shall start executing leases for suites in accordance with the applications on file.

We now have one of the furnished apartments completed and open for inspection. Those parties having applications on file are invited to come and inspect this beautiful home-like apartment.

Those parties who are interested in leasing a suite, but who have failed as yet to file their application are also invited, but I would prefer that they would delay their visit a few days as I wish everyone to receive personal attention and be fully informed as to just what this building is going to be and how operated.

For the information of the public, will say that I have endeavored to give the people of St. Louis an Apartment Hotel which is not excelled by any other building of similar type in the United States. The building is eight stories in height and is located on a lot having a frontage of 275 feet (about a third of a city block), overlooking Forest Park in the rear.

This building will be operated as a first-class Hotel, a large Cafe will be located on the ground floor, together with spacious Lobby, Ladies' Parlor and Smoking Room. Hotel Suites consist of Living Room, Dressing Room and outside Bathroom, some Suites have additional Bedroom. These Suites are luxuriously furnished, in fact, I think we have in this respect, surpassed any similar undertaking in this part of the country. We have other Suites which are leased furnished or unfurnished, and included in addition to the Living Room, Dressing Room, outside Bathroom, a Breakfast Room and Kitchenette, then again, we have other Suites which have in addition to this a Sunroom and Bedroom.

The Apartments in this building are fast being taken and I would suggest to those who are interested to file an application at once.

CHASE ULMAN.

Front elevation and garden plan of a home, designed by Guy Study, Architect for Maryland Av. in Maryland Terrace

MARYLAND TERRACE
TO BE BUILT IMMEDIATELY IN the 100-Acre Residence Park Adjoining Washington University Campus

This is the front elevation and the garden plan of a beautiful new home to be erected on a 100-foot lot in Maryland Terrace. The homesite is within a block of the Campus, on the highest portion of Maryland avenue. Note carefully the floor arrangement, how the rooms open out on grassy terraces, how each room takes fullest advantage of St. Louis' climate.

Build Your Home in Maryland Terrace

Enjoy the open spaces here—the roomy, deep lots, making congestion forever impossible. Live here amid ideal surroundings, among people you like to meet. In Maryland Terrace your home sets 62 feet back from wide drives, affording beautiful perspective vista. The lots are 190 to 220 feet deep, while most garages are a part of the houses, leaving the yards free, making room for children, trees, shrubs, birds. Here no two homes are alike—every plan is different, each home expressing the individuality of the owner. Maryland Terrace homes are not speculative homes.

Buy your homesite now—even though you may not build for awhile. Buy ahead of the big advance in prices. These deep lots are going off the market—your friends are buying. Soon the prices will advance $50 to $75 a front foot, so scarce is this type of high-grade property becoming. St. Louis' well-to-do people are increasing in numbers—while only a few really desirable homesites can be had in the Washington University district. Put your surplus funds in Maryland Terrace homesites and let St. Louis' tremendous growth make money for you.

VISIT MARYLAND TERRACE TODAY. Drive to Pennsylvania avenue, the west boundary of the Campus. Maryland Terrace extends west on both Maryland and Westmoreland drives, with the University car line direct to door.

Beauty, Comfort,
Exclusiveness and Permanency

Ames Place

At $60 Per Foot

The problem of the modern residence is no longer a simple question of the required number of rooms. We are living today far better than ever before. This is true of every detail of the house, inside and out.

It is also true of its location and surroundings and the restrictions that go to make those surroundings permanent.

After all, the four realities in a home are beauty, comfort, exclusiveness and permanency. Take these four thoughts with you when you go to look at Ames Place.

SUBURBAN PROPERTY FOR SALE

We Wish to Announce the FINAL CLEAN-UP SALE of Riverview Gardens

This remarkable subdivision, 255 acres of beautiful Homesites is almost sold out.

ONLY 47 LOTS UNSOLD

The Special Clean-Up Sale of remaining lots will continue from now until Oct. 8.

RIVERVIEW GARDENS

THERE ARE TWO SPECIAL REASONS for the remarkable success of Riverview Gardens. The wonderful river view and the cheap price. The river view is permanent, the prices are not. We are still selling at our original low prices, which will hold throughout this sale. The sale will close October 8. If any lots remain unsold at that date the price will be raised to correspond with the growing values in that section. The new parks, boulevards, fine homes and other improvements coming into the neighborhood are rapidly building up values far in excess of our prices.

RIVERVIEW GARDENS is in North St. Louis, on the high ground overlooking the Mississippi River, midway between Baden and the Chain of Rocks. It is very artistically platted, and each remaining lot is a most desirable homesite.

Nearly all lots are 100 feet front and from 150 to 300 feet deep.

Terms: $25 cash and $10 per month, without interest or taxes for one year.

Take North Broadway car, changing to Municipal line at Baden, direct to gardens.

226 TITLE GUARANTY BLDG.
I built a beautiful home for a client on Bartmer av., near Clara, but his family got too small to use 10 rooms. When building was cheap, he paid $6000 for it, but it would cost very much more today. I can sell it for $7500. It is in fine shape, all improvements are made, and it is a bargain. Can make terms to suit.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

SUFFERER.—Would advise your being examined by a physician. There are many causes and the remedy depends on the cause.

MARGARET.—An invitation to a cellar party should be written the same as an invitation to any other kind of a party. If you forgot to water your geranium it would die. The flower may need to be transplanted into a larger pot so that the roots will have plenty room to spread. * * * If you soak your dress in salt water before washing it may help to set the color; cannot, however, guarantee that your dress will not fade.

G. A. G.—In the real estate of your wife, who died intestate, you have only courtesy, providing the children you mention were of this marriage, being a life estate only in all her realty and to the revenue therefrom as long as you live; remainder vested in her children. If she was your second wife and no children were born alive of that marriage you would not be entitled to an interest or right of any kind in her real estate, her children in that event taking all.

CURIOUS.—The cipher or nought used in figuring is, by itself, neither odd nor even. Standing alone it is not even a number. As defined by the Standard Dictionary it is "the character 0, the symbol of zero or the absence of quantity." Cipher, nought and zero all mean nothing or absence of quantity. This, of course, has no odd, even or any other quality. In combination with figures that stand for value, the cipher or zero, invented by the Arabs, enables us to make computations which were impossible to the Romans, who had no such zero.

MRS. T.—The sample of blue plums you sent appears to show that your fruit is affected with plum scale. See Spray Calendar of Missouri Agricultural Experiment Station, Bulletin No. 30. It is too late now to try any treatment, except for prevention next season. Bordeaux mixture and kerosene emulsion are chiefly used as sprays for plum trees. Instructions and formulas are given in the above bulletin, which you should send for. Write Secretary, State Board of Agriculture, Jefferson City.

R. M. V.—Many cases of asthma are neurotic—oftentimes it is the manifestation of an organic derangement of the heart or kidneys—or some nasal condition. Asthmatics should be very carefully examined for some localized cause. Regulation of diet is important, eat sparingly of sugar and starchy foods, with heaviest meal at midday, and light evening meal which should be taken 3 hrs. before retiring. Coffee is a more suitable drink than tea. A high dry altitude is often beneficial. Ten to 20 grains of iodide of potassium three times a day is often of value in preventing the recurrence of attacks.

SUBSCRIBER, Birmingham, Ala.—It is perfectly practicable to make the transcontinental trip in a light automobile and the tour is being made right along. The distance from St. Louis to Los Angeles is approximately 2000 miles and an allowance of 3 weeks should amply cover the trip. The central route would be via the Red Ball Highway to Cedar Rapids, Io., thence by Lincoln Highway, via Omaha, Cheyenne and Ogden and on through Nevada to California. The Southern route would be by the National old trails through Missouri into Kansas and following the Sante Fe rail across Kansas, Texas and New Mexico to El Paso, where you would strike the direct route into Southern California.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving remembrance of our dear mother, Emma Pape, who died Aug. 31, 1918:
One year ago she passed away,
We grieved when she departed;
Time was too short to say farewell
To those she knew and loved so well.

We miss her coming footsteps,
We miss her everywhere,
Home is not what it used to be
Since mother is not there.
Sadly missed by sons and grandchildren.
HARRY HALVELAND.

In remembrance of my darling daughter, Mae K. Ambs, who passed away Aug. 31, 1917:
My heart in deep sorrow returns to the day,
As memory recalls how death bore you away
And left me in tears, in grief and in woe,
When I stood by your bed two years ago.
Two years with all its changes
Since death strangely bade us part,
But, my child, all these changes
Cannot take you from my heart.
Gone in the best of your day,
Blighted in womanhood bloom;
Gone from a heart that loved you,
To sleep in the silent tomb.
Sadly missed by mother,
MRS. GLACIA AMBS.

What Did Your Mother Say?

When You Showed Her Our Advertisement Yesterday in Which We Stated That Famous-Barr Company Needs the Co-Operation of

100 Women and Girls

TO LEARN THE WAY TO MAKE A GOOD LIVING AND BE WELL PAID WHILE DOING IT.

Didn't your mother say—that she considers it a fine thing for a girl to know how to support herself—especially if she is surrounded with a wholesome, moral environment while learning to become a business woman?

Didn't she say—that whoever first spoke of the "Dignity of Labor"—put a mighty good thought into human circulation and that a useful day's work well done is something to be proud of?

Didn't she say—that snobbishness and good American citizenship never go together: that the recent war has taught new meanings to the word "Service:" and that she would sooner have her daughters become workers than dilettante idlers any day?

and then—

Didn't she tell you to go downtown and see our Superintendent on the Main Floor Balcony Tuesday morning?

WE HAVE "Released" hundreds of fine suits that will "Dress you up." There is no time in life that you get so "down and out" that you can't get into the "Land of Beginning Again;" "Start anew;" we "Are Calling You" with our 5 large stores, 120 feet, filled with "bargains galore." If we don't get your "money for clothes here you don't spend your "dough" right. What you "save when you spend your dough is your profit." "Install the Abrams' System" of clothes-buying and save. Dress up, look prosperous. Don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. Be "awake" to the "fact" your personal appearance "must count." We have "placed on sale" hundreds of suits, pants, coats and vests, which means a big saving to you. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 43, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models, $7.50 to $15. IF THERE ever was a "time" when a man should make every "Dollar" bring the "Limit," the "time" is now. We sure will make your dollars bring the limit here. "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you:" These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you $5.00 to $7.50. We're "lowering" the "high" cost of "living;" we're in a "class" by ourselves; we claim with our "5 big stores" and "our policy of close-to-the-shore profits," "out-of-the-high-rent-district," eliminating all unnecessary expense. "Oh Boy!" our place to "Spend your dough." We have the goods now on hand at the old prices; buy now and "save yourself" 25 to 50 per cent. Never in the "history" of these "United States" will you "see prices" as "high" as this fall. Don't "tread the old beaten path," where you have spent your money for "friendship" and not for "clothes." We'll sell you clothes "at the price, not friendship." Play the "new game." At our "close-to-the-shore profits" policy; if your "dough counts," all we ask of you, "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." We are the only store in St. Louis showing "real" plain and silk-lined $30 and $35 blue, green, brown flannel waist-line suits at these prices: $19.98, $21.38, $22.38, $24.38 and $27.98. Don't spend "a dollar for clothes" until you see our "fall line." "Pay less; buy more." To the "Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop." Five big stores in one; 6c fare saves you $5 to $7.50; Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. "We've got the place, the goods at the price." A "price concession to our returning soldiers." "Sample suits," $14.44, $16.66, $18.39, $19.45, $21.89. Sample pants, $2.48, $2.58, $3.46, $4.98; tailor-made suits cost up to $35; our price, $19.50, $22.50, $26.75. We again announce our "Trade-in-Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "The place to buy clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. Liberty Bonds accepted. (c)

Sensational developments in the Mid-Continent and Texas Oil Fields are causing intense excitement among small and large investors, eager to profit by the greatest oil boom that has ever been witnessed in this country. While fortunes are being made daily in these fields, it is well to sound a warning of the dangers of making unwise investments. Vain regrets will come unless you keep posted. It is better to have a little foresight now than hindsight later. Each issue of the Oil Press is brimful of late and authentic information of scores of companies, some good, and others questionable, that are selling stock to the public. Analytic reports. The latest issue may be had free, together with "The Market," containing latest quotations for all listed and unlisted, active and inactive oil stocks. Send for both issues now. FIFTY-SIX YEARS AS A TEACHER AND PRINCIPAL IN ST. LOUIS PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Fanny M. Bacon's unprecedented record in educational work—Began as a young girl during the Civil War in a little school at Second and Chouteau — Has devoted her entire life to work with children and found it a real joy—Some reminiscences of her long service from which she retired on account of ill health -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-

OFFICIALS of the Board of Education, principals and teachers and educational authorities generally agree that the record of Miss Fanny M. Bacon, who recently resigned from the principalship of the Marquette School after a continuous service of 56 years, is unequaled anywhere in the country. Impaired health and not old age caused this remarkable woman to give up her work. Though her years are abundant, it was only when her robust health began to fail that she reluctantly laid down the duties that have been first in her affections since she began as a very young girl in the middle of the Civil War days to teach the children of St. Louis.

Many of the boys and girls who received their first lessons from Miss Bacon now have grandchildren of their own, and these pupils of other days are among the most devoted friends of the teacher who just wouldn't grow old. Daily contact and intimate association with children kept her young in thought and feeling, and her great love for her life's profession was the inspiration that urged her on, wholly indifferent to the inexorable flight of time.

In the fall of 1863, when St. Louis was a sadly disrupted municipality due to the war and the conflicting emotions of its citizenship, Fanny Bacon, a slip of a girl, with unbounded enthusiasm, applied for a position as teacher and obtained an appointment. Ira Divoll was at the head of the St. Louis system, which was then very limited. There were less than 5000 enrolled pupils in the schools, and as Garrison avenue was then in the outskirts of the town, the buildings were all east of Jefferson avenue and supplied only indifferent accommodations. Before her beginning, it had been the rule to separate the boys and girls and the practice was continued for some time thereafter, with reference particularly to the older pupils. With the youngest children it was not considered necessary to require the enforcement of such a rule and little boys and girls were admitted to the same schools.

The Madison School had just been opened at Seventh and Hickory streets and as that section of the city was densely populated the school was crowded, hence it was found necessary to maintain a small branch at 209 Chouteau avenue. Miss Bacon was assigned to this little establishment and there faced her first pupils. At that time the schools were small and a sudden rush of enrollments would create a panic among the officials whose duty it was to supply facilities. A school such as the Patrick Henry of the present-day system would care for more pupils than any three of the largest buildings in use when Miss Bacon launched her career as a teacher.

From her little school at Second and Chouteau, the former site of which is now occupied by the piers of the municipal bridge, she went to the big Madison, which had as many as eight rooms, all filled with sturdy youngsters whose parents were among the foremost people of the city, as that district was then settled by the oldest and wealthiest families, some of whose descendants are now among the well-to-do of St. Louis. After a year she was transferred to the Franklin, at Eighteenth and Lucas avenue, which had the distinction of being the largest school in the city. Though it had but 12 rooms, it enrolled over 1400 children in one year, which necessitated double sessions and limited hours for the pupils.

No one in those days thought of portable schools that could be readily moved about to care for such emergencies. It was a long jump at that time from Second and Chouteau to Eighteenth and Lucas, but Miss Bacon being ambitious, did not allow this transfer to awe her in the least. She went up to the Franklin and took charge of one of the highest classes and made a record that greatly pleased the principal. There were some rough and ready boys there who did not take kindly to the confinement and restraint attending any system of education. Tact and diplomacy, however, saved the situation for the teacher, and the more assertive of the boys soon fell under the spell that went with her system of imparting training and education at one and the same time. She curbed the more violent and soon manifested her ability to maintain discipline in fields where it had hitherto been more or less disregarded.

She moved in time to the Eads School at Fifteenth and Pine and later found herself at the Elliot at Fifteenth and Walnut, which was also largely attended. In 1887 she went back to the Franklin as principal and remained there until the Marquette School was built, at Sarah and McPherson, in 1895. Here for 24 years she directed a large organization of teachers and pupils and preserved a maximum of efficiency in all her grades. During the latter part of the season which closed in June her health failed badly, and her physician insisted that she was entitled to a very long rest. It was only after reaching the conclusion that a return to active school work was utterly out of question that she yielded and sent her resignation to the Board of Education. It was probably the saddest step of her career, running well beyond the half-century mark. Since then she has been resting at the home of her nephew, W. H. Davenport, formerly of St. Louis, who is now a resident of Salt Lake City, Utah.

During her long service as teacher and principal, Miss Bacon has impressed her associates by her unobtrusive ways. She has never shown much if any willingness to step into movements where prominence and even publicity would pick her out as inviting material, preferring to go along with her work and let the results speak for themselves. Temperamentally she was averse to anything that pointed the direction of the spotlight, especially on herself, and she used to tell her friends that she could do much better in the background.

Hence, when a Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine writer visited her at her nephew's home in Salt Lake City, he found it no easy matter to induce her to talk about herself and her remarkable teaching career. She had been quite ill, but was feeling greatly improved when her visitor called.

Miss Fanny M. Bacon.

"You will find me a poor subject," she said, when the preliminary greetings were over. "I have no story for you, so far as I can see."

But with a little urging and a suggestion now and then she was induced to tell something of her long and noteworthy service. And it soon transpired that it was not the formal and technical side of her teaching years that remained uppermost in her thoughts. She said little or nothing about pedagogical plans and principles, the routine of schoolroom work or the development of educational ideas. She was thinking most of the human side of her long experience in the schools—her thousands of boys and girls, the teachers who had been under her direction, the splendid men and women with whom she had been associated, the many friends she had made—these were the subjects nearest her heart.

"Some of my boys are grandfathers now," she said, "but somehow they are still my boys." Then she told of how a gray-haired man not long before had come to see her to renew a friendship formed many years ago when he was a youngster in her school.

"And I get wonderful letters," she said. "Sometimes it has been a long, long time since I have seen the boy or girl that writes, but a letter comes, reminding me of the old days and wishing me well. These are some of the compensations."

Nor do the boys and girls of later generations forget their former teacher and friend. Miss Bacon's face beamed as she spoke of the many letters that came to her from overseas during the late war. Some of her boys, answering the call of duty, had gone to fight for the cause their country had espoused, and even amid the weary toil and the stress of the training camp or the battlefield itself, they had paused to think of their old teacher and to send her their greetings and their love.

Miss Bacon was delighted, too, in recounting that since she left the school where she spent so many happy years, the teachers and pupils who still are there have joined in warm and affectionate letters to her.

"My teachers have been most loyal," she said. "No one could ask for more willing and faithful workers than most of them have been. And the boys and girls, one learns to love them. Of course, once in a while you find an unruly one among them; that is only natural. I recall one boy who flew into a rage and threatened me—said he would 'break my head.' But that kind is by far the exception; most boys and girls are lovable and good."

Miss Bacon spoke of some of the educational leaders of St. Louis with whom she had long been associated and whom she holds in affectionate esteem. At this point, thinking to record some of their names, the writer took out pencil and paper. It was a strategical error. Quick came the warning:

"Now, if you use a pencil I shall not say another word."

So back to its pocket went the pencil. Then she dwelt long on the name of Supt. William T. Harris.

"He was my beloved friend and helper," she said. "In his inspiration and assistance he was as good as a college to me."

Supt. Harris came next in the line of succession to Ira Divoll. In all, Miss Bacon served under six Superintendents.

Not all of Miss Bacon's helpful activities have been confined strictly to school work. For 15 years she served on the Library Board, and she looks back with no little pleasure on this service. At the time of the World's Fair in St. Louis she had the distinctive recognition of being selected to serve on the international jury.

In the reminiscences of her early years of teaching Miss Bacon recalled the formation of the pedagogical society.

"It was formed," she said, "by a number of high school men, and at first"—here she smiled—"women were not admitted."

"That fact didn't bother me, though," she went on, "for at that time I was very much interested in parties, dances and the like and found plenty to amuse me when I was out of school. Later, however, women were admitted and I became an active member."

Miss Bacon thought there was no particular message she had to leave with those who are to carry on the work which she has been obliged to lay down.

"The work will go on, naturally," she said. "It will grow and broaden gradually, just as it has in the past. No message of mine would have any particular effect on this. I hope, of course, that the teachers and all who are giving their lives to the schools will be successful and will find in their work the happiness and the satisfaction that I have found. For me it has been a most beautiful life. I have no regrets—except that my body gave way and I have to leave the work I loved to do. Were I able to do so, I would return to it tomorrow."

During her 56 years' service Miss Bacon saw the attendance at the public schools grow from 5000 to 105,000 and the population of the city increase itself four or five fold. She saw the rude accommodations for the children improved until it was conceded generally that this city had the best school buildings in the United States. Following the death of Prof. Harris she served under Supts. Edward H. Long, F. Louis Soldan, Ben Blewett and Dr. John W. Withers, who now directs the educational work.

Friends of Miss Bacon will be glad to know that her physical disability, though it incapacitates her for active work and keeps her from getting about as she would like, is not of dangerous character. After a visit with relatives in Salt Lake City for awhile longer, she and her sister, Mrs. Davenport, will go on to California, where it is confidently hoped that improvement will soon be noted and in time complete recovery attained.

"You know I couldn't walk back to town."

"Someone might come along in a car."

"Wouldn't you trust me, if I gave you my word to wait for you?"

"The word of"——

"A thief," she finished. "All right. I'm in no hurry. What are you going to do?"

"We'll wait here until someone comes along."

"Then let's go back to the trees while we wait," she proposed, climbing out of the car and taking a small box from the seat.

"Didn't Bender have one tiny good word for me?" she asked as they sat down in the welcome shade.

"He said stealing was the only offense you'd been up for, and he guessed you couldn't help it. What was your little game in making him think you were stupid?"

"Did he say I was? Horrid thing! I'm glad I put one over on him and lifted this," and she held up the box.

"What is it?" he demanded, sternly.

"His supper. A peroxided wife brought it to him—just before he presented me to you. It'll come in handy now, or won't you partake of stolen goods?"

"I'll pay him for it the next time I see him."

"Shucks, Kurt! You got such a bad bargain when you drew me, you ought to have something thrown in. It's all done up in a nice napkin—looks as if it would taste good. Oh, what a feast! Pork sandwiches, deviled eggs, dills, a keep-hot bottle of coffee, layer cake and pie. Bender knew how to pick a partner. What shall we drink out of?"

He produced a drinking cup, poured some coffee in it and handed it to her.

"Thank you," she said. "Shall we make it a loving cup, Kurt?"

He ignored her question and plunged greedily into a pork sandwich. He had had so much business in town that day he had taken no time to eat.

The girl partook of Bender's pilfered luncheon sparingly and without zest.

"Aren't you hungry?" he asked her presently, his temper disappearing as his appetite was appeased.

"No; it's a long time since I've been hungry."

"What did you steal this food for, then?"

"I don't know. Yes, I do. It was because that Bender woman gave me such a once-over, and decided I was the scum of the earth. Is that the way your topside tavern woman will look at me?"

"No," he replied, earnestly. "She's made a woman out of worse than you."

"Thanks!" she said, folding the napkin neatly. "I thought you had my number for the worst ever. It's wonderful what food will do for a man. Hope she will let me stay at the top of the hill while I get an appetite. The doctor said I didn't need medicine—just the right kind of food, rest and good air. I wouldn't have got them, maybe, but for you, and I suppose I haven't been very grateful."

Her tone was low and wistful. A look she hadn't seen before—a kindly, sympathetic look—leapt to his eyes and softened the harshness of his features.

"Have you been sick, real sick?" he asked.

"Yes; clean played out, the doctor said."

"Then I am glad I brought you. We will make you well, physically, anyway."

"And maybe the other will follow?"

"It will if you will try to do right. Will you?"

"Sure. I've always tried—most always. I can't be very bad up at the top of a hill, unless I get lonesome. You'd better tell that 'best woman' to double-lock things. It's with stealing the same as with drinking—if anything you crave is lying around handy, good-by to good resolutions."

"I'll see to that. I'm a Sheriff, remember."

"Look, Sheriff!"

With a mocking smile, she held up a watch.

"I took that off you slick as anything when you passed the coffee. It was like taking candy from a baby."

Anger at her nerve and chagrin that he had been so neatly tricked kept him silent.

"It's not altogether a habit," she continued, in mock apology; "it's a gift."

"Jo got her number wrong," he thought. "She was just playing him with her sad, nice, little-girl manner. For his sake, I'll see that they don't meet. I wonder just why she is playing this role with me?"

"You might give me credit for returning your ticker," she said, in an abused tone.

"I never knew but one other person," he said, coolly, "that affected me as unpleasantly as you do."

"Who was that?" she asked, interestedly.

"A cow puncher—Centipede Pete."

"Some name! Why don't you ask me my name, Kurt? Don't look so contemptuous. I am going to tell you, because it doesn't sound like me. It's Penelope."

"Oh!" he exclaimed, with something like a groan in his voice.

"Nobody can help her name," she complained. "Don't you like it? I kind of thought it would suit you, because it doesn't sound like me. Sort of suggests respectability, don't you think?"

"It was my mother's name," he replied tensely, as he walked a few paces away.

Night that comes so fleetly in this country dropped like a veil.

The girl followed him.

"I didn't steal that—your mother's name, you know, Kurt," she said, in an odd, confiding voice. "They gave it to me, you see, and maybe it will help that I've never been called by it. They used to call me Pen or Penny—a bad penny, I suppose you think."

"Your name," he said, frigidly, "or at least the one Bender knows you by—the one you went by in Chicago, is Marta Sills."

She made an articulate sound, suggestive of dismay.

"That is one of my names," she admitted. "I had forgotten I gave that one to Bender."

He made no comment.

"You said," she continued, pleadingly, "that there was no excuse for me and girls like me. Maybe you would find one if you knew what we are up against. Everyone knocks instead of boosts, and tells us how lowdown we are. Just as if a mirror were held up to an ugly-looking girl and she were asked how anyone who looked like that could expect to be different. Suppose I should tell you I'd been to reformatories and places where I had learned that I must play the stupid act as I did with Bender so as to be kept from being sent up. There is no mercy for those who exhibit any glimpses of intelligence, you see. This time I thought I was a goner for life, until you pried me loose. All doors seemed closed, but you opened the window. No one was ever really kind to me before, except a Salvation Army woman and—someone else."

"What was the name of that someone else?" he interrupted.

She hesitated, and for the first time seemed confused.

"Was it," he demanded, "Jo Gary?"

"Oh!" she gasped. Then quickly recovering, she continued: "You're quite a detective for an acting one. If you were the real thing, you'd be a regular Sherlock Holmes and make a clean sweep of crooks."

"Answer my question."

"It doesn't seem necessary to tell you anything; you know so much. I seem to know that name. Was he at a dance hall in Chicago—let me see, Hurricane Hall?" she asked, serenely. "Is this his part of the country, and shall I see him?"

"It was his part of the country. You cannot see him."

A wistful note crept into her voice as she said:

"I should like to see him just once, but I suppose you won't tell me where he is. I don't dare let on to you how grateful I really feel to you, because I might lose my nerve, and I've just got to hang on to that. It's my only asset in trade. We have to use lots of bluff. Besides, some way you make me feel contrary. Maybe I am the lightning and you the thunder."

"Why did you leave Chicago?" he asked abruptly. "Bender said that was where you drifted from. I want the real reason—the absolute truth."

It was very dark now, but she could feel his eyes, as piercing as searchlights, demanding the truth.

"The gate was open and I just walked out, or maybe I stole out. I didn't follow Jo, because he didn't say where he lived—just the hill country. I'll tell you the real reason—thieves don't always lie—I had been sick and the doctor said air like this for mine, and so I followed this trail. I picked it up here and I'd have been all right if I hadn't run up against that lightning-chaser of a Bender. I guess folks are keener out this way than they are in the cities. More time to hunt crooks, maybe."

"No," he denied. "It isn't that. It's because we have a beautiful, clean country and we are going to"——

"Have no blots on the landscape," she interrupted. "I suppose Bender catches them and you reform them. Is that the system? Well, no one can be good till they are comfortable. I'm not very strong yet, and I'm not used to being out untethered like this. I'm cold and sleepy. If you don't object, I'll crawl into your old wagon, if I can find it in the dark."

She caught a note of contrition in a muffled exclamation.

"Wait!"

She heard him walk on to the car and come back. Then she felt a coat wrapped snugly about her.

He guided her to the clump of trees and spread a robe on the ground.

"Sit down here," he said, peremptorily.

She gave a little smile of victory, which, if he had seen it, would have strangled all his new-born compassion.

"Why didn't you tell me your story in the first place?" he demanded.

"When you are out in the world alone, you know," she said, sagely, "and everyone is taking a shot at you, you have to put out a bluff of bravado, same as a porcupine shoots out his quills."

He gave another murmur of sympathy.

"Don't feel too bad about it, Kind Kurt, because being knocked about sharpens your wits and makes you an expert dodger when you aren't equal to fighting in the open."

Suddenly into the black-purple sky shot forth a moon and stars.

"Makes the white lights of a city looks like 30 cents, eh, Kurt?" she commented.

He made no response, and she was serenely aware of his silent disapproval.

"What's matter, Kurt?"

"My name," he replied, frigidly, "is Walters."

"Is it, then? And what might your middle name be?"

"You can call me 'Mr. Walters,'" he replied, striving for dignity and realizing instantly how lame was the attempt.

"Oh, can I, now? Well, I'll do nothing of the kind to the first real friend I've ever had. As I said, I am all in, and I'm going to snooze while you watch for a gasoliner to come along."

She stretched herself out and closed her eyes. In a semi-slumber she was dreamily concious of a firm roll slipped deftly under her head. She made a faint murmur of content and acknowledgment and knew no more. Her sleeping sense didn't tell her that a tall Sheriff came and looked down upon her small, pale, moonlit face which sleep, the great eliminator, had robbed of everything earthly and left it the face of an innocent, sleeping child. She didn't dream that as he gazed he remitted sentence and told himself that she was but a stray little kitten lost in the wide plains of life, and sorely in need of patient guidance to a home hearth.

"She was right," he confessed. "I did make her feel contrary. It seems to be a characteristic of mine. Maybe her true little self is the one Jo saw and she can be made worthy of him yet."

Helium Gas Within Reach of All

UP TO 1915 the total output of helium gas in all the world had probably been less than 100 cubic feet, and it was worth about $1700 a cubic foot. But just before the armistice was signed a shipment of 150,000 cubic feet of helium gas was sent to Europe and it cost less than 10 cents a cubic foot.

Helium gas was first discovered on the sun, by spectroscopy. It is the best gas for use in balloons, because it is not inflammable. It is now extracted from the natural gas of Texas and Kansas.

The method is delicate and complex, but is based upon the fact that the principal constituents of natural gas liquefy when cooled to about 328 degrees Fahrenheit, but that helium remains a gas at that temperature, and hence is easily separated.

La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.

CHAPTER I.

ON AN afternoon in early spring a man lounged against the wall of the station waiting for the express from the East. Slender of waist and hip, stalwart of shoulder, some 72 inches of sinewy height, he was the figure of the typical cattleman. His eyes were deepset and far-seeing; his lean, brown face, roughened by outdoor life, was austere and resolute in expression.

The train had barely stopped when a boyish-looking, lithe-limbed youth leaped from the platform. The blue serge suit and checked cap he wore did not disguise the fact that his working clothes—his field uniform—were those of a cow puncher. A few quick strides brought him to the man in waiting.

"Hoped you'd be on hand to meet me, Kurt, so I could get out to the ranch tonight. How's things up there?"

"Just the same as they were when you left, Jo," said the one addressed in whimsical tone. "You've only been gone 10 days, you know."

"You don't say!" ejaculated Jo, following his companion through the depot. "City does age a man."

Gone are the days of the Golden West, when spurred and revolvered horsemen sprang into saddles and loped out of the brush, or skimmed over matted mesquite on a buckboard drawn by swift-running ponies.

A long racing car was waiting for the two men and they were soon speeding over a hard-baked, steel-like road that led up, around and over the far-flung, undulating hills before them.

"I thought Kindon's best car was worth a million bucks before I went to Chicago," said Joe critically, "but it would sure look like a two-spot on Michigan avenue."

The other smiled indulgently.

"I trust everything out here won't suffer by comparison with the things you have seen during your journey."

"I should say not! It all looks pretty good to me. I wouldn't change this trail to Top Hill for all the boulevards and asphalts of Chicago, and our ranch house has got any hotel I saw skinned by a mile for real living. I had some vacation, though, and it was mighty good of you to send me on that business. I 'tended to it, all right, as soon as I got there, before I took in any of the sights or let loose for my 'time.' I won't forget it in you Kurt—to send me instead of going yourself."

"Well, Jo, you'd been cooped up here for a long time for a youngster," said Kurt, laying a hand on the younger man's shoulder, "and I saw you were rarin' for a little recreation, I thought you would settle down to a hard season's work if you let' out a little. I received your report and check. You managed that cattle deal very shrewdly. Kingdon was much pleased."

"That's encouraging, but I feel better at pleasing you, Kurt."

They rode on without talking for some distance. From time to time Kurt cast a searching glance at the young man whose eyes shone with a strange, steady light—a look of exaltation and despair combined.

The car slowed down to conversational need.

"What 'tis, Jo? Did you come to grief when you 'let loose?' Let go all your earnings in one big game, without any wayslips, or did you have such a round of theaters, cabarets and night life that you are feeling the depression of reaction?"

"You're guessing wrong," replied Jo, quietly. "I know that's the way most of us grass-fed men act when we get a chance at white lights. I had a beautiful time that was as short and as far off as a pleasant dream. As I said, I started out for a regular time, but I didn't take a drink, or touch a card, or—say, Kurt, I think I'd like to tell you about it! I know you won't kid me, for I'm in earnest and—in trouble."

Another quick glance at the blue eyes, usually so brimming with sparkling gayety, but which were now serious and despondent, brought a transformation to the grim face of the older man, making him look kinder, warmer, younger.

"Shoot, Jo!" was all he said, but the lad felt that crude word was backed up by a real interest, a readiness to hear and advise.

"Someone gave me a steer to a dance place," he began. "Hurricane Hall, I think it was called, and as soon as I looked in, I saw it was tougher even than a cowboy's cravings called for; but I sort of stuck around until I happened to look at one of the tables over in a cornered-off place. A little girl was sitting there alone, different from all those other fierce-looking ones who were dressed in high-water skirts and with waists that looked as if they needed inside blinds to get by.

"She had on a white dress, a real dress—not a skirt and bib—that covered her, and without much fixings. Her hair was drawn back plain like a kid's. I knew right off she'd got in wrong, and I thought it was up to me to get her out of that joint.

"I went over to her and said: 'Excuse my nerve, little girl, but I guess you're in the wrong pew.'

"She looked at me sort of funny; then she smiled and said: 'Same to you!'

"Her voice sounded like low, soft music—contralto kind.

"'Yes,' I said, 'you're right. I'm a cowboy, not a country boy, and I'm in Chicago to see the sights; but I'd ask for blinders if I stayed around here much longer. Who brought you here?'

"'Nobody,' she said, looking down. 'I came by myself.'

"'I'm glad of it,' I tell her, 'and I'm the guy that's going to take you away from here.'

"'Why?' she asked me, 'and how do you know I'll go with you.'

"She'd kept her eyes away from me all this time. I said: 'Look at me.'

"She did. Right at me, the way kids do—not bold—just curious. Good-night! It did something to my heart when her eyes looked into mine that way.

"'Can you trust me?' I asked after a minute.

"'Yes,' she said; and I knew she meant it.

"'I want to dance with you,' I told her, 'but I don't want to do it here.'

"'Where can we go?' she asked.

"'I know a man in Chicago,' I said, 'who has asked me to come to his place. It ain't stylish enough for you, but it's run right and respectable. It ain't very far from here. Reilly's. Know it?'

"'I've heard of it,' she said, 'but I've never been there.'

"Of course she hadn't. I'd seen right off she was just a kid and hadn't been around to places.

"'Will you go there with me now?' I asked her.

"'Yes,' she said. 'I know you're all right.'

"Maybe I wasn't feeling good when I'd got her out of there and steered her through the streets! She was a little mite of a thing, and young, but very quiet; her eyes had a sad look.

"We went to Reilly's. He was up here in the hill country once for a vacation—the time you were out on the coast. We fellows gave him some time, and he liked it fine. Well, he told us the place was ours. The music was great, and we started right out on the floor. Say! I was feeling as fit and stepping as lively as if I had had a million drinks, but I hadn't had one. There was no getting around it. That little girl in her white dress had landed me one right over the heart. She slipped into my arms as quick as she had into my heart, too. I danced the way I felt, and she—well, she was right with me every time; the slickest little stepper I ever saw. Not dance mad like those professional kind; she let me set the pace and she followed any lead.

"Reilly came up to us on the floor and offered to introduce us to folks. I asked him if he remembered the time I gave him out West, and he said he could never forget it and he was now aiming to return it best he knew how. 'Take it from me,' I said, 'that I can get right returns from you if you'll not give any other fellow the chance to butt in on these dances.' 'I'm on,' he said, and he let us alone.

"We danced every time without talking any. When it came closing time, Reilly came up again and said: 'This is the hour we quit, but it don't mean for my guests. Come back in this little room and have refreshments on me.'

"He showed us into a little ring-around-the-rosy room with lights half off and asks: 'What'll you have?'

"'Coffee I said, quickly and warningly, and the kid said: I'll have the same.'

"Reilly laughed—because I took coffee, I suppose, We got it good and hot, with sandwiches and pickles thrown in. Then we talked. Some way she got me to do most of the talking. She wanted to hear all about ranches and cowboys and me. Her eyes got bright, and she said it was better than movies, and she wished she could see my country. I told her she would, because I was going to take her there. She didn't say anything to that. Pretty soon Reilly comes in and tells me he wants to give us the best time he knows, but were we planning to stay for breakfast? When I saw what time it was, I took the hint and we got right up. I asked him what there was to pay, and he said if I tried to pay, I'd have to do it over his dead body. We went out into the night, only 'twas morning. I asked her what her folks would say.

"'I have no folks,' she said kind of sad-like.

"That made me feel good.

"'I am glad of that,' I told

The Castoff

Along the Red bench there was no sign of exultation. High and clear over the muttering in the stands rose the joyful whoop of a lone Red rooter:

"There goes your old pennant! How do you like it?"

A loyal home fan reached over and mashed the offending one's hat down over his eyes, and he lapsed into sudden silence, chuckling to himself and muttering now and then under his breath. It was no time for loud hilarity.

Callahan raved; the first baseman threw his glove on the ground and jumped on it and the rightfielder walked around in a little circle, making motions with his throwing arm. Ben Daly alone remained calm. The Blue Sox got the last man on a pop fly, and in dead silence the teams changed sides for the last of the ninth.

Hardy, trotting to his position in the outfield, passed within 10 feet of Ben Daly. The manager was walking slowly toward the bench, his cap in his hand, and it seemed to Hardy that the man had suddenly grown gray and old. There were deep lines in his face, and all the spring had gone out of his step. Hardy wanted to speak to him, but could think of nothing to say, and so wisely held his tongue. It was the boy's first glimpse of a real baseball tragedy, and it hurt him to think that this thing had to happen to a man who had been his friend. He was conscious of a thankfulness that he had had no hand in the play.

In the coacher's box a blue-stockinged warrior was yelling that the game was still young.

"It's not over yet!" he shouted. "Not over yet!" There was no reassuring bellow from the grand stand, where the fans were sitting huddled together, still stunned by the magnitude of the calamity that had overtaken them.

Thomas ambled out to the box to face "Budge" Tipton, put in to hit for Callahan. Jaggs could have done no worse. Budge swung at two slow ones, and then popped up a weak foul to the catcher. Harrison, the next man up, took a strike and then dropped the ball neatly over the third baseman's head for a single. The fans in the stands suddenly came to life with a sharp cheer. They screamed madly when the Red catcher dropped the next ball and Harrison slid to second. Like a flash the temper of the great sullen crowd changed. It began to roar for blood. Thomas tried a fast inshoot on Kennedy and Kennedy spun around and took the ball between the shoulder blades. The umpire gave him the benefit of the doubt, and Kennedy jogged down to first base, so much elated that he forgot to limp.

Higher and higher rose the yells from the stands. Thomas' luck was deserting him at last. Turn about was fair play. Gilson, the Red catcher, walked into the diamond and handed the ball to Thomas. The pitcher went back into the box and discovered that his shoe needed tying. The Blue Sox rooters interpreted all these signs and yelled to the umpire to make the Reds quit stalling and play ball.

Ben Daly stood at the plate, wagging a short, heavy bat in narrowing circle. Thrice he gripped his war club between his knees, patted his hands in the dust, and wiped them on the front of his shirt. Thomas knew all about Ben Daly. He had been pitching to the veteran for seven years. Thomas had many theories about Daly's hitting and only one certainty. He knew that Daly might hit anything anywhere.

The battery signals passed: Thomas was to try a fast drop. The ball broke like a wounded swallow; broke too soon, and, striking in front of the plate, bounded back to the stand, with Gilson in hot pursuit. Kennedy raced to second and Harrison to third. An insane asylum might have been recruited from the grand stand; the bleacherites were demented with joy.

Out in right field Hardy could barely restrain himself. He wanted to throw his cap in the air and add his voice to the tornado of sound. Only a baseball miracle could cheat Ben Daly out of his pennant now. Thomas was breaking; anybody could see that. At any rate, whatever happened, they could not say the Reds had not been trying.

Just then Thomas delivered the next ball; Hardy, following with his eye, saw Daly shorten his grip on the handle of the bat, and chop wickedly. The next he saw of the ball it was sailing toward him, 10 feet over the first baseman's head. Hardy heard a tremendous bellow, which seemed to beat down on him from above, and then he found himself running at top speed toward the diamond.

The boy realized the situation in one sickening flash. Daly had chopped the ball just beyond the infield. Before Hardy there lay the choice of two things. He might "play the ball safe" by taking it on the first bound, but if he did, Harrison would tie the score, and it would take a perfect throw to catch Kennedy at the plate. On the other hand, he might try for a fly catch. Should he get his hands on the ball before it touched the ground, it would be an easy matter to throw to second base and complete a double play. If he tried for the catch and missed, both men would score and the game would be over.

Before he had taken two full strides toward the diamond, Hardy's decision was made, and in that length of time he had weighed his chance of reaching the ball. He would try for the catch, and if he missed it—well, it was baseball to take the winning chance.

As he raced toward the diamond, Hardy was conscious of the monstrous unfairness of the thing. Why should this play be forced on him, of all the men on the team? Why hadn't Daly popped that ball to center? It would have been safer there, for the center fielder was playing deep. Without taking his eyes from the ball, Hardy saw that the coachers and base runners were willing to gamble that he could not make the catch. Harrison was almost to the plate, Kennedy was running down third, watching Hardy over his shoulder. Confound Daly!

Hardy measured the shortening flight of the ball with his eyes. He knew if he made that catch it would be the greatest fielding play of his life as well as the most important one.

Over the din of the right-field bleachers behind him, the wild, hysterical yells of his old enemies, he caught the ancient refrain, lifted now in triumph.

"Tin can! Tin can!"

So they thought he had no chance, too, did they? Maybe he would show them something about fielding a short hit! That was the spur which carried him over the final 40 feet. With one last bound, Hardy doubled forward and dropped both hands to his shoe tops. Something struck the palm of his gloved hand with a stinging thud, the leather fingers snapped shut, and with the triumphant yell of the rooters still quivering in the air, Hardy straightened up and, running a few steps, whipped the ball on a line to Moles, who was waiting on second base. The end of the game and the end of the Blue Sox pennant hopes came with the suddenness of a thunderclap.

Twenty minutes afterward Hardy was sitting in front of his locker in the clubhouse. Catterson entered.

"Throwing the games, eh!" he said. "Kid, that was the greatest play ever made in this town!"

"Oh, shut up!" Hardy burst out. "I couldn't do it again in 10 years! I wish I'd dropped it!"

"No," said Catterson, softly. And then, under his breath: "Jee-rusalem! I wish he had!"

Boy Scout Craft for Campers

IT IS conceded that Indians know more about campfires than anybody else, and there is horse sense in the old redskin saying:

"White man heap fool," grunts the old chieftain contemptuously. "Make um big fire—can't git near! Indian make um little fire—git close! Ugh! Good!"

NATURE wisdom among the boy scouts sometimes drops into poetry. There are a few old backwoods rhymes which have been adopted for the enlightenment of American youth.

> "The evening red, the morning [illegible]ay,
> Sets the traveler on his way;
> The evening gray, the morning red
> Brings down showers on his head.
> "When the grass is dry at night
> Look for rain before the light.
> When grass is dry at morning light,
> Look for rain before night.
> "When the dew is on the grass,
> Rain will never come to pass."

A few other tips are these: Every cloud is a weather sign. Low clouds, swiftly moving, indicate rain; hard-edged clouds, wind; "mackerel" sky (the sky mottled with small cloudlets, giving the suggestion of scales on a fish), 12 hours dry.

THE camp regulations up at Bear Mountain embraced many obvious things rigorously carried out. Some of the principles, while well known, will bear repetition.

No boy is allowed out in a canoe until he has in actual test demonstrated his ability to swim across the lake and back again with his clothes on. When swimming time is called the boys going into the water are checked up as carefully as a conscientious shipping clerk invoices the merchandise that passes through his hands. A cordon of boats manned by graduate scouts qualified as life savers, is thrown around the area of water in which swimming is permitted.

One of the picturesque things was the vigorous measures that the scout masters had to take to prevent heated boys coming in from an arduous hike from gorging themselves on the cold spring water. The juveniles were allowed a few swallows at proper intervals, and were chased away from the water in about the way that you would keep a pack of hungry bloodhounds away from a bone. It was a vivid exposition of the idea of not drinking much cold water when overheated.

Despite the numerous restrictions, the boys enjoyed themselves. They were quite observant of the camp laws, which, when they were not on spells at kitchen police duty, instilled in them a sound understanding of the inviolability of the scout legal enactments.

There were other helpful hints up at the Boy Scouts' camp, but those given should suffice in preserving you, on your camping trip this vacation, from many grave dangers.

A STRANGE CASE OF HYDROPHOBIA

THE following remarkable case is described by Dr. John D. Quackenbos in the New York Medical Journal:

Hydrophobia, or fear of water, the waeter fyrtnys (frightfulness) of our Anglo-Saxon forbears, is universally associated with rabies, an infectious disease depending on a specific virus, which is communicated to man by the bite of mad dogs, cats, wolves and other carnivores. But hydrophobia may be true phobia, or unfounded fear of water, of purely psychic nature and origin and so taking class with mysophobia, fear of dirt; acrophobia, fear of heights; agrophobia, fear to cross open spaces.

In rabies, painful spasms of the throat muscles are a distinctive symptom. Convulsions follow attempts to swallow water, the very sight of which throws the sufferer into paroxysms.

Exactly these manifestations characterized attempts to drink on the part of a patient referred to me by a specialist of Cleveland. An unfortunate marriage to a man she detested, in deference to her parents' demands, precipitated the first attack in this subject.

As she stood before the altar at the ceremony a spasm of the pharyngeal constrictors and muscles of the larynx suddenly occurred, closing the epiglottis with a strangling sensation in hysterical imitation of the genuine tetanic contractions of canine madness. Gradually a difficulty in swallowing developed, having special reference to water. The spasm returned with every attempt to quench her thirst, and finally at the very sight or thought of water. When she reported to me in March last she was accustomed to occupy four hours every morning fighting with the water in the basin to get her face washed. To force a teaspoonful of water into her stomach was equivalent to a tragedy, during the action of which she clutched at her throat to relieve the tension, and struggled agonizingly to drive air through the constricted larynx into her lungs, for as she explained it, there "wasn't air enough for her to breathe, her wind was shut off."

In the accomplishment of the distressing task of ingesting a mouthful of water, she was constrained to lift and put down the containing wineglass scores of times before she could control the spasm sufficiently to force down a modicum of the fluid her desiccated system craved. An extension of the obsessive idea terminated in the delusional conviction that there was water in whatever she ate or touched, and she accordingly spent hours in wiping articles of food and chinaware to remove suspected moisture therefrom.

figures of the holy persons I must place in my houses of worship. In this last large reproduction of a bridal couple leaving the church just after the wedding, I was more thorough than I ever was in making a decoration for the trade. In this reproduction I show figures representing the Virgin Mother and the Infant Jesus, as well as a large figure of St. Joseph. To thus illustrate the interior of a Catholic church it is essential that these figures be shown to make it realistic. When it is necessary to work in colors, I have various powders and solutions to get the shades that are called for.

"In the Roosevelt tower I have gathered a few pictures showing it as it was when dedicated, and I also have the measurements, so as to make the proper proportion in the molding of the replica. I have been working on it with real enthusiasm, as I have long been an admirer of this splendid type of the American man, and it is my hope that it will be worthy of such a subject."

In the large group of photographs showing the many designs produced by Mulier during his active work in the trade are many churches and Christmas pieces, representing the interior of the stable at Bethlehem and the infancy of the Savior.

her, 'because I want you all to myself.'

"Then I thought she must be working, and I told her I was sorry to have kept her up so late because she'd be too tired to go to work. She said she was out of a job, but was expecting something soon.

" 'I am glad of that, too,' I said.

"She looked sort of surprised, so I knew I'd been too sudden, but you see, time was short with me. I told her I'd be in Chicago another 24 hours and would she help show me around. I had never been on one of the big boats and Reilly had told me about a fine tour to take to some Saint place. She knew where he meant, though she had never been there. She said folks who lived in Chicago didn't go outside much. They left the trips for visitors. She promised to meet me at the dock in a few hours.

"She wouldn't let me go all the way home with her. She said she had reasons, and made me leave her on a corner which she said was quite close to where she lived. It was an awful poor part of the city, and I suppose she didn't want me to know how humble her home was. As if I cared for that! It was so near light I knew she would be safe, but I stood there on guard for a few minutes after she left.

"Believe me, I was right on time at the dock, and she came soon after I did. She had on a plain, dark suit, neat, little shoes, and a hat down over her eyes like the girls in movies wear. I'd passed a corner on the way to the boat where they sold flowers. There were some violets that looked like her. I bought a big bunch and when I gave them to her she sort of gasped and said no one had ever bought flowers for her before. I was glad to hear that. I asked her hadn't she ever had a fellow, and she said she hadn't. I told her I couldn't see why, unless it was because she didn't want one. She looked up at me sort of shy and said she might have had one most any time, but that there had never been one she cared for before.

"I could have hugged her right there on the dock for that 'before,' but it was time for the boat to start. There weren't many going. It was early in the season, she said. We went up on deck and sat by the rail and maybe old Lake Michigan didn't look sparkling! Everything looked sparkling to me. She was as happy as a kid with a new doll, because she had never been on a boat before. When we got to the place—St. Joe, she said it was—there were all sorts of things to do that beat Chicago all to bits for a good time. There was a big sandy beach that made me want to go in the water, but she said it was too early. So we sat in the sun-warmed sand and watched the waves, and we got our pictures taken, and tried a wheel of fortune. We went to a big hotel and had a good dinner, though they didn't have any of the things that were down on their program. The waiter said it was a bill of fare left over from last year. We didn't mind that. After dinner we rode out to a place to see some guys that looked like pictures in the Old Testament. They lived in David's house, too.

"It was an awfully short afternoon someway. We had supper at the hotel and took the boat home. What few passengers there were besides us stayed shut up in the cabin, so we had the deck and the light of the new moon all to ourselves.

"She shivered a little, but I had brought an extra coat, because I had seen Reilly before I went and he told me to take one. I wrapped her up in it, and when I buttoned it around her chin, I did what I'd been aching to do since I first met her, but had slipped on my courage. She was looking down in a shy, little way she has—and I kissed her. When she lifted her eyes there was such a surprised look in them, I felt just as if I had hurt a baby.

" 'I didn't mean to do it,' I said, 'but I couldn't help it. Will you forgive me?'

" 'I'll forgive you,' she said, in a low voice, after a moment, 'but you mustn't—again.'

"She meant it, so I didn't, but she let me hold her hand and we sat quiet and watched the moon shine on the water.

"I asked her if she'd had a good time, and she told me it had been the most wonderful day of her life—different from all others.

" 'Honest?' I asked.

"She didn't answer, but looked off over the water, and I saw a tear on her cheek.

" 'Honest?' I said again.

" 'Yes,' she said. "Honest, and I never knew before what it was to be honest.'

"I didn't know what she meant, but we had got to Chicago now. It wasn't very late, and I asked her should we go to Reilly's again, and she said it would spoil the day. I thought so, too. On the way to where I'd left her the night before, there was a little park. We went in and sat on one of the benches. It was only a little clump of trees, but it made a nice place to visit, because there was no one around. People in cities don't act like they were seasoned to outdoors except when it's hot weather.

"I was booked to leave the next morning, so I couldn't let any grass grow. I asked her to marry me.

" 'I wish you hadn't asked me,' she said, and her voice sounded like there were tears in her eyes.

"Why?" I asked.

" 'I wish,' she went on, without taking any notice of me—just like she was talking to herself—'that I dared love a man like you.'

"That was all I cared to know. For the ghost of a second I held her in my arms, but she slipped out of them, and I saw her face was pale.

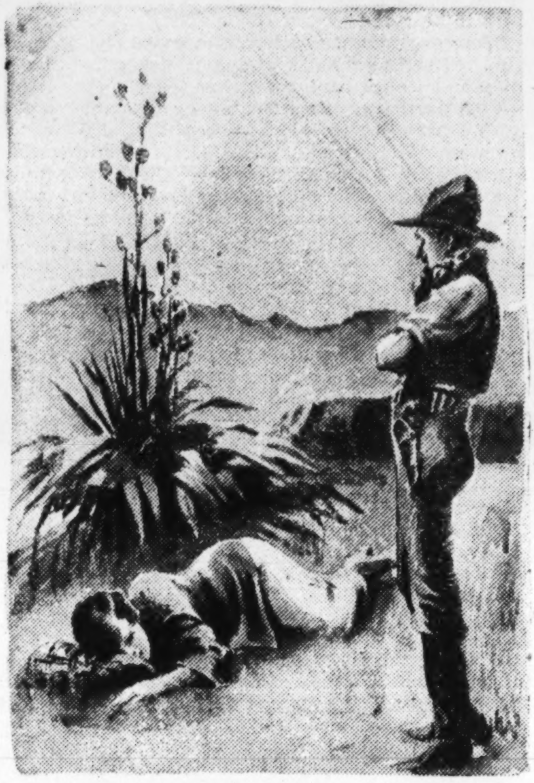
" 'You do love me!' I said.

" 'I do,' she repeated after me. 'A lot. If it was a little bit, I'd marry you, but I love you so much, I'll tell you why I can never marry you. You're the first man that ever treated me like I was white. I'm pretty bad, I know, but I am not so bad as to do you wrong.'

"I told her I didn't know what she meant, but there was nothing in the world that should come between us.

" 'I tried to tell you tonight on the boat, when you asked me to tell you how much I had enjoyed the day,' she went on, just as though I hadn't spoken, 'when you said "Honest." But I couldn't. I was afraid to tell you I couldn't do anything honest.'

"Then she told me she was a thief. She didn't try to make any excuses for herself, but when I heard her little hard luck story and knew what she'd always been up against, I didn't wonder that she stole or committed any crime. She had had a regular Cinderella stepmother, who had licked her when she was a kid because she took food from the pantry when she was hungry. The old hag called it stealing and warned the school teacher, and the other kids got hold of it and, of course, you know what it does to anyone to get a black eye. She had the name of a thief wished on her until she got to be one. She was expelled from school; put in a reformatory; ran away; stole to keep herself alive. Then they all took a hand at her—ministers, society girls, charitable associations; they gave her a bum steer and made her feel she was a hopeless outcast, so she felt more at home in the vagrant class. The only person who had ever made her feel she wanted to be straight was a Salvation Army woman, but she had gone away and no one was left to care now.



The Tall Sheriff Came and Looked Down Upon Her Small, Pale, Moonlit Face.

"I didn't let her go any further. I told her I cared and I cared all the more since I had heard her story; and that she was honest, or she wouldn't have told me about herself. What did I care what she had been or done? Her life was going to begin right then with me. I couldn't budge her. I talked and pleaded, and at last she gave in—a little. She said she'd think it over and meet me at the little park in the morning, and then she'd talk some more about it.

"So we parted until morning came. But I made up my mind that if she wouldn't consent, I'd simply kidnap her and bring her up here to Mrs. Kingdon.

"I was on hand bright and early at the park next morning, and after a while a slovenly slip of a girl came up to me and asked my name. I told her. She gave me a note and then started off like a skyrocket, but I'm some spry myself and I caught her and held her till I read the note. It was from her and she said she couldn't give me the worst of the bargain. That she was going to try hard to see if she could make good and live without stealing, and when she was sure, she'd send word to me through Mr. Reilly, and if I never heard, I could know she had failed and for me to forget her.

" 'Where is she?' I asked the girl, who was squirming like an eel.

" 'I dunno,' she said. 'She's left town.'

" 'I don't believe it!' I said.

" 'Yes, she has,' said the girl. 'She pawned all her togs—that new white dress and the swell shoes and her new suit and hat to get money to make a getaway.'

"I might as well have tried to hang on to a fish as to hold that slippery little street Arab. She broke away and ran. I was after her, but it was no use. She knew the ins and outs of the alleys like a rat, and I lost her. You see, I didn't know my girl's last name. When I asked her, she said: 'Call me Marta.' I didn't care about knowing her last name then, because I was so keen to give her my own name.

"I was just about crazy. I hunted all over the part of the city where I'd left her the first night. Then I went to see Reilly, but he didn't know who she was. I made him see what it meant to me to find her, and he promised to try his best and to forward at once any letter that came to him. If I don't hear after a while, when work gets slack so you can spare me, I'm going to Chicago and go through it with a fine-tooth comb. Reilly will help me follow every girl by the name of Marta that's ever lived there."

Kurt's eyes, full of infinite pity and regret, turned to Jo as he broke the little pause that followed.

"She is doubtless a poor little stray of a girl and luck has been against her, but, Jo, put all thoughts of marrying her away, just as she has. Wait," he hurried on, seeing the anger kindling in the lad's eyes—"if it were any other offense—but a thief! 'Once a thief, always a thief,' is the truest saying I know. Your love couldn't"——

"It didn't make any change in my feelings when she told me," said Jo, stanchly. "She could steal anything I had."

"It might not change your feelings, but it should change your intentions. Do you mean you'd marry"—— Kurt had an incredulous expression on his face.

"In a second, if she'd have me. I'd buy her everything she wanted so she wouldn't have to steal."

"But after you were married and people found out what she was, you'd be ashamed"——

"Ashamed! I'd put my little thief on a throne, and whoever dared to try to take her off would get it in the neck."

The car speeded up again. The man at the wheel saw the utter futility of further expostulation.

"I'll leave it to time and cow-punching," he thought sagely. "Time and work are the best healers, especially for the young. Preaching is of no avail."

Night came on. Jo looked up at a little lone star which was trying to make its light shine without a properly darkened background.

"That's a poor little orphan star—like her. I'll look for it every night now. I wish I hadn't blabbed to Kurt. He hasn't a nose for orange blossoms."

In the fortnight that followed, Jo worked indefatigably, but his heart and his thoughts were back in Chicago, except when now and then his eyes turned to a fertile little beauty spot valley between the hills. For here he had located an imaginary cottage—his cottage and hers. This mirage, of course, always showed a little slip of a girl standing in the doorway. To the surprise and dismay of his associates, Jo the spender became Jo the saver, that his dream might come true.

He offered no addendum to the revelation he had made to Kurt. They met often, but in ranch life discourse is not frequent, and Jo instinctively felt that his recital of love's young dream had fallen upon unsympathetic ears, while the foreman, unversed in the language of love, was mystified by the lad's silence.

Three weeks later the "man without a nose for orange blossoms," was again in town. As acting Sheriff of the county lately, Kurt had dropped in to see the jailer.

"How's business, Bender? Any new boarders?" he asked.

"Yes; a gal run in for stealing. Didn't find the goods on her; but she's a sly one, with the record of being a lifelong thief. She strayed up here from Chicago."

"What's her name?" he asked casually.

"Marta Sills."

"I wonder if it could be Jo's Marta," the acting Sheriff thought, suddenly. "She may have followed him up here."

He walked back to the hotel, trying to decide whether he should tell Jo. If she should prove to be his girl, her arrest up here should show him that his love hadn't worked the miracle he expected. Jo had been a little more quiet since his return, but he gave no signs of pining away, and maybe if nothing revived his interest, it might die a natural death. The story Jo had told him of the little waif had made a deep impression upon him, however.

"Poor little brat!" he thought. "What chance does

BOY-SCOUT CRAFT FOR CAMPERS

Where and how to pitch a tent — The science of tree chopping—How to drink water and find yourself when lost—You have to learn these things and a few others, which, far from taking the joy out of camping, do away with its accidents and troubles, and make every boy his own Indian -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-

By Prosper Buranelli.

"DON'T pitch your tent under a dead tree. It may blow over on you.

"When pitching your tent under any tree make sure that the tree has no dead limbs. A springing wind may bring a dead limb down on your head. Ugly accidents happen in this way.

"When you camp at the foot of a cliff or of a hill, see that there are no hanging rocks above. A rock, even if not quite overhead, is liable to come zig-zagging down upon you."

These seemed very sensible items of outdoor vacation advice, and they were delivered in a proper setting—beside a leaping campfire up in the woody hills, with G. S. Nesslage, chief executive for the Boy Scouts, delivering a lecture on woodcraft to a hundred encamped lads.

THE young backwoodsmen are given expert instruction in the wisdom of the wilds. They hike out, collect and study divers natural objects, ascertain the names and natures of trees, flowers, birds, bugs and fishes and follow the trail in a hard-working way. In with the estheticism of nature lore was a keen note of utility, certain pointers about practical camping and the art of subsisting in the open.

Here are a few hints for campers. They are conned from the woodcraft instruction that is given the Boy Scouts, on the authority of expert woodsmen:

CHOPPING down trees is one of the most ancient practices. But do you know how to chop down a tree properly? You don't. There is science in felling a forest giant, and tree chopping is dangerous sport. If you don't believe that, peruse the following rules which the scouts are taught to observe when they put the ax to the trunk (which they don't do unless they are in a district where tree felling is permissible):

It is important before beginning to chop to cut away all brush within reach of the ax, so that you may swing it without striking anything. Serious accidents often happen when the ax strikes even a slight twig, which is liable to deflect the blade so that it strikes the chopper's leg instead of the tree trunk.

Make your first notch half-way or more through the trunk of the tree. Then cut the second notch on the opposite side of the tree, a trifle higher than the first notch. The tree will fall in the direction of the lower notch. Thus you can fell the sapling in any direction you wish.

Do not stand directly behind a tree that is about to fall. The trunk is liable to kick—that is, to shoot backward. A kicking tree often results in fatal accidents.

Do not try to fell a tree against the wind. If you want to bring it down in the direction from which the wind is blowing wait till the wind dies down or blows from the right quarter.

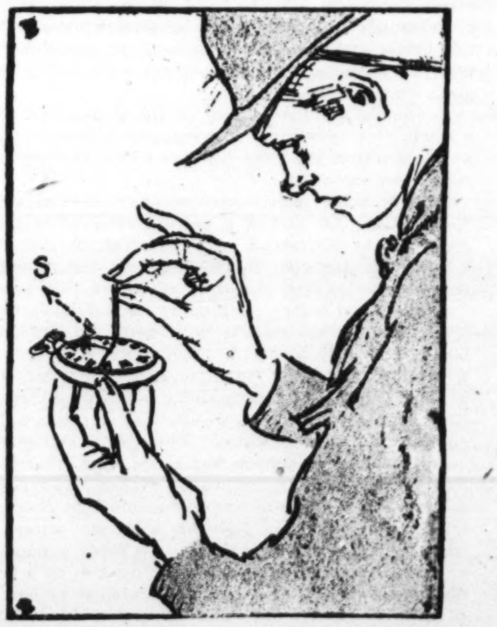
If you carry an ax on your shoulder, always have the edge outward from your neck. Otherwise you may stumble and be beheaded.

THE scouts were medicined with a great ragout of "don'ts" similar to the above. Taking the joy out of camping, I thought it was. Taking the sorrows out of camping, vowed the scout executive.

"Consider the case of getting lost," he illustrated. "Always likely, especially for the tenderfoot, and often serious. A few precautions will render this grievous camping sorrow a minor thing."

Some persons have a seemingly instinctive sense of direction, but the average cityite is not so subtly equipped. Even with the sun out, it may be difficult for him (without a compass) to find which way is north. The southward inclination of the sun often misleads.

Here is a scout wrinkle: Hold an open-faced watch horizontally, face upward. Hold any slender object, such as a match stick, upright at the edge of the watch opposite the end of the hour hand. Turn the watch around until the shadow of the stick falls along the hour hand. In this position the hour hand will point directly toward the sun. A line from the center of the watch to a point halfway between the hour hand and the figure XII on the watch, will point due south (as illustrated in the drawing herewith.)



Making the watch serve as a compass.

If you are lost it is usually of little use for you to climb a tree or an eminence to get your bearings. Looking at a piece of country from an altitude changes its appearance greatly, and you may see the very landscape over which you have come, and not recognize it. The experience is apt to intensify your bewilderment.

The best thing is to follow your trail back, an easy thing if there is snow on the ground.

Remember that on your back track you are seeing the same country that you saw coming, but from an opposite angle. It will not look the same. It is an excellent thing frequently to glance backward as you go. This will familiarize you with the appearance of the country on a back track, and will greatly aid you in retracing your steps.

The old plan of going down a stream is excellent.

Even if you are thoroughly lost, you are not in such straits as you may imagine. Keep your head. The danger is to go wildly wandering in a circle; you may thus fall exhausted in a small wood, where a couple of miles of straight walking would bring you out.

You need not starve. There are many edible roots in the woods. Also there are crawfish in plenty in nearly all our streams. They may be caught by hand, and make good food when roasted.

THE Indians are the traditional scouts, and the boys on the trail drink deeply at the fount of aboriginal wisdom. The scout movement is based largely on a back-to-the-Indian idea. The boys are led into the woods and there taught to read signs of nature, as the tomahawk bearer used to do by himself, even as a duckling swims.

What the Indian did is invested with a sacred authority, a fact which gives weight to the following items extracted from redskin traditions, as imparted to juvenile foresters:

Polluted water is always a danger. The Indian knew this full well, although his bacterial learning was primitive enough. The whooping brave had a way of purifying water from a stagnant pond or swamp by digging a hole about a foot across and about six inches deep below the water level, a few feet distant from the pond. The hole would fill with water seeping from the pond. The Indian would bail it out quickly and repeat the process several times. After about the third bailing the hole would fill with filtered water.

The aborigines had a method of protecting themselves from cramps, those well-known terrors so likely to attend upon a sudden plunge into cold water. Coming upon a bathing pool, the coppery aspirer to a trudgeon crawl, after peeling off his feathers and beads, and before entering the chilly water, vigorously rubs the pit of his stomach with the dry palms of his hands (the picture is delightfully Indianesque). This rubbing takes about a minute. Then he dashes cold water over his stomach and continues the rubbing for another minute. Then he is ready for a crampless swim.

Why John McCormack Quit the "Irish Village"

Much debated question, dating from World's Fair days, is answered by tenor in biography, just published — He was 19 then, and got first shock when he was charged $1.60 for a shave and shine near Union Station — Thought himself "mistreated" because, under contract for 10 pounds a week, he was paid $48.50 instead of $50 — Last straw came when "burlesque Irishman" appeared on program — St. Louisans say singer's memory has played him false :: ::

IT IS generally known that John McCormack, when a youth of 19, began his public career as a singer in St. Louis 15 years ago, at the Irish Village exhibit of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, in Forest Park. Since the tenor's meteoric rise to fame, a certain mystery has been created as to the circumstances under which, in 1904, he shook the dust of St. Louis from his feet. A recent investigation showed that even to this day several directors of the Irish Village remained uncertain as to the exact reason why McCormack abruptly withdrew from the engagement and returned to Ireland.

The question is brought up once more by the publication a few days ago of what McCormack describes as his "one and only authorized biography." It bears the title of "John McCormack: His Own Life Story." It was transcribed by Pierre V. R. Key, and it is published by Small, Maynard & Co.

The tenor devotes a number of pages to his St. Louis experience, and the manner of the telling reveals a rancor of feeling which the years have not eliminated. He confesses, however, that it was in this city that he proposed to and was accepted by his wife, who was Miss Lily Foley, also a singer at the Irish Village; he also states that it was in St. Louis that he received his first impetus towards a course of study in Italy.

The preface should also be made that prior to coming to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition at a salary of $48.50 a week, McCormack had sung in a Dublin choir at $125 a year, and at concerts for which he was paid from $2.50 to $5 each. He had gained a certain celebrity by winning, on May 14, 1903, the competition for tenors at the Feis Coeil, an Irish musical festival. On the same day and at the same festival Miss Foley won the contest for sopranos.

McCormack recalls that it was an April day, with the dull summer season for tenors approaching, when he was visited by "a certain Mr. Riordan, from St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A." The name is misspelled, for the man was the late James A. Reardon. He represented the owners of the Irish Village, then being built at the World's Fair, and he had been sent to Ireland to recruit a troupe of actors and singers. With the proper correction of spelling made, the tenor's account follows:

"Reardon was one of that direct type of man, who curtails whatever preliminaries another might indulge. He was willing, he stated, to furnish me transportation to St. Louis and return to Dublin, pay me 10 pounds a week and guarantee an engagement of six months. In return for all this—which loomed a fortune to me—I was to appear twice a day in the performance to be given at the Irish Village, a performance partly musical and partly theatrical. Some of it, I was to discover, was not considerate of the Irish people.

"Reardon was a plausible man and the thought of a visit to the United States anything but distasteful. Friends, whose advice I sought, influenced me to accept, which was what I was moved to do. I consequently signed the contract that Reardon prepared."

The tenor tells how he arrived in this city, "weary, dirty and in need of refreshing." "I was taken," he says, "to a boarding house, where accommodations had been reserved for me (those were not days of sufficient affluence to permit the luxury of a first-class hotel); and my first efforts lay in the direction of soap and much water."

He also needed a shave, and the account of his adventure in obtaining it parallels that of not a few complaints made to the police by strangers within our gates. He went to a barber shop near the Union Station and was presented with a bill of $1.60 for a shave and a shine. His opinion of the United States in general and of St Louis in particular there received its first shock.

At the end of the first week at the Irish Village he got another shock. "I had accepted the tender of 10 pounds a week," he explains. "Well, in my mind, a pound in English money is $5 in America's, so I naturally expected to receive $50. But what do you suppose that businesslike Reardon paid me?

"He paid me $48.50; that's what 10 pounds came to, figuring the prevailing rate of exchange. (McCormack's Boswell here interpolates the remark that the tenor hadn't recovered from his disgust and "it is probable he never will.") But I realized Reardon was within his rights. We argued the matter. When I saw his determination I knew it was no use. And that incident, with the other at the barber shop, left, I can assure you, a most unfavorable impression of America upon my unworldly mind. Of course, it was transitory. I've laughed since, yet I still have a sympathetic feeling for that lonely boy, John McCormack; only 19, in a strange land thousands of miles from home and being mistreated."

JOHN McCORMACK.

Then comes his account of why he resigned from the Irish Village troupe, after "intuition had flashed a message that there was trouble ahead."

"One afternoon," he says, "six weeks after commencing that engagement, I saw something on the stage of the theater that aroused my Irish blood in hot resentment. The Irish people are my people, and I'll not stand by and have them mistreated or slurred.

"I was ready to go on, and stood to one side in the wings, when one of the members of the company—a new member—passed me and stepped before the audience. He was made up with red sidewhiskers, a bit of putty on the end of his nose to give it a further tilt upwards, and he wore a green coat. From his mouth protruded a clay pipe. My first impulse was to follow and forcibly remove this caricature of an Irishman from the stage; prudence, however, forbade. I stood for a few moments watching his clownish antics; remained as long as my patience endured, and then I sought the management of the theater.

"I explained that this man was insulting a fine people, and requested that his 'act,' as it was called, be eliminated, or at least remodeled to truthful lines. The manager only curled his lip. 'He is amusing the people, and that's why we hired him.'

"I was furious to the point of being ready to fight. Again I demanded the removal of the offensive act, which was positively refused. Then I played what I considered my trump card 'Either he goes,' I said, 'or I go.' The manager inclined his head and replied, 'Very well.'

"I received what was due me that afternoon, and never again did I sing in that place."

Since James A. Reardon died about a year ago, McCormack's version of the matter was laid before the former's son, J. Vincent Reardon, who says that he attended virtually every performance at the Irish Village, and became well acquainted with both McCormack and Miss Foley.

"At that time," says Reardon, "McCormack was too green and raw a youth to have taken any notice of such a caricature as he speaks of; so far as I can remember, no such burlesque occurred. McCormack quit near the end of the Irish Village exhibit. I always understood it was on account of arrears in pay. The exhibit was not a paying proposition.

"Miss Foley often expressed her delight over the opportunity to make the trip to America, and McCormack, I seem to remember, was similarly delighted. At any rate, he was making more money than he ever saw in his life. His habits were eccentric; sometimes he wouldn't sing, and sometimes he had to be begged to appear. However, a current story that he was discharged is untrue."

Edward Devoy was chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Irish Village, and asserts that "it was the cleanest show on the Pike, with no crude or rough work tolerated."

"So far as I recall," he states, "there was only one exception to this rule. Through a theatrical agency a woman dancer was engaged; in her act she proceeded to kick at an undignified height. She was fired after her first performance.

"McCormack's singing delighted us all. I have never heard anyone before or since, except himself, who could sing Irish songs as he did, even then. All of a sudden he disappeared. It is news to me that he quit for the reason he states. My impression has always been that he had some throat trouble, got frightened over the climate, and rushed back to Ireland.

"The Irish Village was promoted to advance the interests of Ireland, and no burlesque at the expense of the Irish would have been endured."

John P. Leahy was a member of the board of directors of the Irish Industrial Exhibit Co., owners of the Irish Village. He, also, was surprised to learn the cause to which the tenor attributes his withdrawal from the troupe, but confirms his narrative to the extent of asserting that for a performance or so there was an objectionable "act" of the character described by McCormack.

"The management," he relates, "did engage some vaudeville performers here in America, and one of them did, as I recall it, present a gross caricature of an Irishman along the lines indicated by McCormack.

"After seeing this person perform, I went to Mr. Thomas F. Hanley, president of the exhibit, and told him that unless the objectionable feature was eliminated I would resign from the board of directors and urge the Irish societies with which I was affiliated to take effective action. Hanley assured me that the act in question had been put on without his knowledge, that he had not seen it, and that he would attend the next performance to see whether my protest was justified.

"He kept his promise, and immediately ordered the act taken off. I never knew before that this was the reason McCormack left us. My understanding was that Dr. Peter T. Cunningham, at whose house on Pine street, near Jefferson avenue, I engaged lodgings for McCormack, was responsible for his leaving. Dr. Cunningham was always dinning in his ears that he was wasting his time in St. Louis, and that he ought to throw up his engagement and go at once to Italy to prepare himself for a great career."

In his book McCormack mentions a "Dr. Cameron" whom he met in St. Louis, and who said to him: "You have a future, young man, but this climate isn't the best one for your voice. Italy is the place for you; Italy, with its balmy air and its singing teachers. You mustn't stay here, lad, the climate will ruin your delicate voice. If you can't get out of this engagement I'll give you a doctor's certificate."

Leahy is certain that the "Dr. Cameron" referred to was Dr. Cunningham, and that the name became confused in McCormack's memory after a decade and a half. The tenor states that he has never seen "Dr. Cameron" since, though trying very hard to discover his whereabouts. "I feel that I owe him a debt," he says, "and that the period of payment is long past due." Dr. Cunningham left St. Louis several years ago and is now practicing in New York, according to Leahy.

McCormack did not appear again in this city until 1912, when he was soloist with the Morning Choral Club. He returned again in 1915 for a recital at the Odeon, where his temperament was offended by youths and girls giggling in a box, by a society reporter circulating about after names, and by policemen chatting in the rear of the auditorium. He stopped in the middle of the program to reprimand the offenders from the stage, and was quoted as saying that he would never again sing in this city. However, he returned for a concert at the Coliseum last February, and the one night's receipts—for the singer who started his career here at $48.50 a week—totaled more than $12,000, while his audience numbered 9000.

her kind have? I suppose I ought to give her one. There is one person in the world who might be able to reform her, and I'd put her in that person's charge if it weren't for wrecking Jo's life."

All through the afternoon, while transacting the business that had brought him to town, his heart and his head were having a wrestling match, the former being at the disadvantage of being underworked.

"I'll go up and take a look at her," he suddenly decided. "Maybe I can tell from Jo's description whether she is his Marta or not."

On his way to the jail he was accosted by a big, jovial man.

"Don't know where I can get an extra helper, do you, Kurt? Simpson, my right hand, has gone back to Canada to enlist."

"How providential!" thought Kurt.

"Why, yes, Mr. Westcott," he replied. "We're well up with our work, and I could spare Jo Gary for a few weeks."

"Jo Gary! May heaven bless you! When can I get him?"

"Going out home now?"

"Yes, on my way."

"Stop at the ranch and take him along with you. Tell him I said to go. It'll be all right with Kingdon."

Wescott renewed his blessings on Kurt and drove on.

At the jail Kurt looked in on the latest arrival. She was sitting at a table in Bender's back office, her head bowed in her hands. There was something appealing in the drooping of her shoulders and in her shabby attire.

"Now Jo is disposed of, she shall have her chance, anyway," he decided.

Without speaking to the girl, he sought Bender and they held a brief consultation.

CHAPTER II.

"AREN'T we going to stop at all, Mr. Sheriff Man?"

A soft, plaintive note in the voice made Kurt Walters turn the brake of an old, rickety automobile and halt in the dust-white road, as he cast a sharply scrutinizing glance upon the atom of a girl who sat beside him. She was a dejected, dusty, little figure, drooping under the jolt of the jerking car and the bright rays of hills-land sunshine. She was young—in years; young, too, in looks, as Kurt saw when she raised her eyes, which were soft and almond-shaped; but old, he assumed in much that she should not have been.

She had found it a long, hard ride across the plains, and the end of her endurance had been prefaced by frequent sighs, changes of position and softly muffled exclamations, all seemingly unnoted by the man beside her, whose deep-set eyes had remained fixed on the open space ahead, his slim, brown hands gripping the wheel, his lean, sinewy body bending slightly forward.

His tenseness relaxed; a startled, remorseful look came into his eyes as he saw two tears coursing down her cheeks. They were unmistakably real tears—though, as he was well aware, they came from physical causes alone. Still, they penetrated the armor of unconcern with which he had girded himself.

"What for?" he asked, curtly.

"What for!" she echoed, her mouth quivering into pathetic droops. "For rest, of course. You may be used to this kind of locomotion, but I'm not very well upholstered, and I'm shaken to bits. Fact is, I'm just all pegged out, old man. Have a heart, and stop for repairs. What's your rush, anyway? I can't get loose hereabouts, and I haven't anywhere to go, anyhow. Didn't mind getting 'took' at all, at all. How many more miles is it to the end of your trail? This is a trail, isn't it?"

"A great many miles," he replied, "and it was on your account more than any other that I was hurrying to get to the"——

"Jail," she answered supinely, as he hesitated.

"No," he said, grimly. "I was going to take you home—for tonight, anyway."

"Home! Oh, how you startle me! I didn't know there was any of those home-stuff places left except in the movies. I never was much stuck on home, so you needn't be afraid to call it 'jail' for fear of hurting my feelings."

"You can't work on my sympathy that way," he said, coldly.

"Dear me!" she replied, with a silly, little giggle. "I gave up trying to work the sympathy racket long ago. Everyone's too smart nowadays. Honest, I've no longings for home. I feel sorry for anyone who's tied down to one. Why don't you kick over the traces and come off your trail and see what's on the other side of your hills? I'd hate to take root here. Say, Mr. Sheriff Man, you look a good sort, even if you have played you were deaf and dumb for the whole of this awful ride. Let's sidetrack the trail and go—home—by moonlight."

His eyes remained rigid and relentless, but there was a slight twitching of his strongest feature, the wide, mobile mouth.

He looked at his watch.

"We can wait for a few minutes," he said, in a matter of fact voice.

"Please may I get out and stretch?" she asked pleadingly.

Taking silence for consent, she climbed out of the car.

"Do you want a drink?" he asked, as he poured some water from an improvised Thermos bottle into a traveling cup.

"Thanks for those first kind words," she exclaimed, taking the cup from him and drinking eagerly.

"Why didn't you say you were thirsty?" he asked in a resentful tone, without looking at her. He had, in fact, studiously refrained from looking at her throughout the journey.

"I'm not used to asking for anything," she answered with a chuckle. "I take what comes my way. 'Taking' is your job, too, isn't it?"

"To hell with my job!" he broke out fiercely. "I'd never have taken it if I knew it meant this."

"It's your own fault," she retorted. "It wouldn't have been 'this' if you hadn't been so grouchy. We could have had a chummy little gabfest, if you hadn't been bunging holes in the landscape with your lamps all the way."

He made no response, but began to examine the workings of his car.

"Does the county furnish it to you?" she asked. "It doesn't seem as if you'd pick out anything like this. Was it 'made in America?' Funny outfit for a cowboy country, anyhow."

"Get in," he commanded curtly. "We must be away."

"Oh, please, not yet," she implored. "It's so awful hot, and I won't have all this outdoors for a long time, I suppose. I see there's a tidy little bit of shade yonder. Let's go there and rest a while. I'll be good; honest, I will, and when I get rested, you can hit a faster gait to even up. I get tired just the same as honest folks do. Come, now, won't you?"

In a flash she had taken advantage of this oasis of shade that beckoned enticingly to the passerby.

He followed reluctantly.

"This is heaven let loose," she said, lolling luxuriously against the trunk of a tree. "You're the only nice Sheriff man that ever run me in."

He sat down near her and looked gloomily ahead.

"Cheer up!" she urged, after a short silence. "It may not be so bad. Anyone would think you were the prisoner instead of poor little me."

"I wish I were," he said shortly.

She looked at him curiously.

"Say, what's eating you, anyway? If you hate your job so, what did you take it for?"

"It was forced on me. I'm only sworn in as acting Sheriff for the county until the Sheriff returns."

"How long you been 'it'?"

"Two weeks. You're my second—arrest."

"Who was the first?"

"So Long Sam."

She sat upright.

"Are you the man who caught So Long Sam? Everyone has been afraid to tackle him. I'd never have thought it of you!"

"Why?" he asked curiously, not proof against the masculine enjoyment of hearing himself analyzed, in spite of his reluctance to talk to her. "Do I seem such a weakling I couldn't take one man?"

"No; you look like you'd take a red-hot stove if you wanted to; but they said—Say, is your maiden name 'Kurt'? No! It can't be."

"Why not?"

"Because, they called the man who took So Long Sam 'Kind Kurt.' You haven't been over-kind to me till just lately. Whirling me over sands in that awful foreshortened car."

"It must be better," he said, dryly, "than the kind you've been used to."

"You mean the jail jitney. Do you know, they never put me in one. Always conveyed me other ways. Weren't so bad to me, either. I guess maybe your heart is in the right place or you wouldn't have let me rest and given me the drink, even if you did wait till the eleventh hour. Can't you look pleasant like you were going to sit for a picture to give to your best girl instead of posing for 'Just before the battle, mother'? You look so sorry you came."

"I am," he said, angrily. "I guess 'Kind Kurt' is a blankety blank fool, as some people say. I've been a lot kinder to you than you know. When I heard of your case and Bender pointed you out to me and said he'd got you locked up, I thought you were one of the many young city girls who go wrong because they have no chance to know better. The kind bred in slums, ignorant, ill-fed—the kind who never had a fair show. So I resolved that you should have one. Bender wanted you out of town, with the surety that you would never come back.

"I felt sorry for you. I offered to take you off his hands and bring you out here among the hills, where the best woman in the world would teach you to want to be honest. Do you suppose I'd have done it if I'd known the kind you are—a bright, smart brat, who is bad because she wants to be, and boasts of it? There is no hope for your kind."

It was the longest speech the acting Sheriff had ever made. He had been scarcely conscious that he was talking, but was simply voicing what had been in his thoughts for the last half-hour.

"How old is this 'best woman in the world'?" asked the girl, seemingly unconcerned in his summing up of her case. "Is she your sweetheart or your wife? If she is either one, you'd better take me back to Bender or spill me out on the plains here. She won't be real glad to try to reform a young, good-looking girl like me. I am good looking, honest, if I was slicked up a little."

He looked away, an angry frown on his lean, strong face. She gazed at him curiously for a moment and then laid a slim, brown hand on his arm.

"Listen here, Kurt," she said. "You were right in what you thought about me never having had a fair show. Everything, everyone, including myself, seems to have been against me. I was born with 'taking ways.' I couldn't seem to live them down. Lately things have been going wrong awfully fast. I've been sick and no one has acted as if I were human up to a short time ago. I didn't know that was why you took me from Bender's jail. Honest, I'm not so bad as I talk."

He looked at her skeptically. Her eyes, now turned from him, were soft, feminine and without guile. He wouldn't let himself be hoodwinked.

"No; there's no excuse for you," he declared, emphatically. "You are educated. You could have earned an honest living. You didn't have to steal."

"No;" she said slowly and thoughtfully, "I didn't have to."

"Then why do you? Bender told me you had a life-long record of pilfering."

"Life-long! Kind Kurt, I am young—only 20."

"He said you'd been given a chance over and over again, but that you were hopeless. I—think you are."

"I think so, too," she acknowledged, with a little giggle that brought back his scowl. "You've got a white elephant on your hands, Kurt. What are you going to do with me?"

"There's only one thing I can do, now," he said, glumly. "Carry out a bad bargain. I'll see it through."

"Oh, Mr. Britling!" she murmured, sotto voce.

"What did you say?"

"Nothing. Traveling libraries evidently don't hit this trail. What is it the trail to, anyway? Your house?"

"To Top Hill Tavern."

"Gee! That sounds good. A tavern! I hope it's tiptop as well as tophill. How did you come to build a hotel way off here? Summer boarders? Will there be dances?"

"Top Hill Tavern," he said, coldly, "is the name of a ranch—not mine. The owners live there."

"And does she, 'the best woman in the world,' live there?"

"We must start now," he said, rising abruptly and leading the way to the car.

"I should think," remarked the girl casually after his fourth ineffectual effort to start the engine, "that if she owns a ranch she might buy a better buzz wagon than this."

He made no reply, but renewed his futile attempts at starting, muttering words softly the while.

"Don't be sore, Kurt. I can't help it because your old ark won't budge. I didn't steal anything off it. Wouldn't it be fierce if you were marooned on the trail with a thief who has a lifelong record!"

He came around the car and stood beside her. His face was flushed. His eyes, of the deep-set, somber kind, that grow larger and come to the surface only when strongly moved, burned with the light of anger.

"Did anyone ever try whipping you, I wonder?"

"Sure," she said, cheerfully. "I was brought up on whippings, by a—stepmother. But do you feel that way toward me? You look like a man who might strike a woman under certain provocation, perhaps; but not like one who would hit a little girl like me. If you won't look so cross, I'll tell you why your 'mobile won't move."

He made no reply, but turned to the brake.

"Say, 'bo," she continued tantalizingly, "whilst you are a-lookin', just cast your lamps into the gasoline tank. That man who filled it didn't put a widow's mite in."

Unbelievingly he followed this lead.

"Not a drop, damn it!"

"The last straw with you, isn't it? I'm not to blame, though. If you think I stole your gasoline, just search me. How far are we from your tiptop tavern?"

"Twenty miles. I suppose you couldn't walk it," he said, doubtfully.

"Me? In these?" she exclaimed, thrusting forth a foot illy and most inadequately shod. "But you can walk on."

"No," he refused. "You don't put one over on me in that way."

THE CASTOFF

By CHARLES E. VAN LOAN

HE IS not playing baseball now; occasionally the name of G. Audubon Spencer appears in magazines devoted to scientific pursuits, and he has been known to address women's clubs upon protective coloring as applied to lepidoptera. G. Audubon Spencer has a small but highly interested following; Slug Hardy was frantically worshiped by a few hundred thousand perspiring gentlemen who wouldn't know what lepidoptera meant and wouldn't care very much either. Yet G. Audubon and Slug are one and the same person.

He called himself Hardy when he decided to become a profesional baseball player, and he became a professional baseball player because he needed the money. There was a time when he played the national game for love. He began as the star pitcher of a high-school nine, and when he was 17 years of age he was whitewashing semi-pro organizations and letting real leaguers down with two and three hits. Then he went to a university, where he made baseball history and was in a fair way to graduate with some letters after his name when Spencer senior took it into his head to die. He left a large family and a larger mortgage, and young G. Audubon packed his traps and disappeared, to turn up a thousand miles away as Slug Hardy, the star pitcher of a professional team.

He was a sensation for two seasons, partly because he could wrap a ball around a batter's neck and partly because he could hit at a .340 clip from one end of the season to the other, and walloping pitchers are rare birds.

At 20 Hardy was a veteran pitcher and beginning to feel the effect of too much work. He would have been an exploded phenomenon at 21 but for his foresight. He knew that there comes a time to every pitcher when the strongest wing weakens and the former star is left out on the hill with nothing but a glove and a prayer, so he prepared himself for a new position.

Day after day "Dusty" Moles, his chum, put in his square time hitting up "fungoes" to the outfield, and Hardy galloped after them. When Slug was ready to stop pitching he was a seasoned outfielder, and it was as an outfielder that he joined the Blue Sox and entered the big league.

There was only one thing the matter with Slug. He was born without a sense of humor. On the other hand, John Henry Patrick Callahan, "Jaggs" Callahan of blessed memory, had too much humor. That was where the trouble started.

Jaggs was not the worst fellow in the world, and not the best, either. His humor, largely of the slap-stick variety, often palled upon his teammates, but they endured him because he could pitch a baseball in seven different languages. His best joke was the one he saved up for the whiskered yokels at country stations. When the train stopped, Jaggs would spy out a bucolic loafer with long whiskers and beckon him to approach, engaging him in close conversation about the town and the price of real estate. Still talking when the train began to move, Jaggs would lean far out of the window, entangle his iron fingers in the rustic's beard and hold on for dear life. The sight of the outraged citizen, racing along and screaming with pain and rage, was one which never failed to fill Jaggs with pleasure. Sometimes the pitcher lost his grip. Sometimes the yokel lost his lace curtain, but whatever happened, it was a very fine joke.

The first encounter between Jaggs and Hardy shows what a small thing may put a ball player "in wrong" with his associates. When a player begins by getting "in bad" he nearly always gets out worse. Hardy got out worse.

Jaggs selected the big, red-faced, white-eyebrowed stranger as the softest thing among the recruits, and scraped an acquaintance with him. One evening on the hotel porch at the training camp, Jaggs told his famous story of the goat and the tin can. Hardy, silent and thoughtful by nature, overlooked the improbability of the incident, and concerned himself solely with the baseball problem involved.

"Y'see, it was like this," said Jaggs. "I was playin' right field that day, an' this blame' goat kept edgin' in an' edgin' in—you know how them country fair ball grounds are; no fences or nothin'—and he got in my way. I chased him, an' he picked up the can he was nibblin' at and started to run toward the diamond. Just then Maginniss hits a line drive right down over first, an' the ball hit square in the can an' stuck! Maginniss tried to make a home run, but I got him."

"Ball rolled out?" suggested Hardy.

"Nope," said Jaggs. "Had to git it out with a can opener afterward. I just picked up Mister Goat, run to the home plate, an' touched the goat's foot to the rubber. Zing! The umps allows as how Maginniss is out!"

There was a deep silence, and then Hardy broke into speech.

"Why, the rule says"——

That settled it. The new man was a farmer or worse. Hardy was amazed when he saw the papers from the home town. The war correspondents seized upon the incident of the goat and the tin can, and made it good for anywhere from two sticks to a whole column. Hardy was angry. He reproved one of the reporters.

"But I didn't say all that stuff!" he persisted. "It makes me—well, ridiculous. It isn't fair!"

Then that reporter told his fellow workers that the new outfielder was a rube who objected to press notices and had threatened to punch the head of any correspondent who took his name lightly between the bars of his typewriter.

Hardy was already "in bad" with several members of the team; he was now "in bad" with the press.

"If he drops dead on the field, we'll print 10 lines about him," said the press gentlemen. "Otherwise, nix."

So it happened that all the home fans knew about Hardy was the incident of the goat and the tin can. It was not an auspicious introduction.

The season opened on the home grounds, and Hardy, playing a sun field to which he was unaccustomed, dropped a fly ball which he should have "caught in his teeth," as Callahan reminded him, and the error lost the game. This was unfortunate, for a certain clique of leather-lunged rooters on the right-field bleachers decided that the new man would not do.

If a dozen baseball fans select a fixed idea and their voices hold out, they can do almost anything. By the end of the first game 200 "regulars" were after the new rightfielder, and it pleased them to see that Hardy resented their efforts.

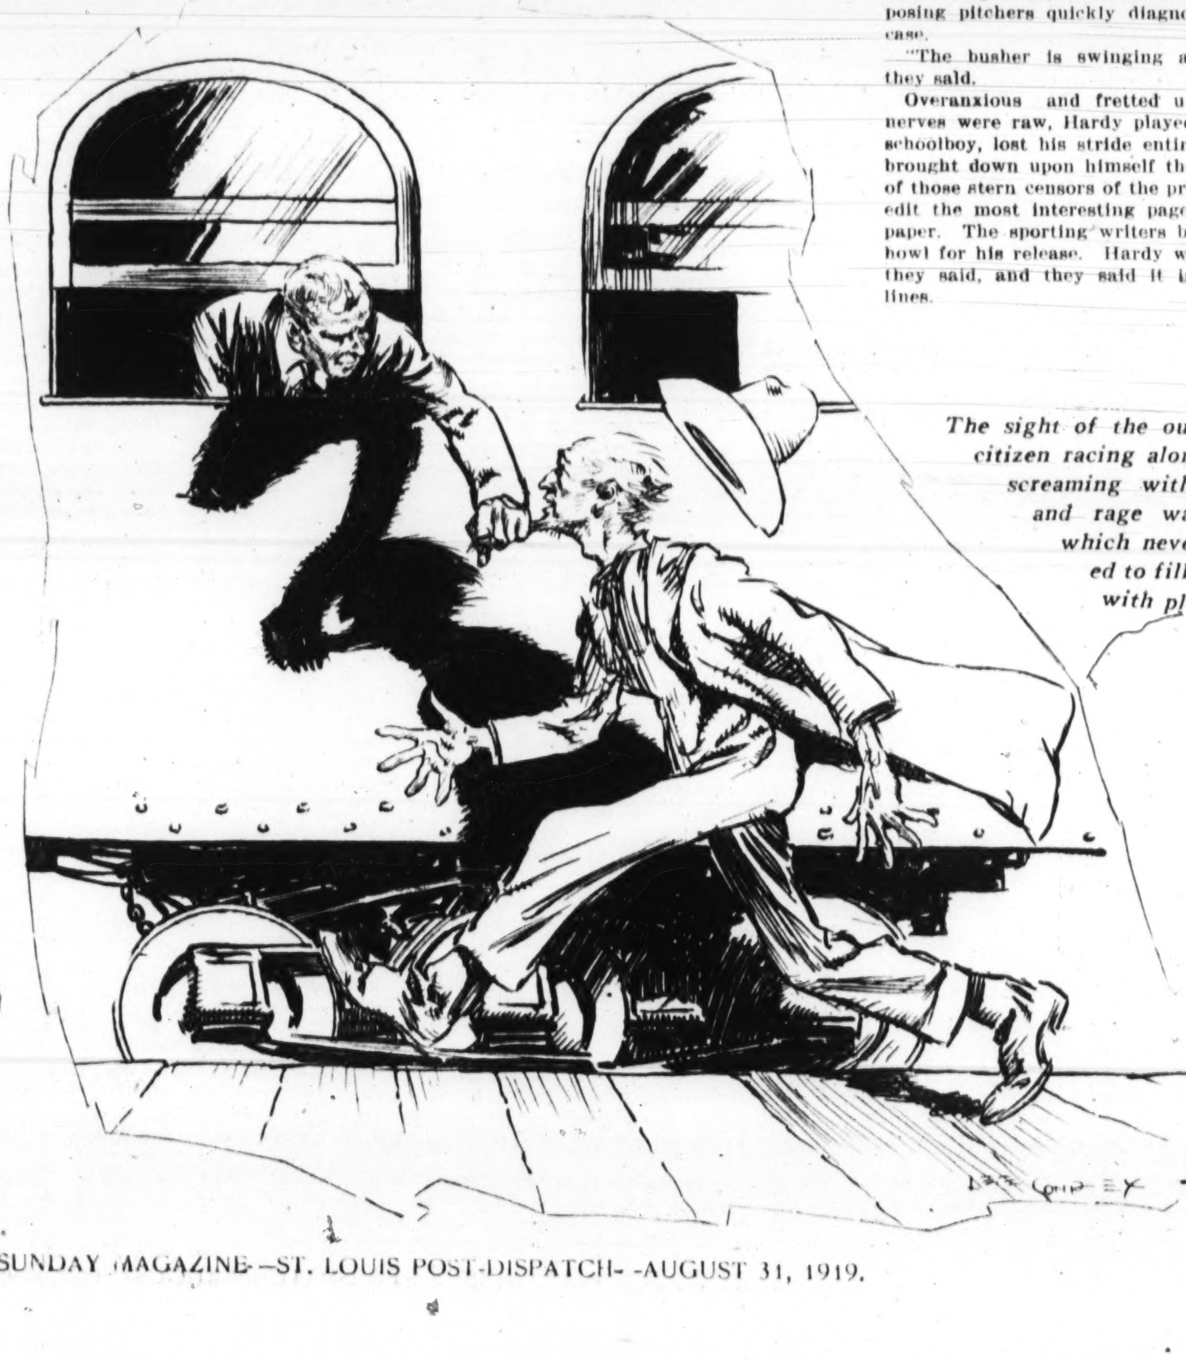
Any ballplayer knows what it means to have enemies in the home town. He expects to get the worst of it on the road, but when he performs at home he expects loyal support and encouragement. One hundred hostile rooters in the home town can hound a player out of the club, and it has happened in almost every city in the league, and will happen again so long as performers are susceptible to outside influence.

The constant chorus of "Tin can! Tin can!" got on Hardy's nerves and worried him. Every time the ball was hit in his direction there went up a sarcastic chorus. The boy was unused to this sort of treatment. In the town where he had previously played he had been somewhat of a local deity. A bad cigar had been named after him, and small boys followed him about the streets. He had never been a grandstander, but it is one thing to play ball before a friendly crowd and quite another to do one's best when that best brings only jeers and abuse.

Hardy began to make inexcusable errors. He mislaid his batting eye, and swung wildly at "bad ones." Opposing pitchers quickly diagnosed his case.

"The busher is swinging at 'em," they said.

Overanxious and fretted until his nerves were raw, Hardy played like a schoolboy, lost his stride entirely and brought down upon himself the wrath of those stern censors of the press who edit the most interesting page of the paper. The sporting writers began to howl for his release. Hardy won't do, they said, and they said it in headlines.



The sight of the outraged citizen racing along and screaming with pain and rage was one which never failed to fill Jaggs with pleasure.

BIG BUSINESS GOES IN FOR MUSIC AS AN AID IN SPEEDING UP INDUSTRY

Once regarded as scornful of art, it turns esthetic, not, it is said, so much to elevate the soul as to add to the output — How the "sweet concord of sounds" is helping to make the wheels go round — Increases efficiency, its exponents say, and is expected to develop the popular taste -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

MUSIC is departing from its ancient honors for divine uselessness. The concord of sweet sounds is being welcomed into places traditionally scornful of art. Business is turning esthetic, not through any sudden elevation of soul, but through a dawning idea that the cult of beauty makes business more busy.

This the National Bureau for the Advancement of Music is prepared to prove, among other ways, by a voluminous book of clippings from all parts of the country. The headlines run something like this: "Dallas (Tex.) Department Store Inaugurates Music for Efficiency," "Large Connecticut Factory Utilizes Classical Tunes to Increase Production," "Verdi and Bizet Speed Up Typists in New York Office." There are scores of newspaper cuttings, and it is evident that a large movement is under way. At the first impression it all sounds pretty fantastic, but then you get the historical sense of it, and it seems queer that music is just beginning as a factor in modern industry, since music has been utilized to aid labor from the oldest times.

It is a business college, not an art institute, but the merry classical strains of the overture to Mozart's "Magic Flute" pervade the room from the sonorous mouth of a phonograph. As a novel counterpoint to Mozart's melodies is the buzzing, clicking of a score or two of typewriters. The class in typewriting is under way. The lively drumming rhythm of the music is utilized to speed the typists up. Some of the New York business schools have adopted the idea, and regularly teach typewriting to music.

Work has lagged in the cloak and suit establishment. It is a warm, sluggish day. Cutters and operators have lost their ginger. The wise factory superintendent turns on the victrola. The Toreador song from "Carmen" starts its swinging way. The workers are livened up. Their working notions tend to fall in with the vigorous pulse of the music. Their blood pressure is heightened, their heart beats quickened. They are stimulated. The tired feeling vanishes.

It sounds novel, doesn't it—but just consult your memory.

For ages the sailor has lent vigor to his tugs at the mainsail by his wild chorused rhythms. The song was especially adapted in its phrases and meter to spur the recurring moments of effort.

The Volga Boatmen's Song has been very popular in these parts. What is it save the melody that aids the Russian at the oars? The labors of the big buck cotton handlers at the docks of Galveston, New Orleans or Mobile have always progressed to old-time "coon songs." The armies of slaves that built the pyramids performed their unbelievable tasks to songs. The galley slaves that sent the swift pirate corsairs cutting through the water chanted in chorus to lighten and speed their dreadful toil. Music is traditional as an aid to industry.

A series of experiments by Drs. Hyde and Scalpino of Lawrence, Kan., were reported some months ago. These experiments showed that music has a profound influence upon the internal mechanism of the body. The heart rate was affected, also the blood pressure, and various other changes occurred under the influence of different sorts of music. Only a few compositions were tried; each showed a different picture of changes. It would seem that each piece of music would register a different picture, from which it might afterward be identified.

The brilliant, vigorous pieces effected the greatest stimulation, as was to be expected. They apparently would be the ones adapted to quicken work. But other tonal moods might have their place. Thought stimulation, for instance, would very likely be best effected by quieter and deeper strains. That thought work is aided by music is known. Literary workers, for instance, have found that they could ravel out their ideas with added zest while under the influence of music.

The thing to avoid in any use of music to aid work would be distraction. Its tune might well take the workers' mind off their work. But in manual trades, the skilled man performs his work actions automatically, and would speed up unconsciously, and in any case the solution would be to select the proper mood of music for the thing demanded of it.

The present movement comes on the inspiration of a recent large demonstration of the practical usefulness of music—the war. Soldiers have always marched to songs, and many a tide of battle has been turned by forced marches made with the exhilaration of a good tune. During America's war preparations the most extensive use was made of camp music. Many organizations were formed to carry on the work of keeping up the morale of the training troops, and these organizations now have turned their arts to the uses of peace. The idea is still largely one of morale.

The large industries all over the country are organizing choruses and bands to summon music's spell during lunch hours and short recesses. The efficiency of business is dependent upon the state of mind of its employes. Music is powerful for keying up. It will not seem strange to anyone that a few minutes' rest from high-pressure work, with a snatch of bright music, will send the workers off on to the next spell of work with renewed spirit.

The mellowing effect of compositions of beautiful sounds upon the human organism has long been noticed. Music in industry will engender a better feeling all around, will foster friendliness and geniality. Men of large affairs look to industrial music to ease industrial unrest and bring a great spirit of conciliation in the relations between employers and employed.

Many big firms are arranging for evening symphony orchestra concerts for their employes. Diversion is necessary, and the kind of diversion that employes indulge in during the evening affects shop work in the morning. An evening of music is perfect for the next morning.

Prohibition has come. The cheerful cup is largely absent. The intoxication of tone has many of the joys of wine, and music is scheduled to aid in filling the alcoholic gap.

Take the morning's morning, for instance. Try a tonal eye opener. Connect the alarm clock with the phonograph and experience the exquisite luxury, the positively entrancing pleasure of being awakened to the sound of music. It will not merely furnish a delightful sensation, but will brace you up and set you going without the usual half-hour of morning torpidity. Music is a famous awakener. In the old legend, Orpheus' song awakened the very stones.

Business concerns realize that it takes their forces half an hour or more to get going in the morning. The day's first hour is its most unproductive one. Properly chosen music to begin the shop day with will key things up immediately.

The very largest and solidest commercial enterprises are going in for music. To sense the hold that the movement has taken, you have only to glimpse the names of the concerns that have already formed orchestras, bands, choruses and other means of delectation of sounds. Among them are firms such as Armour & Co., Swift & Co., Marshall Field & Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., the Chevrolet Automobile Co., the Dodge Bros. Co., the John Wanamaker stores, both of Philadelphia and New York; the Morse Dry Dock and Repair Co. of Brooklyn and the Submarine Boat Corporation of Newark.

With such big interests behind the movement it is certain to spread, and it is important to observe that good music will prove infinitely more valuable for industrial purposes than bad music. It is characteristic of good music that it brings about the greater measure of organic effect. Your jazz lover is never so moved by his jazz as is the concert goer by the great, singing Beethoven strains. It will be a matter of business sense for employers to break their employes into the sort of music that moves people most, that is to say, good music.

We can almost see the musical salvation of America in the application of the tonal art to industry. Certainly it is bound to have a profound effect in the way of popularizing high music. There is a large item of cultural progress in the circumstance that American business has approached the fact that music makes for the spirit of efficiency. And one of the finest scientific developments at hand is the determination of the precise effects on body and on mind of the various moods of music, and how these effects can be best applied to industry.

Any propaganda seeking to bring music closer to the people, whether it is for the sake of the art itself or for the more material purpose of speeding up the workers and thereby stimulating production, will be watched eagerly by the National Association of Music Merchants, which had its national convention in Chicago last June. That gathering pledged itself to forthwith inaugurate a nation-wide campaign to stimulate an interest in music of all kinds, whether it be vocal or instrumental, classic or otherwise. It went further and agreed to raise a fund of $100,000 to aid in the movement to bring the people and music on more intimate terms, and to create a fondness for its enticing charms in quarters that had experienced little of its melody and soothing influence in the past. To finance the missionary work, the music men agreed to pay 25 cents into the fund out of the price received for each piano sold within the next year. As these sales run in the neighborhood of 400,000 annually, the guarantee will be easily raised.

At the Chicago meeting steps were also undertaken to hold a record exhibition of musical instruments at the next convention, to be held in New York next February, at the close of the automobile show. The dealers also agreed to support every movement launched to popularize music by having it treated in the curricula of the schools the same as other important studies, for which merits are provided. The convention took the view that it was up to the United States, in view of the disturbed conditions in Europe, to see that the welfare of music was safeguarded until the foreign countries were in a position economically to do their part. To create a demand for music was the dealers' sentiment.

Wise old Ben Daly, manager of the club and team captain as well, a great infielder in spite of a dash of gray over his temples, tried to put some heart into the recruit.

"You've let the knockers get you going," he said. "Didn't they chase Dillon out of Louisville three years ago, and didn't he play three times as well as soon as he struck a new town? There wasn't anything the matter with Dillon only they got his goat and they kept it. There isn't anything the matter with you, either. You'll hit your stride one of these days, and show these flannel-mouths what a regular outfielder looks like. Buck up, kid."

Hardy shook his head.

"I don't know what's the matter with me. I go up there to hit, and I can't see a ball any more."

"You only think so," soothed Daly. "Don't you think I know a sweet hitter when I see one? Why, I never saw a man show up better in spring training! You're just worried, that's all that ails you. Forget it! You'll get started one of these days."

"Another Rank Counterfeit!" the morning papers howled a few days later.

"These fellows don't want me in this town," said Hardy to the manager. "They never did want me. They've been knocking me from the start. If it hadn't been for that tin-can thing"—and Hardy broke off miserably.

"Tell me the truth," he said. "Are these fellows right about me? Am I too slow for this company?"

Daly swore heartily.

"You've slumped, that's all. If you could only get going once you wouldn't have any trouble. Quit reading the papers, put some cotton in your ears when you get out there, and play some baseball."

Hardy tried to follow the directions, but met with flat failure. At the end of the first month he was hitting below .140, and the fire had been turned on Daly. Day after day he was hammered for carrying a counterfeit on the pay roll. The manager stood it for two weeks more, and then he did something which he expected to regret.

When the arrangements were completed he walked into Hardy's room at the hotel just as the young man was going to bed.

"You know Catterson?" he asked. "Well, he wants to trade me that lopsided, splayfooted outfielder Harmon for you. The Reds have been a tailend team for the last four years, but it's a good town to play in, and Catterson treats his men well. If I didn't like you personally I'd probably send you out to some minor league, but I've got a notion that you'll get into your stride one of these days and—well, what do you say?"

"Anywhere to get away from here," said Hardy bitterly. "I won't forget how decent you have been about this thing, Ben. Most managers would have kicked me out a month ago. If I can ever do anything for you"——

"Aw, shut up!" said Daly gruffly. "Only, when you get going right, don't bust up too many games for us, that's all!"

Hardy tried to smile at the pleasantry, but his heart was too full for words. He had been expecting his release.

Catterson, a square-jawed, red-headed man, met Hardy at the train.

"Hello, youngster!" said he. "Glad to see you. First time I ever skinned Ben Daly in a trade in my life."

"The fellow you traded must have been pretty bad," said Hardy.

"No," said Catterson, grinning. "He was all right from the head up and from the feet down. Feel like going right in this afternoon?"

The Reds gave Hardy a warm welcome. His old chum, Moles, was the shortstop of the club, and he had been doing a little advance work for the recruit. Hardy, dispirited and doubtful of his own ability, scented a new atmosphere as soon as he entered the clubhouse at the park. It was like walking into the heart of a big happy family. By the time he was ready for the field he felt better acquainted with the Reds than he had ever been with the Blue Sox. The Reds had no foolish pride; they had been walloped so hard and so often that they had learned to be philosophical about it. Baseball was more or less of a joke to them and to the whole town.

Hardy was dropped into sixth position in the batting order, and it happened that when he went to bat for the first time two men were on the bases, and the local fans were roaring for a hit.

"Come on, Blondie!" they yelled. "Come on, boy, and give us a hit!"

The welcome warmed the newcomer's heart. "Lightning Bug" Martin, the opposing pitcher, had worked against Hardy before, and held no high opinion of him. He "grooved" the first ball, and Hardy "pulled" it down the first-base line like a flash of light. It was a cracking double, and it drove a brace of runs to the bench, and little Moles screamed himself hoarse.

"Didn't I tell you this bird was a ball player?" he said. "Oh, I guess he can't hit nor nothing! No-o-o! He's perfectly miserable, he is!"

Catterson grinned and looked up in the air. He was wondering what Ben Daly would say when he discovered that the Red discard was a man with a solid ivory skull, mahogany legs and a glass arm.

The next morning the Blue Sox, on tour, examined the box scores over the cantaloupes and coffee.

"Sweet Jemima!" ejaculated Jaggs Callahan. "What do you know about this? The goat gets three hits yesterday off Martin! Hey! You s'pose that stiff was laying down on us?"

Daly grunted sarcastically.

"Well," said Jaggs, "I'll bet he don't get three hits in another game this season! He was playing better'n he knew how yesterday. Just a streak of luck."

It proved to be a long streak, and Jaggs changed his mind when the Blue Sox, swinging around the big circle, dropped in for four games with the meek and lowly Reds. Jaggs pitched the opening game of the series, and Hardy, who had been moved up into the "clean-up" position, buzzed a line drive between Jaggs' shoulder and ear for a neat single.

"Hey, you discard!" roared Jaggs. "What you tryin' do do? Murder somebody?"

Hardy, dodging about off first base, answered with a bellow which amazed every man on the Blue team.

"Get that one in your tin can!" he shouted. "The next time I'm going to hit you in the eye!"

Ben Daly, playing second base, shook his head.

"Full of pepper," he thought to himself. "I ought 'a' kept him, doggone my fool soul!"

The Reds actually broke even on the series, thanks to the heavy stick work of the castoff. A triple with bases full sewed up the last game of the series, and Callahan was the victim. Even "Old Folks," the negro masseur who traveled with the Blue Sox, commented upon the startling change in Hardy's playing.

"Mist' Callahan," said Old Folks, while he was working on what Jaggs referred to as "the old soup bone," the same being the salary arm, "huccome Mist' Hardy to git that triple when the bases wuz densely populated? Accident, mebbe?"

Jaggs grunted and turned over on the slab. Hardy had made five hits off him in two games, which is getting out of accident and into design.

The season progressed, and the happy-go-lucky Reds fought their way to the head of the second division. They made no secret of the fact that they were playing better than they knew how, and first-division teams found them an unexpected stumbling block. Hardy's terrific hitting was attracting attention, and it began to be broadly hinted that for once Benjamin Franklin Daly had made a mistake. The manager smiled grimly when the papers in his own town began to censure him lightly for allowing such a "sweet hitter" to escape.

As for the Blue Sox, they had some trouble in recognizing Hardy for the same man they had once tormented. They roared at him, and reminded him of the goat and the tin can, but Hardy only laughed at them with his thumb at his nose. He was noisy, aggressive, and almost cocky.

"Didn't I say that fellow would make trouble if he ever got into his stride?" asked Daly.

Down the home stretch they went to the close of the season. The Blue Sox were tied up in a driving finish with their old enemies, the Grays. By taking their last three games the Blue Sox could win the pennant, even if the Grays won their last two, which seemed likely, as no pitchers seemed to be able to withstand the terrific onslaught of the heavy end of the Gray batting order.

Curled up in the corner of a Pullman smoking compartment, Hardy read the sporting pages and turned the situation over in his mind. It was pretty tough luck, he thought, to have to play against a man like Ben Daly in such a crisis. One more game won meant nothing to the Reds. One game lost meant everything to Ben Daly. A pennant meant a bonus for the manager, besides a fat slice of the post-season profits.

Catterson loafed into the smoking compartment, and cast an eye over the headlines of Hardy's paper.

"I wish it was the Grays we had to play," said Catterson. "I like Ben Daly, and I want to see him win out, but—we've got to spill the beans for him if we can. You remember what an awful belch there was two years ago when they said the Pinks laid down to let the Grays win? I never believed there was a word of truth in that, but the scores made it look bad. Cost the Pinks a barrel of money the next season, though. Jeerusalem! I wish it was any man but Daly!"

Hardy looked at the flying landscape, one knee doubled up and his bony shin in his powerful hands. Catterson had been putting his thought into words.

"My own brother couldn't have been whiter to me," said the boy at last. "I owe him a lot; more than I can ever repay, but—oh, thunder! You know what I mean. 'I'll do the right thing, if it breaks a leg!"

"Good stuff!" said Catterson. "I hope we drop these three games, but they've got a baseball team to beat. None of that scandal stuff in mine!"

This was the situation when the final series opened on the Blue Sox field.

On the first day the Sox alighted upon Cunningham, the Reds' spitball artist, and hammered him for four runs in the opening inning. The hits were nearly all clean drives. A thousand miles away the Grays were doing the same thing to their opponents.

On the second day the Blue Sox, still hitting like fiends, drove two Red pitchers to the bench, winning by a score of 11 to 3. The Grays won their last game by a shut-out score. It was all up to the final game.

Catterson, always an early riser, picked up the morning papers at breakfast on the third day, and thereby ruined his appetite. On every sporting page he found an article telegraphed from his home town. It began:

"Are the Reds throwing the pennant to Daly?"

The afternoon newspaper men followed hard on the trail. They wanted to know what Manager Catterson had to say, and when he said what was in his mind they found that they could not print it.

"This article mentions Hardy," said one of the reporters. "He's known to be very friendly with Ben Daly, and that may have given rise"——

Catterson exploded with a mighty roar.

"Something will give you a rise in about three seconds!" he said. "It will be this No. 13 boot of mine! Now, get out of here!"

Naturally, that young man, in a two-column article, pointed out that Catterson flew into a rage when questioned about the statement from his own town. The Hardy incident drew a subhead, and his friendship with Daly was mentioned.

It was an angry team which trotted out for warming-up practice before the last game of the season. Catterson had been reading the riot act to his men.

"What if there ain't a word of truth in it? I know it, and you know it, but if these fellows beat us by a big score this afternoon, we'll never hear the last of it. Let's dig in and show 'em some baseball!"

When it came time to choose the pitchers, Catterson picked Thomas, a tall lefthander, with slow, puzzling curves. Ben Daly chose Callahan as the one best bet. The game opened with the Blue Sox keyed up to the breaking strain and the Reds sullen and defiant.

Callahan whipped over a lightning-fast strike on Moles, the first man to face him; a great roar went up from 20,000 rooters, and 18 men settled down to the final contest.

Inning after inning slipped by without a score. Thomas, flapping about in his loose-jointed, ungainly fashion, kept dropping his slow twisters across the plate, and the heavy-hitting Sox flubbed them along the ground or popped them into the air. Hardly a ball was hit to the outfield. Thomas had "something on the ball," and, for that matter, so had Jaggs Callahan, who was pitching for his life and the post-season money thrown in. In the fourth inning, after Hardy had doubled to center, Jaggs fanned two men, retiring the side amid thunders af applause.

The last of the seventh saw the 20,000 on their feet, "pulling for luck." The luck came, but to the wrong team, for Parrish of the Sox slammed a line drive into a lightning double play.

The end of the eighth found players and spectators keyed up to a savage pitch. The Sox were fighting for a pennant and everything which goes with one; the Reds were fighting for their reputations. During the last of the eighth Jaggs abused his team mates like pickpockets.

"What have I got to do for you stiffs?" he growled. "Here I go out and hold these tramps down to three hits for eight innings, and you won't stake me to a single ace! Give me one run and I'll win this game!"

To the end of the eighth inning there had not been an error on either side. Suddenly there came the "break," that strange madness which attacks the best ballplayers at times and spreads like a contagion until the whole team is involved. There was no warning. Jaggs, pitching like a fury, retired two men, and Moles, known as a dangerous man on the bases, dropped a pretty bunt along the third-base line, catching the infielders asleep.

Callahan started the trouble. He should have been satisfied to let Moles reach first base, but when the big pitcher saw that the third baseman was not even moving on the play, he raced forward, scooped the ball, and, almost without looking, hurled it across the diamond.

Moles would have beaten a perfect throw; Callahan threw the ball 10 feet over the first baseman's head, into right field. Moles, rounding the bag like a ghost, scuttled along to second. The Blue Sox right fielder came tearing in, the ball struck the tips of his gloved fingers and bounded out of his hands, falling 10 feet behind him.

Miles, signaled by the coacher on third, crossed second like a rocket, and was almost at third base when the right fielder straightened up and whipped the ball in the general direction of the home plate. He had caught the contagion, and, as the catcher ran back for the wild throw, Moles let out the last link in his stocky little legs, and slid over the plate, just as the catcher whipped the ball savagely to Callahan.

Hardy on the bench found himself repeating:

"We didn't do it! They beat themselves! They beat themselves!"

Catterson was cursing in a whole-hearted fashion.

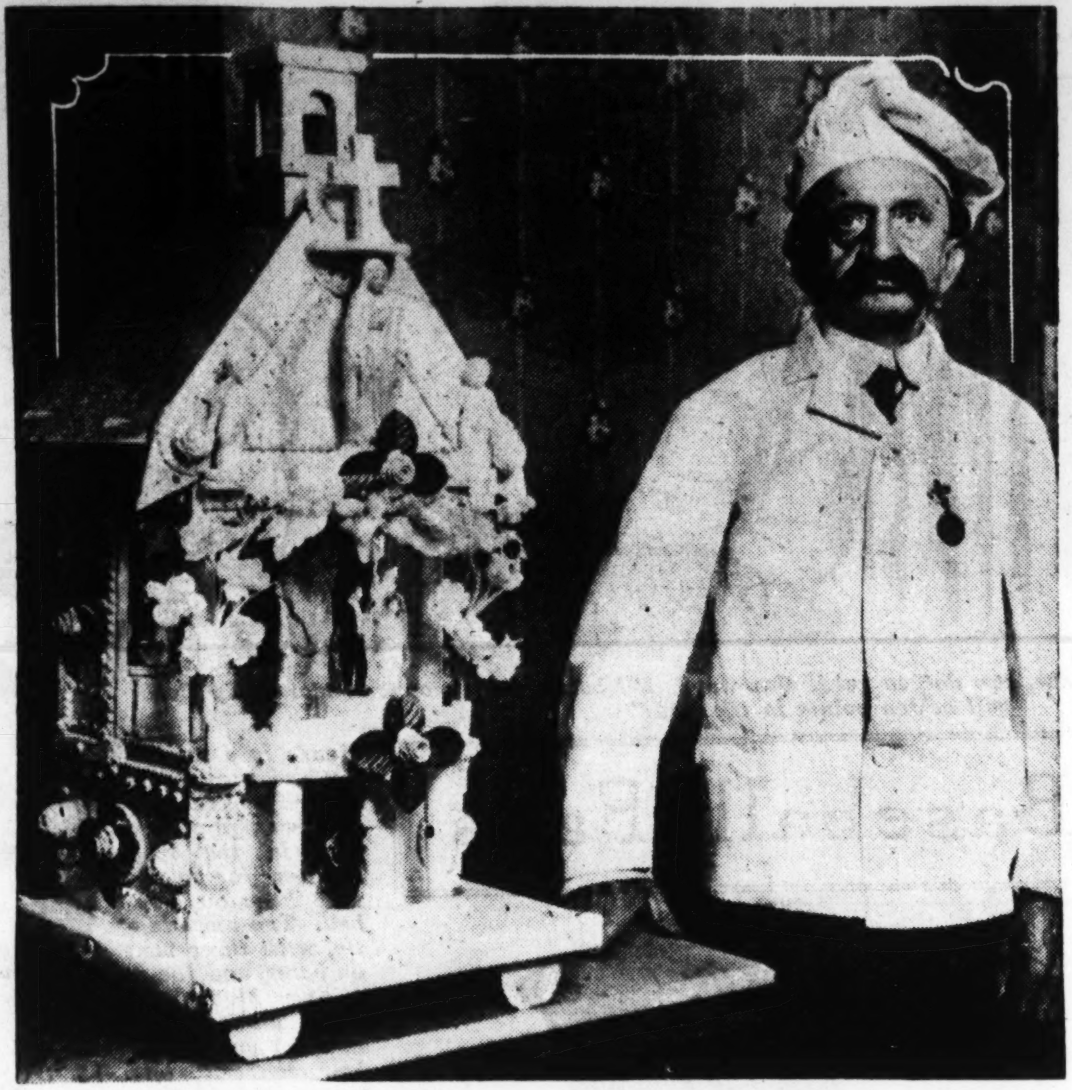
THE RETIRED CHEF WHO HAS BECOME A SCULPTOR IN CANDY

Not an art but a "knack," says George Mulier, once a ship's cook, who spends his spare time modeling churches, castles and towers of candied mixtures—Uses expensive materials and works long hours, but not for commercial rewards—How he built a house of sweets for a chorus girl — Now making a replica of the Roosevelt memorial tower :-: :-: :-:



George Mulier and one of his candy creations.

GEORGE MULIER, or Mueller, as he is perhaps better known by those with whom he has been associated, does not claim to be an artist. In his own estimation he is only a retired chef and pastry cook, who, having sufficient income from his life's savings to supply his limited needs, finds much pleasure in building towers, churches, pagodas and forts out of a sugary substance which hardens rapidly, once it is molded. Daily at his rooms at 1810 Olive street he sits at a marble top table and molds his sticky material, which is a mixture of sugar, whites of eggs, flour and gum tragacanth. The gum imparts the cement-like firmness that holds the structure together and furnishes the durability that insures a measure of permanency, if it is desired, to the finished product.

And while he works he wears the habiliments of his former profession, even to the white cap; and pinned on the left breast of his jacket is the medal given him at the St. Louis World's Fair for his candied replica of the celebrated French fort at Belfort, a citadel of strength that so long defied the most powerful artillery brought up by the German forces in the Franco-Prussian War.

Mulier is a quaint little old man and when he first took up his lodgings at his present home, the other roomers wondered why he stayed indoors most of the time, with his shades drawn and his doors locked. Some of them thought he was a sculptor, while others formed the conclusion that he was an inventor working on something that in time might set the world by the ears; but this speculation did not disturb the retired chef and pastry cook a particle; he just stuck to his molding, and when he had completed a perfect model of a church, with all the altars, crosses, bell and other appurtenances, he opened his doors and asked his neighbors to come and behold. They were pleased with the exhibition and even more so with his promise to show them his reproduction of the Roosevelt memorial tower, which was dedicated July 4, in the Black Hills.

This piece of art in candy he expects to have completed early in September, as the process is necessarily slow, particularly in the reproduction of figures. The tower will be four feet in height and he hopes to get a fairly accurate resemblance to Col. Roosevelt in the candy figure that will be formed to represent him. He has not decided what he will do with his miniature of the memorial when it is finished, but if it comes up to his expectations he may present it to one of the soldier organizations.

Mulier, who was born in Chicago, of Alsatian parents 60 years ago, is very fond of France and speaks the language like a native. He also speaks German quite as well, and is able to take care of himself in other languages and dialects, as he spent many years in his earlier life at sea as a ship cook. Because two of the principal ships on which he served as pastry cook were lost at sea, while he was safely berthed on other vessels, he believes that he was not born to be drowned. Long association with sailors has made him superstitious and his conviction is strong that when it comes his time to die he will not be on the verge of a watery grave. The great liners that went to the bottom while he was detached were the Majestic of the White Star line and the Elbe of the Hamburg-American fleet. According to his story, both were lost at sea just after he had left them to take up other engagements.

Following the sea, however, claimed only part of his time, as he specialized in his profession of making candy decorations for wedding cakes in many places and over a long period. It was the practice and training gathered in this pursuit that led him to go into it on a larger scale, as a pastime.

"Understand," he says, with a decidedly foreign accent, "I do not make these things now for the market or as a means of making money. I have worked hard all my life and I laid away enough money to keep me going on the modest income that comes to me in interest from time to time. I am all alone now, because my two grown sons who enlisted in the United States army at the beginning of the war, are in Germany with the occupation forces. They cannot be mustered out, as they are needed to interpret, and as they speak both French and German, like nearly all the people of Alsatian descent, they find their services very often in demand. One is in Koeln, and the other is assigned to the army at Coblenz, and, of course, I am hoping that when the peace treaty is concluded I will see them again, when we will have a grand reunion. Then I will make something in candy to typify that happy meeting. But, please don't call this an art, as it is nothing of the kind. It is a knack that comes with long practice and much patience.

"I began making houses, castles and churches years ago, just after finishing my apprenticeship as a pastry cook. Then I used only gingerbread, and in Chicago, where I began, they called me the 'gingerbread man.' Later, when we got orders for wedding cakes, I began making smaller decorations, such as cupids, angels and flower work. When I retired from the sea, after many voyages over most of the great oceans and seas, I settled down in New York and found employment in a large confectionery. It was in this place that I received an object lesson that made me take up this special kind of work, which, by the way, had its origin either in Alsace or Bavaria, I am not certain which, hundreds of years ago. It was brought to the highest development in France by decorators who were undoubtedly real artists.

"One day while I was working in this shop a theatrical man who had an abundance of means came in and offered a large sum for a reproduction of a Chinese pagoda that would be large enough to hold a young woman dancer who was then quite the rage in that city. The work was to be delivered in 10 days and it was stipulated that it be made of candied materials. The proprietor shook his head and said he had no workmen who could undertake such a task. Now it happened that before going to New York I had served on a large German vessel that had been pressed into service to deliver to the Chinese Government two naval vssels which had just been built in Stettin. When we turned these war vessels over to China we had plenty of time for shore leave, and I spent mine studying the pagodas and other quaint buildings there.

"I volunteered to undertake the job, which was delivered within the required time, and it proved the big surprise at a theatrical wedding. After the couple were married, the cord attached to the covering, which concealed the pagoda, resting on a table with the wedding cake and presents, was pulled and there stood the dancer in the candy building, ready for her part in the entertainment, which consisted of a dance and a recitation suitable to the occasion. Very soon the pagoda, which cost at least a thousand dollars, was carried off in a rubbish cart, as it had served its purpose. And just think, I worked on that reproduction for seven days and nights.

"During the World's Fair in St. Louis I had a position with one of the concessionaires and made many decorations for cakes and special purposes. One of these was a perfect reproduction of the great French fort at Belfort, which earned me the medal. That piece was placed with a candy exhibit in the French building. Then I made other set pieces, one of which was a miniature of King Ludwig's second great schloss, and this included a figure of that Bavarian monarch. One of the last orders I made for pay was in Oklahoma City, where a club commissioned me to make a miniature of the railroad station there, with a train in position and passengers leaving the coaches. Now I have done my share of work and hereafter I will make these things just for pastime, as we must keep employed in some way, since idleness is not good for anyone.

"I find it a real pleasure to get my plan laid out and then start with the base. I take the best sugar, whites of perfectly fresh eggs, a little flour and the gum tragacanth, which sets the composition with the same solidity that we get from cement. It is a vegetable mixture, which comes from a tree grown in the mountains of Asia Minor, and it is well adapted for this kind of work. The candy mixture is molded just like clay and can be worked with the fingers into any shape desired. I find it much easier to put up churches, altars and belfries than I do shaping the

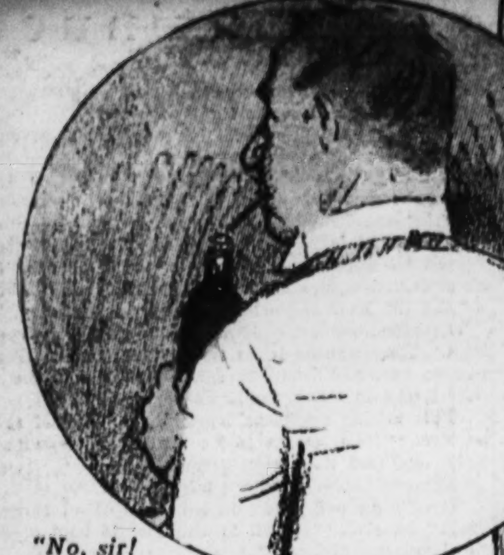
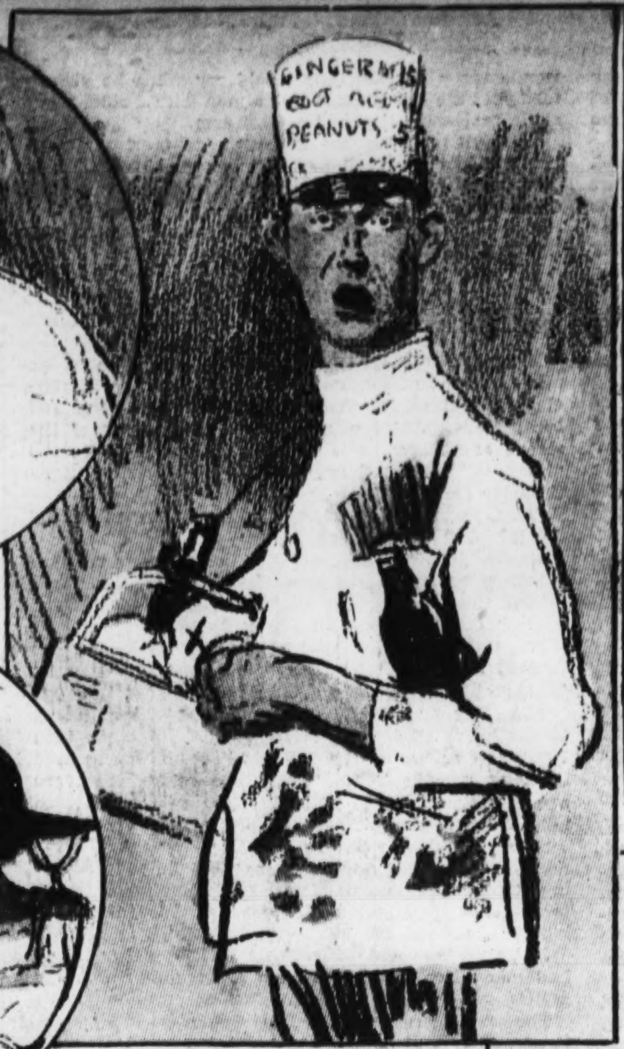
Sunday Baseball Fans

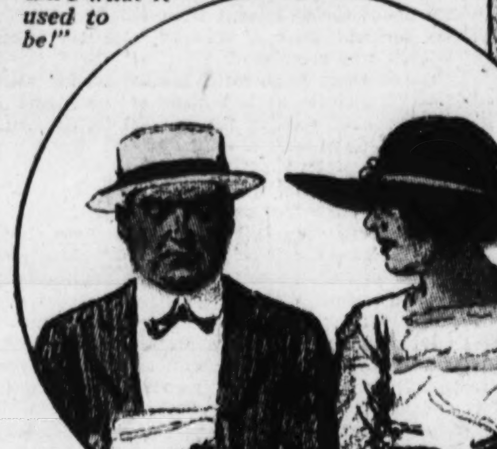
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



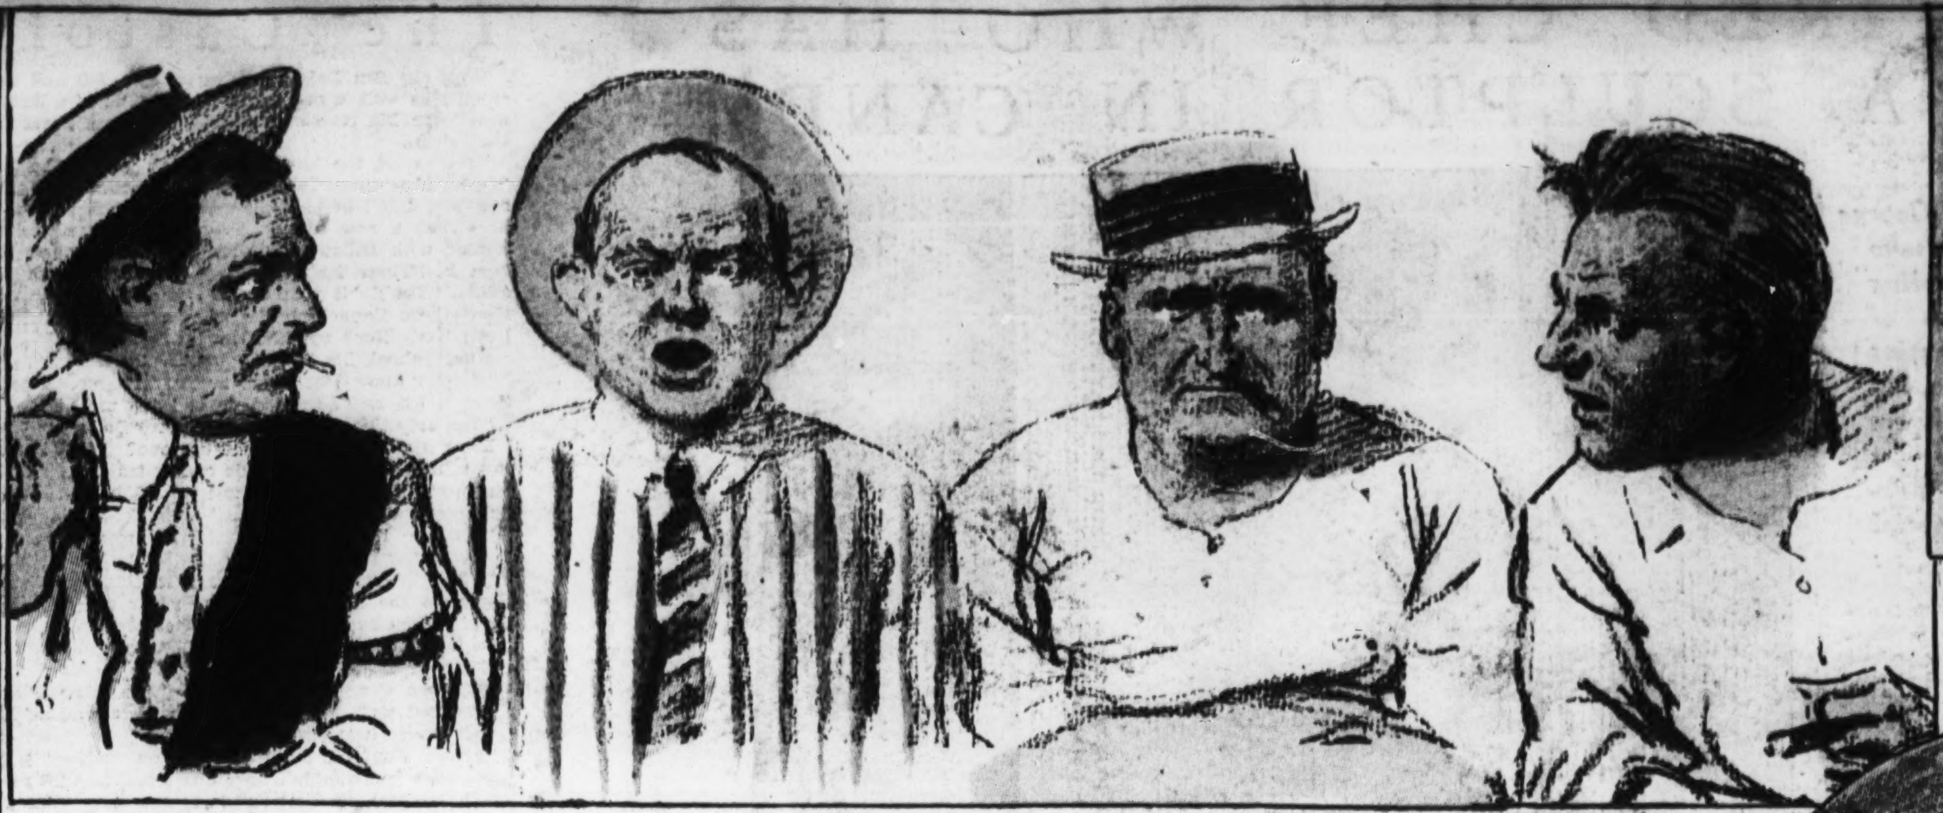
"No, sir! Baseball ain't what it used to be!"



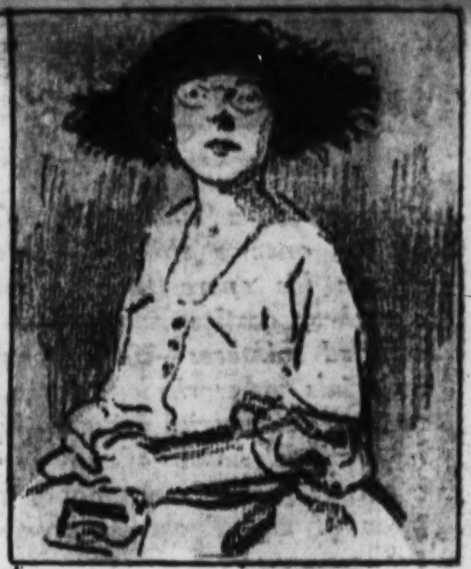
"Peanits, c'gars 'n' cig-rettes!" Willis is getting ready to toss a bag of peanuts to the man who wants a package of cigarettes.



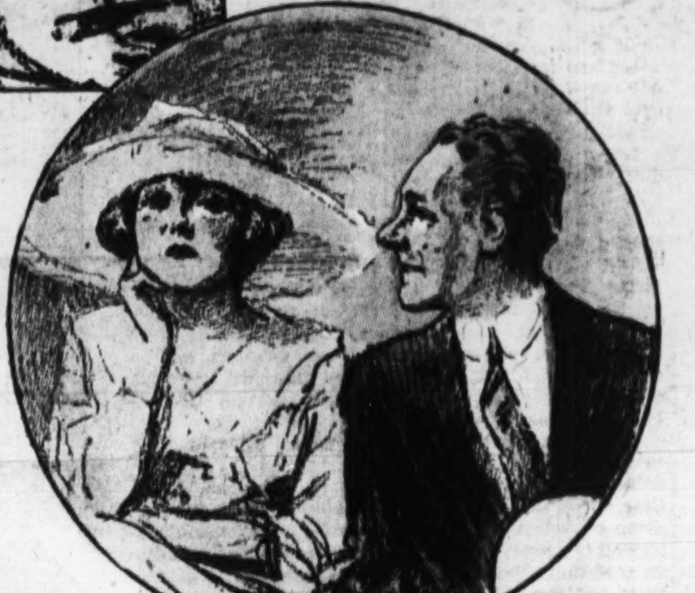
"Listen, Arthur; is that where the clubber usually stands to hit the ball? It looks to me as if he was at the wrong station!" Keeping a score card while the little girl rattles on.



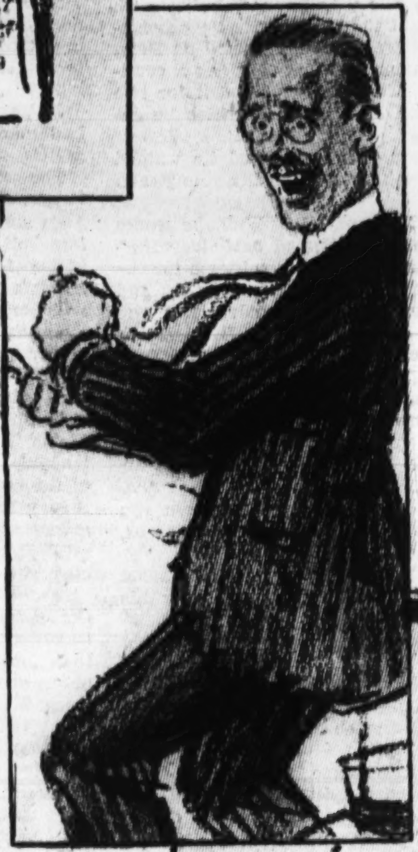
A hot afternoon in the bleachers. "Aw, how do you get it that way? I'll betcha any amount of money Ty Cobb will be ten points in the lead!"



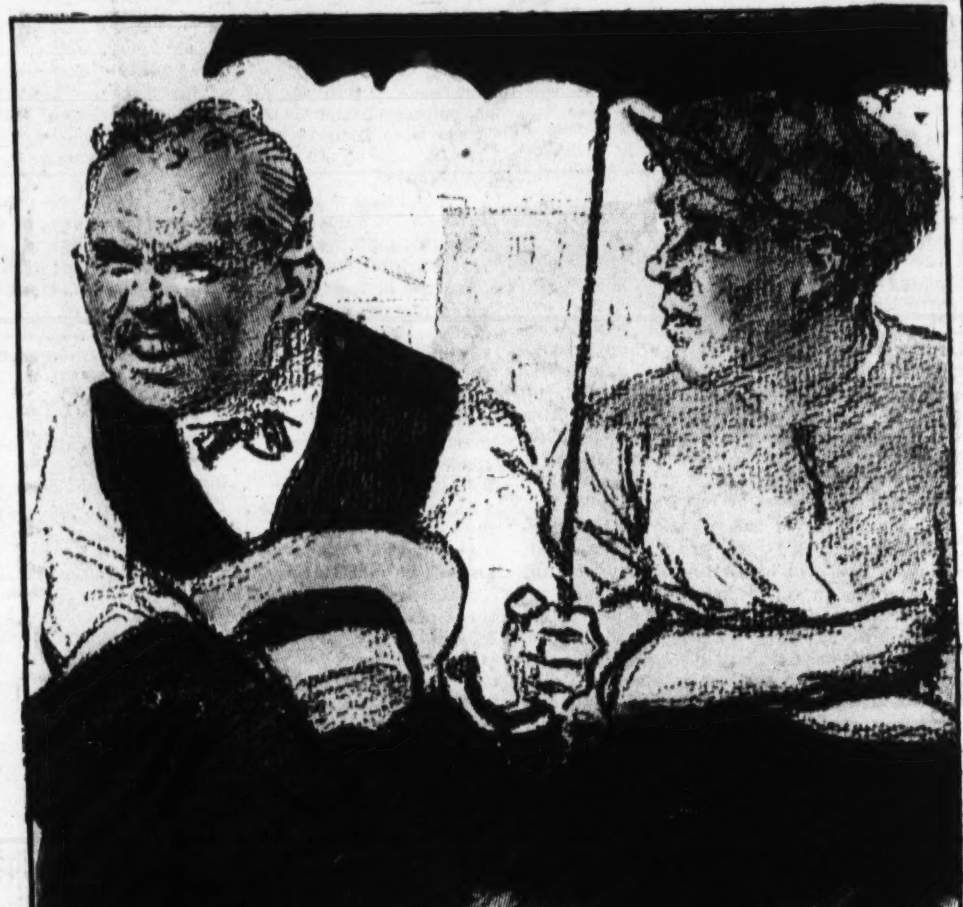
"I don't care whether it's the Chicago Athletics or the St. Louis Cubs, or who, I always feel so sorry for the losing team!"



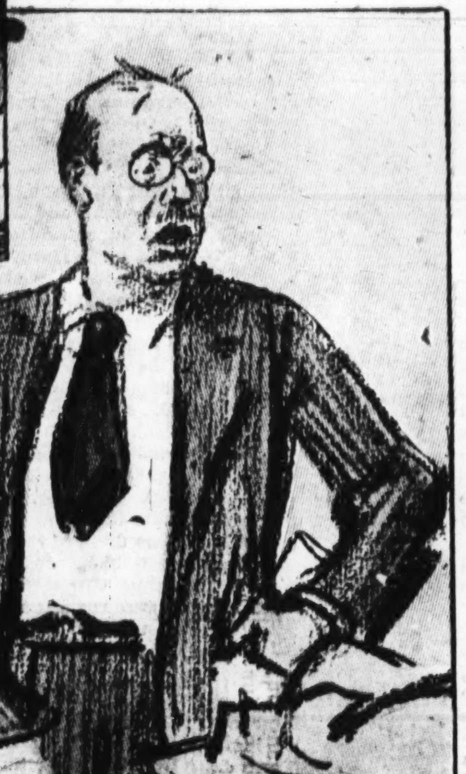
Maude is a regular fan and can probably tell you the batting average of any man in the big leagues. Joe is not very keen on baseball. The score is a tie, with three men on bases, and Joe is telling Maude all about his sunburn, how he got it and how it feels, and wants Maude to look how his nose is peeling.



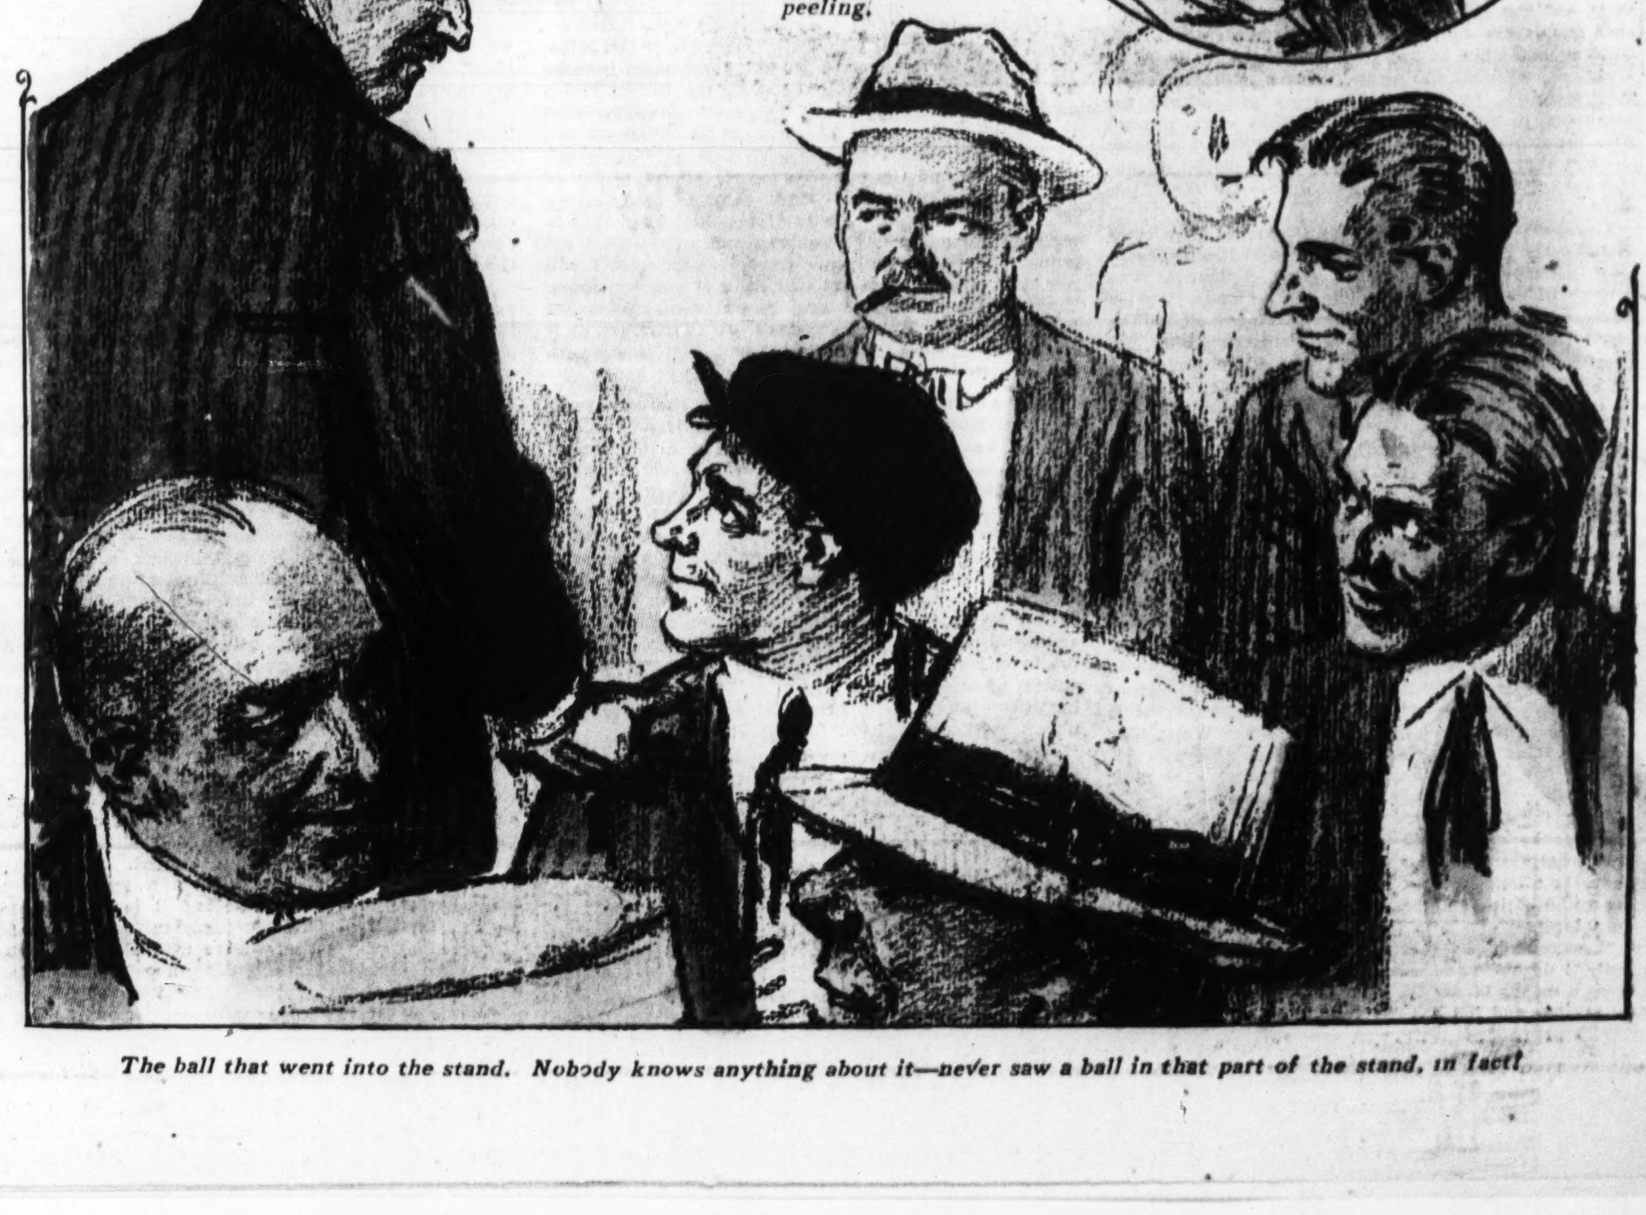
"Safe!"



You can tell it must be a very interesting game for Dr. Hassett, up near the top of the bleachers, to be holding the sun umbrella over Eddie, the newsboy.



"Well, what do you know about that!" Mr. Spiers would like to have a little talk with the umpire.



The ball that went into the stand. Nobody knows anything about it—never saw a ball in that part of the stand, in fact!

This photograph was taken by the Crewe Spiritual Circle under the mediumship of Mr Hope & Mrs Buxton. The plate was bought by me in Manchester. On reaching Mr Hope's studio room in Crewe I opened the packet in the dark room and put the plate into the Carrier. I had already carefully examined the Camera & lens. I was photographed, the two mediums holding their hands over the Cap of the Camera. I then took the carrier into the dark room, took out the plate, developed, fixed & washed it, and then, before leaving the dark room, saw the extra head upon the plate. No hands but mine ever touched the plate.

On examining with a powerful lens the face of the 'extra' I have found such a [illegible] being as is produced in newspaper process work. It is very possible that the whole picture, which has a general but not very exact resemblance to my son, was conveyed onto the plating from some existing picture. However that may be it was most certainly ~~above~~ super-normal and not due to any manipulation or fraud.

The Best Way to use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless Rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. Show this notice to your dealer and if he refuses to get you a package you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th St., New York.

The Rouge Is Inside the Puff. The Dainty Metal Box Cannot Break.
